THE MONEY MARKET MYSTERY.

The cat is out of the bag regarding another spasm in the security and money markets. The topic is serious enough, and yet there is an irresistible temptation to discuss it with decorous levity, the facts are so different from the theories and the misinformation was so complete in the best-informed quarters. The conservative critics were sure that the falling stock market reflected a proper correction to an ill-judged speculation. Some went so far as to deduce the existence and culmination of real estate and commodity speculations as the real and true cause of the monetary stringency. In The North American Review no less an authority than the President of the Chase National Bank doubted whether such incidents had anything to do with our currency system, and inclined to the opinion that lack of capital, not lack of currency, was the root of the trouble.

Well we know now, and we know that the Treasury's absorption of cash was the cause of the loss of bank reserves, which necessitated the liquidation of loans. Not only did tax money, internal revenue, and customs flood the Treasury, but by a purely fortuitous happening 250 banks whose charters had expired were under legal compulsion to deposit in February some $7,000,000 of lawful money to redeem their notes. If the notes could have been redeemed by certified checks or by bond security of undoubted worth, there would have been no spasm. But nothing was lawfully acceptable by the Treasury except bank reserves, and when reserves are reduced thus suddenly and considerably a money market spasm is caused without reference to any other factors. It does not certainly appear whether or not the speculative situation in any of the markets was overstrained or is relieved. The only sure thing is that the speculation regarding where the money went to is over at the expense of those who had explained the situation upon theories differing from the facts, which were not known nor knowable.

Secretary Shaw, of course, is justified in disbursing as bank deposits the funds which the Treasury had absorbed. If the Treasury had been paying out so liberally that the absorption had been corrected by the excess of expenditures over receipts the case for making such deposits would have been less clear. But income is now exceeding outgo, independently of this bank note retirement item, and it is only giving the money market fair play to restore what is taken from it. The incident emphasizes the objectionable and intimate connection between the Treasury and the money market, and illustrates one of the many cases in which the Treasury acts as a National bank, despite the theory that we have no National bank, and although the Treasury is not equipped with the organization or lawful functions for acting advantageously as a bank.

Mr. Hepburn's article was written with especial reference to the 125 per cent. money market of the New Year season. He reckons that the country's supply of currency has increased in five years by 85 per cent., and we agree that this is probably adequate. Mr. Hepburn proceeds to argue that the money market stringency was rather due to absorption of capital and lack of capital than to need of more currency, and he supports his position by citing the failure of interior money markets to rise above 6 per cent. His conclusion is that the German system of emergency currency is the indicated remedy. It is so in a sense, for a liberal supply of currency would release "lawful money" from preoccupation as currency for duty as reserves. The German system is not necessary for this purpose. A mere authorization that National banks might use National banknotes as reserves would suffice. But the law's prohibition of the use of banknotes, which are not money, as bank reserves is wise, and a supply of currency is an illogical remedy for lack of capital.

Our own diagnosis is that there is a greater lack of credit than of either currency or of capital. The lack of credit is artificial, being caused not by lack of confidence or of value, but by lack of reserve money. This lack exists because we are banking upon bonds instead of upon gold. This subject is too hackneyed for detailed elaboration. It is apparent how the cheapness and dearness of bonds, and their alternate scarcity and superabundance, unfit them as a basis of credit. The supply of gold is unlimited, its value is as nearly stable as anything known to man, and, being perfectly fluid, scarcity and redundancy are merely relative, and can be corrected by banking expedients at will. But there are powerful interests intrenched against simplifying and rectifying our system, and we must endure as best we may spasms which only insiders, and not many of them, can explain or even understand until afterward. And afterward is too late for some of the sufferers.

THE VOTE AT ALGECIRAS.

Austria, the weakest of the so-called great Powers of Europe, is the only one to join Germany in opposing the proposition of Great Britain to take up the police question in the Algeciras conference. That, with the vote of Morocco in the same sense, is extremely significant. Austria is not only weak because of the grave internal dissensions recently arisen in her relations with Hungary, but still more because of the known purpose of Hungary to refuse to be dragged into any international difficulty in connection with the Moroccan trouble.

The co-operation of the representatives of Morocco with Germany in the present instance is peculiarly disagreeable, not to say menacing. It is plain enough why the Sultan does not wish to take up the question of police in his dominions. He does not really wish in any circumstances that the preservation or establishment of order there shall be placed in the hands of France and Spain, as proposed by France, because he does not wish to part in the slightest degree with his own control of that matter, such as it is. Nor indeed does he wish order at all in the meaning that civilized nations attach to that word. With this disposition on his part, it is unfortunate, and it is of sinister meaning, that he should be found side by side with Germany. It would perhaps be too much to say that the desires of Germany are the same as those of this African chief, but for the time being that is near enough to the truth to array him and the Germans on the same side of the police question.

The motion of the British representative amounts, at this time, to a demand that the conference should take up the matter of most importance as to which Germany and France have been negotiating apart and have failed to agree upon, in short, that the conference should proceed openly and in full deliberation to reach a conclusion which in effect will be a decision on appeal between the two Powers. Undoubtedly the action of Great Britain is taken in accord with, if not at the request of, France. France has a right to feel aggrieved that such an appeal is necessary. She had every reason to think, from the attitude of Germany in the negotiations preceding the conference for the purpose of determining a programme, that Germany would not resist her plea for an international mandate to secure proper reforms of the police in Morocco. On the 9th of July last, at the time that the arrangements for the conference were drawing to completion, M. Rouvier, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, wrote to the Ambassador of France at Berlin as follows:

> On several occasions, and particularly the 1st and 8th of this month, I said to Prince Radolin, without any intimation from him of the least difficulty, that we counted on his Government to make no objection to our views upon the international mandate we shall ask the conference to confide to us concerning military, or, more precisely, police, reforms.

Prince Radolin is the German Ambassador at Paris. This statement of the disposition of his Government, as indicated by his course, it will be noted, was made on the morrow of the latest interview between him and the French Minister of Foreign Affairs. It is a perfectly fair inference that France was led to enter on the conference by the attitude thus indicated by Germany. If now it should turn out that Germany, in contradiction to the just expectations of France, should persist in opposing the views of France, and if on the final vote, Germany should again be sustained only by Austria and by Morocco, the conference must fail, and fail under conditions imposing grave responsibilities if not grave risks upon Germany. Apparently Great Britain and France have determined to bring the question to an issue; to ask for a final decision by the conference, and on the first test vote, Germany is practically isolated. That is not a pleasant situation for the Kaiser, nor is it a safe one. The world will watch with intense interest the next steps he may take.

A DISCREDITABLE VOTE.

The vote by which the bill to moderate the taxes on Philippine trade was slaughtered in the Senate Committee is extremely discreditable. It would be harsh, but it would not be very unfair, to call it disgraceful. Eight of the thirteen members of the committee voting voted to kill the bill outright. Five of them were Republicans: Hale, (Me.;) Burrows, (Mich.;) Brandegee, (Conn.;) Dick, (Ohio,) and Nixon, (Nev.) Three were Democrats: Dubois, (Idaho;) Stone, (Mo.,) and Culberson, (Texas.) On the other hand, only three Republicans voted for the bill: Lodge, (Mass.;) Long, (Kan.,) and Beveridge, (Ind.,) and two Democrats, McCreary, (Ky.,) and Carmack, (Tenn.) It will be seen that the majority of the members of each party on the committee voted to kill it.

Our readers are familiar with the bill. It simply reduces all taxes on Philippine trade to those on tobacco and sugar, and reduces these to 25 per cent. of the present rates. Its purpose is, and its effect would be, to help the islands support themselves and to advance the people on the road to that reasonable prosperity which alone can be relied on to secure order and tranquillity in the new possessions. It was of the very essence of justice and common sense that these people over whom we claim sovereignty, and whom we hold to the obligations of allegiance, should have free access to our markets for their products. So simple and fundamental a demand of equality we could not refuse except in a spirit of the most detestable tyranny. It is tyrannical because it is arbitrary, vexatious, oppressive. It is exactly what our forefathers complained of in the policy of the mother country and took arms to resist. It is stupid, because it tends to arouse a spirit of just resentment in the people of the Philippines. And it is grossly selfish, for it is well known that the opposition to the bill springs mainly from interests which, though rich and powerful and prosperous, fear the competition of Philippine sugar and tobacco. We have followed the debate on this question with much attention, and we have seen, literally, not one respectable argument against the bill, not one argument that was not frankly based on cupidity and on contempt for the rights of others.

We shall not believe, until we are forced to, that the adverse action of the Senate Committee is final. The sentiment of the country is fairly reflected in the enormous vote for the bill in the House, where the majority for it was 187, and that sentiment will in the long run prevail even over the stubbornness of the United States Senate. For the moment there is no doubt that the opposition to the bill is in part due to ill-feeling toward the President, who has advocated the bill with the utmost earnestness. Such mingling of motives is to the last degree foolish and childish, it is unworthy of boys in the upper grades of a grammar school, and when the silly passions aroused by the quarrel with the President have had time to cool we shall expect to see decency resume its sway and the bill to pass.

NEW YORK'S BRANCH BANKS.

Supt. Kilburn's remarks regarding branch banking resemble the theory of branch banking—the bearing of them lies in their application. If the Superintendent had in mind the case in which one bank has twenty branches more or less, and pays taxes only in the single case of the parent institution, they may be said to be justified. If the Superintendent meant to condemn the practice of branch banking without adequate notice to all concerned, again he is right. There are cases in which the legal notices published by the banks fail to inform the unwary of the brood whose business is lumped as though it were an undivided unit, although it is in fact highly subdivided.

On the other hand, remarks well warranted in these and other respects are open to criticism if directed against the principle of branch banking. The theory of our National system is opposed to the practice. Hence we have some thousands of National banks which are National only in name, and whose occasional embarrassments frighten foreigners as they do not those better informed regarding our system. The great virtue of this system is that it has given us a currency which is truly National. The great defect of the system is that it has not given us a rate of interest which is as National as the currency. The ideal is not impracticable. Wherever the Bank of France has a branch money may be borrowed at the Paris rate. It is an empty aspiration that we might have money as cheap throughout the United States as it is in New York, and as steady as it is throughout France, where the rate does not change for years together.

But it is not impracticable to have a New York State rate for money, and that the rate of New York City. A branch bank system would promote this, but the law forbids it. City banks may have branches only in the city, where they are least necessary. Our rural friends mistrust a suggestion of branches throughout the State, fearing lest the country should be drained for the benefit of the city. This might happen if bankers should take to loaning their funds in the lowest market. Being like other merchants, they would sell in the dear market whenever they could, and the city would be drained for the benefit of the country. A better way of stating it would be that city and country would mutually assist each other's needs, to the advantage of both. A good branch bank system would be a good thing, but Supt. Kilburn is right in remarking—though not in such words—that we have the defects but not the advantages of such a system.

THE KINGS REGISTER'S OFFICE.

There is plainly something wrong in the Register's office of Kings County, and the committee of the Brooklyn League thinks that it is mainly the fault of the law, which the League is trying to amend.

The work of the office is now at least a year behind, and the chances are, if the Register is not relieved by the new law, it will run behind a year and a half—which is intolerable. The business of the office is much larger than that of the Register's office in New York; last year there were 100,865 papers recorded in Kings County to only 89,622 in the County of New York, and the estimate of work for the current year is at least 135,000 papers. But the appropriation for Kings this year is $107,820, as against $193,000 for New York. On the basis of the proportion of work done, Kings would seem to be entitled to more money, not less, than New York.

The bill pending in the Legislature in substance permits the employment of extra copyists and for some increase of salaries. The extra men are to be taken from the competitive civil service lists, and are to be dropped when the work is done. It is stated also that all the increased salaries go to employés under the civil service rules, so that there is no "politics" in the change. At the same time a resolution is pending in the Board of Aldermen to permit the use of typewriting machines for copying, which, it is expected, will reduce the time needed by one-third and make a saving in expense. The latter improvement is imperative. It is absurd that the public work should be done by antiquated and expensive methods long since discarded in private business.

The real estate interests of Kings County are already very extensive, and are bound to become more and more so in the immediate future. There are large tracts of land almost wholly unoccupied, and others but sparsely built on or covered with buildings that must be replaced with the march of improvement. Much of this land will be brought within the range of the new transit lines, and other lines are sure to be constructed in the near future. It is now a perfectly well-recognized principle of public policy that trade in real estate should be made as easy, as inexpensive, as unhampered by restrictions of any sort as possible. Nothing should interfere with its freedom and facility that is not needed to insure accuracy and trustworthiness of title. The condition of the Register's office in Kings County is a distinct and outrageous violation of this principle. It imposes a heavy tax on a vast and important business without a cent's advantage to the public treasury. Any private business conducted on the same lines would swiftly bring the parties in interest to failure, and the man who stuck to such methods would be regarded by sensible competitors as an idiot. It is high time the office were reformed. The Gardner bill will in part, at least, reform it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

New Dangers for Missionaries. About as queer, and perhaps as significant, as any of the reports sifting across the Pacific from China in such large numbers just now is the one which has it that even the native converts to Christianity are moving for the establishment of an independent church of their own and the expulsion of all the foreign missionaries. It is said that a Chinese Presbyterian from San Francisco is at the head of this interesting scheme, and that he has already secured a fund of $100,000 with which to "promote" it. Of course, as this is a story from Shanghai, where there is probably more, and more mendacious, imagination than in any other news centre on earth, it need not be received with instant and complete credulity, but there well may be something in it, even if the something is not exactly the announced object. The Chinese are an extremely practical people, and many of them besides the sincere converts—who according to certain unkind rumors are not as the sands of the sea for numbers—must have seen and appreciated the material advantages which, in addition to those spiritual, accrue to natives who abandon the ancient gods and the philosophy of Confucius. They have seen, too, that though the foreign missionaries have had to face constant dangers and not infrequently to succumb to murderous violence, on the whole they have lived very comfortable lives, with better houses and more servants than the majority of them would have been able to secure at home. Naturally enough, with the general feeling throughout the more enlightened parts of the empire that the good things of China should be for the Chinese, it would occur to shrewd reformers there that the native converts could get along without foreign teachers and leaders and that they might join in the popular cry for complete independence. What the mission boards will think of this proposed change remains to be seen. If carried through it would very seriously interfere with the workings of a carefully constructed system. After a while it might lead to the reduction of some salaries and the abolition of others that have long been earned without going into heathen lands, and that is always decidedly unpleasant. If the experiment of an independent Chinese church were tried, however, it would be highly interesting to all unprejudiced observers, and it would supply the best possible means for ascertaining just what the missionaries have accomplished in that country by their long labors and many martyrdoms.

Education and Its Limits. So long and so fully have we all believed in the efficiency of education in making a fairly good citizen out of almost anybody upon whom it was bestowed that it is most disquieting to notice that a good many apparently careful and competent observers seem to have reached, or to be reaching, the conclusion that there are people, and not a few of them, right here in the United States, for whom education, in [illegible] usual, common-school sense of the [illegible], is a disadvantage, and not an advantage. "It is now known," coolly says American Medicine, for instance, "that every brain has a limit beyond which it cannot be educated—a law as applicable to types of men as to types of dogs. Children, naturally, drop out of school at certain grades, and those who are continued beyond their proper limit are merely injured thereby. Many a splendid mechanic has thus been educated into a poor preacher who half starves the rest of his life. It is now even hinted that many of our new types of immigrants are mere hewers of wood and drawers of water, as their ancestors have been from time immemorial, and that any education merely unfits them for the battle of life. If all these surmises are true, they are bound to shake the very foundation of our present order of things." They are, indeed, for we have confidently looked upon the public schools as assimilating machines that failed in instances too few to be worth counting, and we have held that the child deprived by circumstances of the privilege of passing through all the grades was necessarily deserving of pity. Are we now to establish some new standards of measurement, by the application of which we can decide, not how much education we can afford to give all children, but how far it is safe to carry the children of this, that, and the other origin? The question does not yet seem to be a very pressing one, and there is the best of scientific authority for increasing our trust in environment and decreasing our fear of heredity. It would be extremely hard to prove that education ever hurt anybody whatever, or that the poor preacher would have made a good mechanic.

Reform from Inside. Again we are moved to dubiety, if not to anxious wonder, by a ruling of Attorney General Mayer. He denies an application that action be instituted to compel the officers of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to render an accounting of their trust. In explanation of the denial he says that the officers in question are busily engaged in reforming the abuses and evils that have been brought to their attention, and he quotes with truly touching confidence a member of the Board of Managers as informing him that all the questions raised will be solved, and any reforms found necessary or desirable will be instituted from within the society. The announcement of the Attorney General will be received with fervent approval—by President Haines, his close friends, and the subordinates whose retention of place depends upon his good-will. We cannot at the moment recall the name of anybody else who will like it or who will regard it as anything else than an arbitrary shutting off of much-needed investigation. The "reforms found necessary or desirable" by the present administrators of the society's funds and powers are not very likely to be co-extensive with the reforms demanded by the people who only by the most desperate efforts were able to make those administrators admit the slightest responsibility to others than themselves. The officials now in control of the society think that an investigation would hurt it; let them wait a few months and see what their success in preventing investigation will do.

"FRILLS AND FADS."

Criticism of the Conclusion Reached by Superintendent Maxwell.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the extract from his annual report published in The Times, City Superintendent Maxwell says the "frills and fads" were sustained by "a popular vote of the people," (fine English!) When and where was this popular vote taken? A popular vote in the Bronx last year showed the reverse. The report says the "fads" are supported by the National Education Association. Is this the same that voted day before yesterday to spell business bizness, enough enuf, tongue tung, &c.?

The report calls advocates of sensible tuition "opponents of modern educational methods," whereas these methods are very ancient—several centuries behind the times; modeled after Rousseau, Pestalozzi, Froebel, et al. It alludes to the present "rich" courses of study. In the amount of the taxpayers' money invested they are indeed "rich"; in educational value they are poverty itself. It says, "The barren instruction of sixty years ago was limited to the so-called 'three R's.'" This is a common error of the sciolists, as Mr. Maxwell will discover by reading the reports of his predecessors for the last half century.

The report quotes a test to show that pupils spell better to-day than formerly. Will Mr. Maxwell please explain why he refused to make public the test in spelling which he made a year or two ago? A Principal told the writer that if it was the same in the other schools as in his, Mr. Maxwell had good reason to suppress it.

And finally, farms are advocated around the city schools. Well, "the man with the hoe" will be the logical development of the boy taught to weave, make baskets, and fancy stitches, doll umbrellas, knouts, and chains with cord. These accomplishments of the semi-civilized, say the sciolists, develop the creative and inventive faculties of children—the proof of which logic we see in the untutored savage races. Sooner or later this educational humbuggery will fall of its own weakness. ALBERT E. DAVIS.

The Famine in Japan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What is the extent of the famine in Japan? Are the people perishing in large numbers for the want of food, and is the Government unable to care for them? Has assistance been asked of this country, and what, if any, organized effort has been made to that end? Kindly answer in your paper. A READER.

It is unfortunately true that large numbers of the people of Northern Japan are perishing, or in danger of perishing, as the result of the famine there. The Government of Japan is sending aid to these suffering people, and has not requested any help from foreign countries. Nevertheless, it is known that such aid, if voluntarily offered, would be welcomed. The Christian Herald of this city, through the Red Cross, has already sent $20,000 to Japan to aid the victims of the famine, and, according to the latest statement, about $5,000 had been contributed from other sources in response to the appeal made by President Roosevelt. A report from Mr. Miller, the American Consul General at Yokohama, says: "Three of the northern provinces of Japan, namely, Miyagi, Fukushima, and Iwate, with a population of 2,821,557, are confronting a famine, the worst since the disastrous one of 1840. From authentic reports received from the committee chosen by the foreign community of Sendai to investigate the subject, it is stated: 'In a population of 899,279 at least 280,000 are in extreme distress with no possibility of saving life without aid.' Official statements published by the Government reveal in part the terrible condition of the people in these provinces and the suffering they must endure, not only through the Winter, but also through the Spring months before new crops are harvested. Thousands of people are living on roots and leaves of trees mixed with small quantities of rice or flour. Many are grinding acorns, and after extracting the bitterness of the nut are using the flour for food."

Twins Make Trouble.

From the Washington Star.

Joseph W. Maxwell, attorney for the Herbert Sheerer estate, is about to file a puzzling petition in County Judge McCall's court at Denver. Sheerer, upon being told he was fatally ill, made provision for a child he expected to be born. Sheerer died, and instead of one child there were twins. The will provided that the child, if a boy, should have two-thirds of the estate and the widow one-third; if a girl, the child to have one-third and the widow two-thirds. What share will the twins—one a boy and the other a girl—have is the question Attorney Maxwell wants to ask Judge McCall.

MUNICIPAL COURT JUDGES.

A Good Word for Men Who Have Trying Work and Do It Well.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have had more or less business with every one of the municipal courts during the past three years, have tried a large number of cases therein with results pro and con, and I want to say that with "few exceptions" the Justices of these courts are entitled to commendation, as well for their administrative as for their judicial qualifications. In this court more than in any other the presiding Judge is called upon for the exercise of patience, combined with firmness, and the tact requisite for the dispatch of the large amount of business daily presented. Go into any one of these courts at 9 o'clock of a morning and see the surge and the crush of all types of humanity, every man and woman having or defending an alleged grievance. It is simply a mob, and requires all the cool-headedness of the Judge to expeditiously and properly dispose of the work. Granted that they may appear at times to be arbitrary in their manner, it must be borne in mind that the atmosphere and conditions are not those of a religious service.

As to the disposition of business and the decision of cases submitted, although often the most abstruse questions of law are presented to be passed upon on the instant, nevertheless I think the proportion of affirmances in the Appellate Term will compare favorably with those in the Appellate Division from the Trial Terms of the Supreme Court. I am quite well aware that there are "exceptions." Some of these Judges—one, two, maybe three—and a like number of the clerks are disposed to treat litigants and counsel as mere cattle, and give out any information as one would cast a bone to a dog.

While on this subject will you allow me further space to make a few tentative suggestions respecting these "People's" courts. First, the system of rotation of the Judges is excellent and has worked well. No man, be he Judge or janitor, is above being influenced more or less by the leaders or bosses of his district, without whose aid such place cannot be obtained, and for this reason Judges should be relieved from such influence, and the Judges themselves should desire this.

Second, there should be more uniformity in the practice of these courts. In most of the districts the day calendar is posted up for the information of counsel. In some of the districts they cannot get this information. Why could not these calendars be hung up the afternoon of the day before in each clerk's office. Again, in calling the calendar it seems to me that the adjourned causes should first be called, so that parties attending with witnesses ready for trial might speedily be advised whether their cases were to be tried or go over. Next, the "return" cases and motions, so that attorneys, alone interested, might go hence and attend to other business. After this the long array of "landlord and tenant" cases, where the usual determination is "pay your rent or get out."

But there is another and more fundamental suggestion that I would make respecting these courts. Why should they be scattered all over the city? The ancient theory was that they were local courts, with jurisdiction of parties confined to their own districts. It was suited to the convenience of litigants in petty litigations. But now the jurisdiction is increased in amount and covers all of Greater New York. There is no special convenience to but one of the parties. See how it works. A defendant living at Coney Island may be summoned to travel to upper Manhattan, if, perchance, the plaintiff lives in the latter locality. Why should there not be a central municipal court building in Manhattan and another in Brooklyn, with the present system of Judges?

LAWMAKING PROBLEM.

What the Country Needs Is Not New Laws, but Enforcement of Old.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The lawmaking problem of this country has become a very serious matter. More than 20,000 State and Federal laws and amendments thereto are put upon the statute books yearly, and they with the hundreds of thousands already enacted make a mass that can be but poorly digested and only furnish a hole for the mighty to struggle through. Millions of the people's money are spent annually for legislation that adds to the confusion. Most laws derive their being from the want of an individual or a corporation and are passed by a system of trading between legislators.

What this country needs, and needs badly, is not the enactment of more laws, but the enforcement of them. It is the tendency of both the small and the great to go as far as possible in the violation of the law, and the authorities have become so lax that almost every law may be violated with impunity.

In these days laws are not enforced, but the intentions of the founders of the Nation have been turned topsy-turvy. Instead of punishing a criminal for a violation of the law, a new law is passed, and the country is avenged and the average politician satisfied.

A most striking instance of this game is the Rate bill now before the Senate. If the Elkins law was enforced there would be no need of legislative action, and this fact is known to every thinking man in the United States. Should the Rate bill, however, become a law, it will play its part for a time, and then the same old trick will be tried again, and so on ad infinitum. The work of legislators should be confined to the wants of the people as a whole, whether as residents of a State or citizens of the United States.

The issues should be based on the general demand from the people. Legislators should not meet so often, and all contemplated legislation should be submitted to a competent board created for that purpose, that only wise, honest, and needed laws should be enacted. The present useless laws should be repealed, and the good ones codified and strictly enforced. This country in its wonderful productiveness has been able to withstand the corrupt and unbusinesslike methods, but the day will come when, if the present condition is continued, it will mean revolution and ruin, unless we are true to ourselves, compel honesty in others, and enforce proper laws. Mme. Humbert's Occupation.

According to Le Petit Parisien Mme. Humbert, she of the Crawford millions fame, who has been "provisionally" released from jail, is only slightly ill. An operation which was suggested is no longer thought necessary. She is anaemic, and shows no desire to obey the doctor's orders, or in any way to aid her cure. She is allowed considerable liberty; she is in fact, called "the free prisoner," but she does not use her liberty as she might. She has given up writing, and spends her time in talking, knitting, and embroidering. She works sometimes for hours together. If any reference is made to her trial her mood changes. She affirms as strongly as ever that the millions and the Crawfords exist.

AS TO PATENT MEDICINES.

A Physician Discusses the Ethics of Advertising Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The New York Times has all of the signs of forging ahead. This is not a compliment, but a direct result of energy, brain, and judgment. It requires energy and brain to gather news and advertising, but it requires greater exercise of judgment to reject news and advertising which would pay to print. A censorship of advertising and news means successful burning of the candle at both ends without loss of light.

As a daily reader of The New York Times one item of censorship never escapes my eye—the absence of objectionable reading and advertising. To me this is especially commendable, because I am a physician, and it is doubly refreshing to know and read a paper which is clean throughout.

But there is a point which from a physician's standpoint I should like to see opened to outside discussion in your columns. That is, why should not patented medicines be advertised if the State Government, under which the company manufactures patented remedies, recognizes the justice and (we imagine) need of such preparations as it licenses? Possibly a license is not required. I do not know, but surely the Secretary or Attorney of State must have on file copies of formulae of all remedies manufactured in the State.

Many one-sided people, especially physicians, decry patented preparations, but enthusiastically exploit for household remedies proprietary articles, the chief distinction being that patented medicines are sold through advertising in lay media while proprietary preparations limit advertising to the so-called medical journals.

It is doubtful if more vulgar, unfit, and untruthful commercial publicity exists than in the statements published in medical and drug journals. There is probably not a concern of manufacturing chemists placing advertising in the medical papers that does not insist upon gratuitous reading notices which the concern supplies ad infinitum. This I know from a contributor's acquaintance with professional journals.

The patent medicine evil will be controlled by popularizing the knowledge of their ingredients, injurious, or beneficial. Campaigns against manufactures cannot successfully destroy an abuse and are distinct inroads on personal rights.

Patent medicines are not a godsend, but many a mother has relieved the keen distress of pain in our childhood days by knowing how to apply a preparation because the wrapper told a good simple story when the doctor was miles away. On the other hand we all know that we pin our faith to a standard preparation for a cold or colic whether we practice medicine or are practiced upon.

Magic Cure-All of Good Air.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The open-air treatment of pneumonia and kindred diseases has been much talked of recently as a "discovery." Twenty-five years ago my little boy developed an ugly case of diphtheria. The doctor, after a sight of his throat, promptly hustled him out on the piazza, and kept him there—except when it actually stormed—capped and blanketed on a cot, and gazed at by the other children through a window until quick and thorough recovery. One of the family said, "He'll take cold!" To which the doctor impatiently replied, "Why, he is full of one poison now, and there's no room for another." Which just about stated the case.

One might hesitate at such treatment in aged cases—say from seventy onward. And yet, remembering, as most of us can, near and dear old folk whom, in fair health, the deadly grip of pneumonia took only two or three days to kill in warm and sheltered chambers, one can't but think with pain that some such cases might have been reached by the magic cure-all of God's vital air. Can a Surgeon "Operate" Tumor?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Can you spare me a little space to call attention to a matter that bothers me every day? It is all about that little word "operate," which comes into such frequent application of late years. We are operating railroads, electric plants, flying machines, insurance schemes, sawmills, bucket shops, and opium joints. This is all well enough in a grammatical sense, but according to common report the doctors are "operating" men, women, and children of high and low degree, and all kinds of people are having their cataracts, tumors, and bad appendices "operated."

Surely The Times must be cognizant of this example of bad English. It occurs in the secular press every day, and not a few medical writers are guilty. Will The Times not be good enough to point out that the surgeon cannot "operate" a man, nor can he "operate" a cyst, a swollen gland, or a polypus, but if he have the requisite skill he may "operate on" the man for the cyst, swollen gland, or polypus.

New York, March 3, 1906. FUSS-CAT.

The Bronx and the Trolleys.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Of all the shortcomings of the New York street-car system, one of the most irritating is the refusal of the traction company to give transfers between the 138th Street line and the Metropolitan system. This line makes excellent connections with the west side trolleys, and it is exasperating for dwellers in the lower Bronx who take a short trip to West Harlem to be placed in the dilemma of walking out half their journey or paying 10 cents for two or three miles' transportation. The traction company does not charge an additional fare on the elevated road between the two boroughs, and there is no justification for its doing so on the street roads—in fact, still less, for the street roads are used practically exclusively by the "short-haul" travelers. This is a most aggravated annoyance to the public in this section of the city, and it would be the very best policy for the traction company to remedy it.

Give Him All There Is Coming.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A correspondent wants some offender punished, and says the thing to do is to "corral him and put him in a pen." Why not incarcerate him in jail and imprison him? If tautology will do him any good, give him a heap plenty of it.

I hope this will not go entirely over the heads of the residents of your very pleasant city, whose philological infallibility is one of their chiefest sources of pride.

SCIOTO PLAINS.

Columbus, Ohio, March 1.

3,000 Germ Colonies on a Pin's Point.

From The London Daily Telegraph.

Dr. Somerville Hastings, lecturer at the London Institute of Hygiene the other day on "Cleanliness Is Next to Godliness," said that people were much cleaner now than in the reigns of Queen Mary and Elizabeth, when the washing of clothes was unknown. Cotton was hardly in use and linen was expensive. The poor wore rough woolen garments, which were never washed, and the better classes adorned themselves with silks and velvets, which were dyed when they would no longer pass muster in regard to cleanliness. It is recorded, continued Dr. Hastings, that James I. never washed either hands or face during the period he posed as the wisest fool in Christendom, but confined his cleanliness within the narrow limits of wiping his finger-tips upon a damp napkin.

A very simple experiment, made by an eminent bacteriologist, determines in a startling manner the potential dangers associated with accumulations of dust in living rooms. A pin-point was used to convey as much dust as so small a vehicle will carry. This yielded no less than 3,000 colonies of living germs, when cultivated on gelatine, and although, fortunately, every species was not representative of disease, yet the majority were potent sources of decomposition and danger to health.

MARCH 1906

ELEVATION OF CRITICISM WILL BE BRADY'S TASK

He Names Plays That Succeeded Despite Condemnation Here.

HAS LETTERS PRAISING HIM

The Manager Says That the Critic Ought Not to be So Clever as to be Unfair to Everybody.

William A. Brady, theatrical manager, in an interview with a TIMES reporter yesterday, defined his attitude toward dramatic critics as a "determined stand for dignified criticism in this the first and greatest producing centre in the country." Mr. Brady has been on the warpath against what he considers to be other kinds of criticism since his production of Donald McLaren's play "The Redskin."

"Critics," he said yesterday, "are members of a profession which carries with it an enormous amount of responsibility. This responsibility, which is to be true to one's convictions and not to prostitute one's opportunities, is perhaps the easiest in the world to shirk with no more than one person in the wide million being any the wiser.

"But I am sorry to say that while there are in New York critics whom in spite of their adverse and sometimes disheartening criticism we managers are bound to respect, there are others who have shirked the responsibility reposed in them by their newspaper employers, who in turn are answerable to the people, their readers.

Unfair, Says Mr. Brady.

"Although this movement for more dignified criticism which I have started and mean to fight to a finish arises out of the undignified treatment accorded the production of 'The Redskin,' I wish it to be distinctly understood before I utter another word that my fight is not to defend that play or any other single faulty play. My object is to protest against that kind of cleverness in dramatic criticism which is so absorbed in its own brilliance that in treating of the efforts of others the result is unfair to the author, unfair to the actor, unfair to the producer, and unfair to the public, whose only channel of information leading to the choice of an evening's entertaiment is the newspapers.

"If you make inquiries you will find that this 'kick' has always been spelled 'Brady.' I am proud of that. You may ask why I make it now from under the proscenium. It is simply that I can stand it no longer. I'm going to see if I can't raise the standard of dramatic criticism in New York, and since last Friday I have received letters and telegrams to show that the public is with me.

"I look back at the plays produced in this city in the last few years. As I think of the title of each play an echo comes of the clever man who uses that title or something else about the play as a pole upon which to hoist his own wit. 'The China Doll' was cracked; 'The Vinegar Buyer' was sour; 'The Marriage of William Ashe' was his funeral; 'The House of Silence' was 'The House of Mirth.' Before 'The Redskin' was produced I expected to read that 'The Redskin Was Done Brown,' but the wit had a better one than that: 'The Redskin Was a Cigar Store Indian.'

Not the Critic, but the Play.

"No doubt that is clever in a way, and may raise a laugh on the lips of the newspaper reader, but I call it the critic prostituting his duty to his own cleverness. Who cares about John Smith, critic? We want to hear about this new play, and its merits, not about John Smith and his wit. The people want to know if the play is good or bad, or, better still, if the play, faulty at the beginning, is possible of revision so that at the end of a week it will be worth going to see.

"The manager wants the truth about the play. If the critic had the confidence of the managers—and the representatives of five newspapers in this city have won that and respect besides—then at the word 'bad' the play would be removed; at the word 'good' the play would be continued and improved; at the word of doubt every effort would be put forward by author, actor, and manager to have that doubt removed one way or another. But as it is, we can only take the criticisms of the five newspapers I refer to, hand a copy to each actor and the author and work on the suggestions given—for it is presumed that these critics voice the probable general opinion of the people—while the dozen other newspapers, with their self-conscious clever men, circulate among the people and so damage business that the manager is compelled to say to the author, generally a young one:

"'Young man, you see the situation for yourself. I believe in you and your play, but how can I play to empty houses while you are mending the piece?'

"There you see the crucifying of young brains which is ruining the drama in New York City.

"I recognize the importance of the first night opinions. It is by the critic's word that the people must judge, unless they wish to risk their dollars to find out for themselves. There is the critic's responsibility to the people. How have some of those critics used it in the past?

Condemned, but Successful.

"In the past ten years seventy-five successful plays have left this city and made fortunes for their owners in other cities, after they had been unmercifully condemned by the critics of New York, to which the plays returned, when the critic's wit was forgotten, to the long-deferred success which they deserved in the first instance. 'The Lion and the Mouse' was 'roasted,' and yet it is doing a splendid business. 'The Marriage of William Ashe' and 'As Ye Sow,' both condemned here, are now making fortunes for William A. Brady elsewhere.

"It took 'Way Down East' a year to live down what the critics first said about it. Tell me what has come over the people of this city that they love it now. And, speaking of a rural play, and the critics who laugh at a rural play, let me tell the critic that in reviewing a play he should forget that he has any likes or dislikes in the matter of plays. He should judge each by its kind.

"As for 'The Redskin,' I have studied every available book on Indians; my assistants have spent days in the Astor Library studying Indian plates; the author, Mr. McLaren, studied his subject thoroughly. If, indeed, he borrowed lines from Shakespeare, let us thank God that he borrowed from such a splendid source. One critic told the public that one of the Indians thanked the 'saints.' We thank him. On inquiry we found that it was the fault of the actor, not of the author, who had written 'Great Spirit.' Another critic pointed out many such errors of speech. We thank him, too. We will correct them. These gentlemen to whom I have referred, and three others, treated the effort with dignity and after the great labors of the author, actor and manager in this and in other cases, by Heaven!" and Mr. Brady banged the desk with his fist, "we are entitled to conscientious, dignified criticism."

Mr. Brady showed the TIMES reporter letters which he had received backing him in his fight for dignified criticsm. Some were from actors and authors. This one was written by an editor in Cincinnati:

> I read with a great deal of interest in the proofs to-night your stand as taken in your speech from the stage. I, for one, believe you are right and am using the matter. More power to you and your cause.
>
> JOHN T. McCARTHY.

Another, which was written at 11:30 P. M. reads:

> I saw the "Redskin" to-night, and enjoyed it very much, and more your courageous words regarding the so-called critics.
>
> It is so hard to find a decent and interesting play that one naturally looks to the papers for information, and long since I learned that they only praised when paid, and then without reference to the qualities of the play.
>
> HENRY C. EVANS.

A. E. Parry, veterinarian to the Metropolitan Riding School, wrote:

> I read a roast in The ——, so went and bought tickets right away. The show was good. I am a better judge of an Indian play than the critics are. I lived with the Sioux at the Red Cloud Agency, Nebraska, for ten years, can talk Sioux, and should know something about Western life. Keep on fighting.

Mr. Brady said that he had no intention of letting up on his stage talks—that, in fact, he intended to-night to read some passages from a newspaper whose critic, he declares, said before the play was put on that he would "roast" it.

IBSEN NOT ALL BAD.

American Playgoers Decide That He Has Improved the Drama.

The American Playgoers debated in the Hotel Astor last night the influence of Henrik Ibsen on the drama. Amelia Bingham presided.

Some difficulty had been experienced by Eden E. Greville, Secretary, in finding somebody to speak against the Norwegian drama. He succeeded at last in getting the Rev. Talbot Smith to do so conscientiously. Father Smith gave it as his opinion that Ibsen was all bad, that his influence on the drama could not be good; that, briefly, the Norwegian author of "The Doll's House" and "Hedda Gabler" was "an exhalation from a swamp."

Mr. Greville, in speaking for Ibsen, told of some of his own experiences when he, with a friend, established an independent theatre in London for the production of Ibsen plays. The first play produced was "Ghosts," and, said Mr. Greville, next morning a howl went up from all England.

Dr. Landes, Treasurer of the club, said he never met a man who would marry one of Ibsen's women, or a woman who would marry one of Ibsen's men.

"He is a great artist," said Dr. Landes, "a great author to study, but he is not a good man to put on the stage."

The general opinion, however, was that Ibsen had revolutionized the drama; that his influence would continue to improve it, and that what he delineated were the things that are.

STAGEHAND A FENCER.

Not Only That, but a Champion, Whose Title is Threatened.

Royal T. Languerand, a stage employe at the Hippodrome, applied on Saturday night for leave to be absent on Tuesday, as he was going out of town. When asked where he was going, Languerand explained that he was going to fight a duel.

"A duel!" gasped the stage manager.

"A sport duel," said Languerand.

Then he explained by bits that he had not always been a stage hand, that in fact he had been and was still the world's amateur champion with the foil and the rapier. Necessity, he says, brought him to his present employment. His reason for wishing to be absent to-morrow night was that his title had been challenged by Prof. Generoso Pavese, from whom Languerand himself had wrested it at Montreal in 1901, and that they were to meet for another test with the rapiers at Newark.

Languerand says he was taught to use the foils by Antoine Barrier of Joinville-le-Pont, near Paris, and that he was forced to leave France after his fifth duel. When he defeated Pavese in Montreal he got the diamond belt offered by Richard K. Fox. If he is defeated to-morrow night at Newark by Pavese he will lose this with the title of amateur champion.

THE OPERA HOUSE CONCERT.

Henri Marteau Plays and Alois Burgstaller Leads the Singers.

Henri Marteau, the French violinist, and Alois Burgstaller, who sang the "Durch die Walder" from "Der Freischütz," were the principals at last night's concert in the Metropolitan Opera House. Mr. Marteau, who appeared by arrangement with R. E. Johnston, played the Bruch concerto in G minor and Schubert's Concertstück in D major.

Mme. Marie Rappold sang "Einsam in Trueben Tagen," from "Lohengrin," appearing in place of Miss Bessie Abott, who was indisposed. The other soloists were Mme. Johanna Pochlmann and Pol Plançon. The soloists were assisted by the Metropolitan orchestra, under the direction of Nahan Franko.

Mme. Pochlmann sang "Fata Morgana," from "The Ocean," by Nicode, and Mr. Plançon sang Adam's "Grand Air du Chalet."

CROW FIGHT IN THE PARK.

Victor Jeered the Dead Bird from the Obelisk's Top.

A fight between two crows took place yesterday afternoon in Central Park near the Obelisk. It was to a finish, and it ended in the knockout and death of one of the feathered pugilists. The contest was seen by a score or more of persons in the Park, among whom were several women who appeared to enjoy the tussle keenly.

It was shortly after 2 o'clock when the two birds were seen to land in the Park a few hundred yards north of the Obelisk. There the contestants, without any preliminaries, faced each other like a couple of trained gamecocks. The fight lasted fully twenty minutes.

With much fluttering of their wings and much shreiking, the crows tore at each other with their powerful bills. After fifteen minutes of fighting one of the birds had its left eye gouged out and almost half its feathers plucked away, but it kept on fighting for a few minutes longer, when suddenly its antagonist delivered it a particularly vicious thrust in the remaining eye.

The stab must have penetrated the brain, for it ended the fight. The vanquished bird toppled over on its back and turned its feet skyward.

The victorious crow, which had not come out of the fight unscathed, as it was bleeding profusely about the head and had lost a goodly portion of its feathers, fluttered around its dead opponent for about a minute, cawing loudly the while. After this manoeuvre it flew over to the Obelisk, circled around it several times, and then lighted on the pinnacle of the huge stone.

From its lofty perch the bird gazed down in the direction of its dead foe for a few seconds, emitted three long, melancholy "caws," as if sounding taps, and immediately afterward turned and flew away directly over the Museum building.

LAST SUNDAY CONCERT OF SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Subscription Series for the Season Closed in Carnegie Hall.

RAFAEL JOSEFFY SOLOIST

Brahms's First Piano Concerto Heard for the First Time—Music by MacDowell, Beethoven and Strauss.

The last Sunday concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra's series (to be repeated to-morrow evening) was given yesterday afternoon. The audience was one of the largest that has heard any of these concerts. Doubtless Rafael Joseffy's first appearance this season had much to do with this, for Mr. Joseffy's concert performances in New York are still rare, and his friends and admirers are many. The programme was one to attract the music lover; it comprised Mr. MacDowell's two symphonic movements called "The Saracens" and "The Fair Alda," Beethoven's eighth symphony, Brahms's first piano concerto in D minor, and Richard Strauss's tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration."

Mr. MacDowell's name is appearing on the New York concert programmes frequently in these days. The two orchestral pieces, portions, it is said, of a "Roland" symphony composed nineteen years ago in Europe, were played by Sam Franko and his American Symphony Orchestra in 1897. They have not been heard since. They are not among the strongest or most individual of Mr. MacDowell's compositions, though they are well made and well put upon the orchestra. The first is very short; it has something suggestive of "old, unhappy, far-off things and battles of long ago," but the suggestion is so briefly enforced that it scarcely leaves a deep impression. There is more detail and a more definite outline in the picture of the fair Alda; the mood is of yearning and of woman's sorrow, in fulfillment of the poetical motto prefixed to the score, which shows the fair Alda kneeling before Charlemagne and beseeching him to give her back her hero, Roland. In both the pieces the orchestration is full of color, and it is indeed more noteworthy than the specific musical ideas that are presented.

The playing of Beethoven's Symphony was very spirited, and notably so in the first and last movements. The question of tempo is one that always obtrudes itself in this symphony more than in most, and it seemed that both the Allegretto and the Tempo di Menuetto were taken at a pace so slow as to injure some of their essential effects. The Tempo di Menuetto especially seemed plodding, pedestrian in its movement. Strauss's symphonic poem most nearly approaches inspiration—if it does not entirely reach it—of any of his orchestral compositions, and it seems bigger and more profoundly impressive the oftener it is heard; not at all, indeed, like the "charnel house music" it once was called. The details of the elaborate programme are not necessary for its understanding or enjoyment as music, for it deals with elemental ideas in a style of elemental grandeur and eloquence. Mr. Damrosch presented a broad and impressive rendering of it, lucid and with a fine sense of its proportions, as well as of its superb orchestral effects.

Mr. Joseffy is doing a service for Brahms's first concerto similar to the one he did for the second in making it familiar to this public. It is strange that New York has waited so long for the disclosure of so important a work of the master, yet, so far as the records show, it received its first performance in this city yesterday from Mr. Joseffy. It is not a "grateful" concerto in any sense. It is difficult and laborious for the solo artist, but it does not permit him opportunities for personal display. The solo part is not sharply set in relief against an orchestral background, but the two are employed together, each in its own fashion, to express the composer's musical ideas.

This corresponds in fact with the history of the origin and evolution of the work, which Brahms in his earlier period intended as a symphony, then arranged as a piece for two pianos, then transformed into the concerto as it now stands. The qualities of Brahms's early period are evident in it—the austerity, the indifference to lascivious pleasings of the ear, the breadth and bigness of the ideas. The first movement is of a superb sweep and somewhat sombre grandeur, laid out on a big scale. The adagio is an entirely characteristic Brahmsian adagio, beautiful in the warmth and glow of its themes. The final rondo, while it lacks the brilliancy and light spirit that are usually associated with a rondo, is musically extremely interesting. Mr. Joseffy played the concerto with whole-hearted devotion, as an artist whose thought is all for the music he is interpreting, and none for himself.

Yet we cannot believe that it was so that Brahms would have had this concerto played. It was all clear, pellucid, finished in style, cool in sentiment, and reticent in the expression of all the effects the music affords. But it was small in style, deficient in the breadth and energy that above all things else belong to this work. Many remember Brahms's own aggressive and powerful playing of his own music; rough, even harsh sometimes, but always on a big scale. That is the inevitable scale for this work.

Mr. Joseffy was most enthusiastically greeted and was left in no doubt as to the warmth of the admiration that waits for him in the long intervals of his public appearances. After he had finished he was recalled many times.

FIGHT INJUNCTION BILL.

Central Union Against Gilbert Measure —Striking Printers Defended.

A resolution was passed by the Central Federated Union yesterday, calling on the members of all central bodies and labor organizations throughout the country to ask the Congressmen in their districts to vote against the Gilbert bill relating to injunctions. Support was asked for an anti-injunction bill, fathered by the American Federation of Labor.

Andrew Furuseth, President of the Atlantic Coast Seamen's Union, said that the Gilbert bill ostensibly lessened the power of courts to grant injunctions in labor disputes, but legalized injunctions. It did this, he said, by providing that the court could grant injunctions in labor disputes after they were arbitrated.

A letter purporting to be from Secretary McIntyre of the United Typothetae was read by the delegate of the Franklin Association of Pressmen and Feeders. It asked Congressmen to vote against any anti-injunction bills, on the ground that injunctions were the only means that employers had to protect their property and to prevent violence during strikes. Injunctions were arrogant, insolent, and impertinent, said James P. Archibald of the Brotherhood of Painters, and Delegate Abrahams of the Franklin Association gave it as his opinion that the Constitution of the United States was a monumental deceit. Delegate Campbell of Typographical Union No. 6 denied that the striking printers had been guilty of any fraud, force, or intimidation in preventing non-union men from working for the Typothetae.

SHIP'S DOCTOR DIES AT SEA.

Dr. Hutchinson of the St. Louis a Victim of Pneumonia.

Dr. Robert C. Hutchinson, surgeon of the American Liner St. Louis, and one of the best known medical officers in the transatlantic service, died suddenly of pneumonia on board the St. Louis last Tuesday night, when the vessel was in midocean. Dr. Hutchinson was up and attending to his duties until within three hours of his death. He was a native of Yardville, a suburb of Trenton, N. J., and had been in the employ of the American Line for about nine years. He leaves a widow, a daughter, and his mother.

Dr. Hutchinson superintended the usual medical examination of the steerage passengers a week ago Saturday at Southampton, and, the day being a cold, raw one, it is supposed that he caught cold at that time. At 9 o'clock Tuesday night he complained of feeling ill, and went to bed. He rapidly grew worse, and his condition became so alarming that Capt. Jamison and Purser Williams summoned Dr. Rynier Van Nest of the medical faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, who was a passenger on the St. Louis. Dr. Van Nest was unable to do anything for the sick man, and just before midnight he died.

While in the sick room Dr. Van Nest recognized in Dr. Hutchinson a class mate of his at the University of Pennsylvania, and a fellow-interne of his in one of the Philadelphia hospitals. It was decided to bury Dr. Hutchinson at sea, and on Friday Purser Williams read the burial service of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the body was slid overboard. Dr. Hutchinson's family was informed by wireless telegraph of his death.

CATHOLIC PUBLISHER DIES.

Patrick O'Shea, Author and Editor, Expires Suddenly at Summit, N. J.

Patrick O'Shea, the Nestor of the Catholic publishers in America, died suddenly at his home in Summit, N. J., on Saturday afternoon in his seventy-fourth year, having been born on March 17, 1832, in Kilkenny, Ireland.

He came to this country in his nineteenth year, and obtained a place with Dunigan Brothers, the Catholic publishers. In 1854 Mr. O'Shea began business for himself at 739 Broadway, this city. During the fifty-two years that his business has been established he published a great number of Catholic story, school, and standard books. He was author and editor, as well as publisher, of the "Comprehensive Geographies" and most of the other series of his text books.

In his first twenty years of business, besides the publication of over 200 other books, he republished the "History of the Church," by Darras; Lingard's "History of England," Cardinal Wiseman's complete works, Lacordaire's complete works, and other notable books, but the gigantic task of republishing Digby's "Ages of Faith" he considered his greatest achievement. During the civil war Mr. O'Shea was an earnest advocate of the cause of the Union, and his letters signed "An American Citizen," published in The Boston Pilot and The Dublin Nation, excited much interest.

He married Ann Madden, who, with nine children, survives him. He will be buried from St. Theresa's Church, Summit, N. J., to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Obituary Notes.

CHARLES COOPER CLARK died Saturday in Rochester. He leaves a widow and three children. Mr. Clark was born in Philadelphia in 1841. He was a descendant of the Bayard family on his mother's side and a nephew of Bishop Clark of Rhode Island. As a young man he was in the wholesale paper business in Baltimore. Later he came to New York, where he carried on the same business for twenty years. Seven years ago he moved to Rochester. Mr. Cooper was for some years Commodore of the New Haven Yacht Club and had been for many years a member of the New York Yacht Club.

HENRY WARNER CALHOUN, a lawyer, of 53 Wall Street, died at the Hotel Gotham last night. He was 44 years old and unmarried. He was graduated from Yale in 1883. Mr. Calhoun was a member of the University, the Ardsley, and Yale Clubs. He took a great interest in the fine arts, and was a member of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Hamilton Club of Brooklyn, and the Century Association. He also belonged to the Garden City Golf Club, the Racquet and Tennis Club, and the New York Zoological Association.

JOSEPH FRANCIS BROWN died after a lingering illness yesterday in his son's home at 2,699 Bedford Avenue, Flatbush. He was born 84 years ago at Great Neck, L. I., and most of his life was spent at Port Washington, where he was engaged in the oyster trade. Among the many offices that he held in Queens County were those of Overseer of the Poor and Collector. An enthusiastic Democrat, he was for many years a familiar figure at county conventions. Not long ago he was stricken with paralysis.

HENRY J. HENRY, confidential clerk of Strobel & Wilken, importers of china and toys at 591 Broadway, died suddenly yesterday of heart disease. He was 53 years of age, and lived at 43 West Eighty-second Street. He had recently fallen heir to part of an estate of $160,000 left by his sister.

IF YOU have high-class property you desire to sell, to lease or to combine with some other form of transaction involving a real estate deal; if you cannot take the time from your regular business to attend to your properties, if you contemplate any kind of a real estate venture—buying, selling or renting, you should be in touch with this office, with its large and influential clientele and its long record of successful business. It has always paid everybody who has done business with it.

GEN. SCHOFIELD DIES AT HIS FLORIDA HOME

Union Army Commander and Secretary of War.

FOLLOWED EDWIN M. STANTON

Defeated His West Point Classmate, Hood, in Tennessee, and Co-operated with Sherman.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 4.—Lieut. Gen. John M. Schofield, retired, died in his home in this city to-night of cerebral hemorrhage. Mrs. Schofield and her daughter were with him. The body will be taken to Arlington for burial.

John McAllister Schofield was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1831. His father, a clergyman, moved to Freeport, Ill., where the boy lived until he was 18. He then entered the Military Academy at West Point, and was graduated in four years, seventh in a class that contained, among other men who later became famous, Gen. Sheridan and Gen. McPherson of the Northern Army, and the Confederate General Hood.

When the war began he was Professor of Natural and Experimental Philosophy at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo. He at once gave up his place to join the colors, and after filling several minor commands, was made chief of staff to General Nathaniel Lyon, and took part in the engagements at Due Spring and Wilson's Creek.

In 1861 he was appointed by the President Brigadier General of Volunteers, and was with the Department of Missouri until 1864, when Grant put him in command of the Army of the Ohio. This placed him at the head of an army of 17,000 men, forming the left wing of Sherman's army in Georgia. With this force he took part in all the battles and actions of the entire Atlanta campaign. He was at the battles of Resaca, Dallas, and Kenesaw, and the siege and capture of Atlanta.

At the termination of this campaign he went to the assistance of Gen. Thomas, in Tennessee, and found himself opposed to his former classmate, Hood. After much skirmishing he finally attacked his adversary and defeated him at Franklin on Nov. 30, 1864. The Union Army pursued Hood, however, until Jan. 14 of the following year.

Gen. Schofield received the rank of Brevet Major General for "gallant and meritorious service" at the battle of Franklin, and was ordered to transfer his army corps, the Twenty-third to Sherman's army. He effected this with extraordinary speed, and was able to cooperate with Sherman at Goldsborough on March 25. At the surrender of Johnston's army at Durham Station in the following April, Gen. Schofield executed the military convention of capitulation, receiving the arms and paroling prisoners. He remained in command of the Department of North Carolina until June 21.

After the war he went to Europe on a diplomatic mission in regard to the French occupation of Mexico. On his return he accepted a position in the army as it was formed under the reconstruction laws, but gave up his command in 1868 to succeed Edwin M. Stanton as Secretary of War. This office he resigned shortly after the inauguration of President Grant.

Since then Gen. Schofield has held various posts in the army, none of them, however, of an active military nature. He was Superintendent of the Academy at West Point for six years, and on the death of Sheridan in 1888 the President appointed him to the command of the Army of the United States. Despite the opposition that arose in some quarters his friends succeeded in having the rank of Lieutenant General revived, and it was conferred upon him in 1895. He announced his retirement on Sept. 29 of the same year.

Non-English Globe-Circling Cable.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Consul Liefeld of Freiburg reports on Germany's completion of the laying of a new Pacific cable from Shanghai to Yap, in the Caroline Islands, which he says covers over 2,000 miles. It closes a gap that makes it the first continuous non-English line to encircle the globe, and is laid at the greatest ocean depth of any in the world, reaching 22,966 feet.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The storm central in the lake region Saturday has moved down the St. Lawrence Valley, and the weather has cleared in Eastern districts, although light snows still continue along the lakes. A fresh disturbance occupies the Western Rocky Mountain slope, but as yet has not caused any precipitation except on the Pacific Coast and the plateau region. The temperatures in the lake region and Atlantic Coast States are somewhat lower than on Saturday. In the Missouri Valley cold weather for the season prevails. Elsewhere temperatures are about normal, except for snow flurries in the lake region.

Fair weather will prevail Monday and Tuesday in Northern and Eastern districts. In the Southwest rain is probable Monday, extending into the Lower Mississippi Valley, the Eastern Gulf States, and Tennessee Tuesday. The temperature will rise in the Missouri Valley, the Mississippi Valley, and Southern States Monday, and lower temperatures will prevail Tuesday in the Southwest.

The winds along the Atlantic Coast will be fresh west to northwest; Gulf Coast, light and variable, becoming southeast; Lake Michigan, fresh northwest.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

For New England and Eastern New York—Fair and colder Monday, preceded by snow in north portion. Tuesday, fair and colder; fresh west winds.

Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, District of Columbia, and Maryland—Fair and somewhat colder Monday. Tuesday, fair; fresh west winds.

Western Pennsylvania—Snow flurries Monday. Tuesday, fair; fresh west winds.

Western New York—Snow flurries Monday, with colder in east portion. Tuesday, fair.

	1906.	1905.		1906.	1905.
3 A. M.	32	47	4 P. M.	41	46
6 A. M.	32	43	6 P. M.	33	42
9 A. M.	34	45	9 P. M.	27	36
12 M.	38	45	12 P. M.	21	36

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level.

The average temperature yesterday was 45; for the corresponding date last year it was 38; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 34.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 44; at 8 P. M. it was 38. Maximum temperature, 54 degrees at 12:10 A. M.; minimum, 36 degrees at 8:30 P. M. Humidity, 93 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 58 per cent. at 8 P. M.

FISHERS OF MEN

By S. R. CROCKETT.

This is a novel which will stir the noblest feelings in the heart of the reader. It is worth while having them stirred. The "Fisher of Men" is a simple-souled, golden-hearted little missionary who does much good in a quiet, earnest way, and unostentatiously sacrifices everything, even to his tardy love, to the work which he has set out to accomplish. Among others he saves Kid McGhie, the little Irish boy who is the hero of the tale.

HOMES FEWER BUT HAPPIER.

The Rev. Mr. Scudder's View of Woman's Entry Into Business.

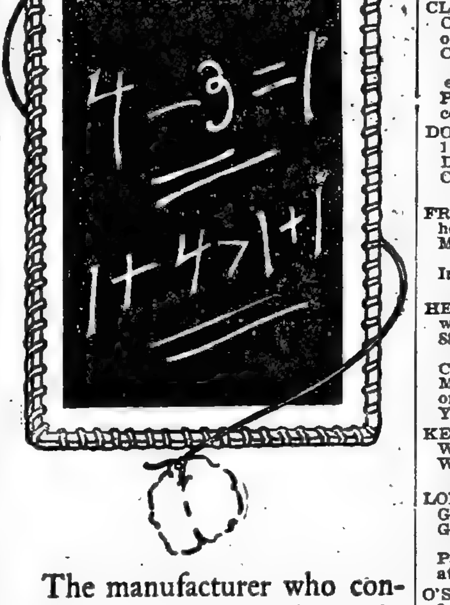
The Rev. John L. Scudder of the First Congregational Church of Jersey City preached last night upon "Business Women: Do They Reduce the Number of Marriages and Do They Make Good Wives?" After describing the women of the past as semi-slaves, dependent upon their husbands, Dr. Scudder said of the modern woman:

"She stands erect in the consciousness of her industrial value and ability to paddle her own canoe. She is not cringing about and perpetually waiting for a partner. Under these circumstances, of course, we must expect fewer marriages in proportion to the population. The industrial woman, leaping into the ranks of open competition, tends to reduce the wages of the men and so far incapacitate them for marriage. This is one sad feature of modern commercial life. It will reduce the number of homes, leaving camps of unmarried men on one side and spinsters on the other.

"But, although the weddings will be fewer, those couples who do marry will be happier because they stand on the same footing. The business woman of today refuses to be a moon revolving around a masculine earth; she will be a twin star or nothing.

"I believe her industrial training will make her a better wife, for she will know the value of a dollar and be able to sympathize with her husband in his daily toil. She will apply business methods to domestic economy.

"The era of feminine imbecility and cowardice is fast passing away, and in its place we find the new age of well-rounded, exalted womanhood."



The manufacturer who confines himself to monthly publications is overlooking three chances in four to make a market. The fourth chance is a monthly, and it is a good chance, but the monthly advertising backed by the weekly every week is better than the monthly advertising using the weekly once a month.

There is just as much reason for advertising in a weekly every week as there is for publishing a weekly for reading every week. We are publishing THE SATURDAY EVENING POST every week. Several million people are reading it every week. Therefore, it can and should be profitably used by the advertiser every week.

MORE FAILURES FEARED IN THE KAFFIR MARKET

Situation Attributed to the Liberal Ministry's Policy.

RAND'S NEED OF COOLIES

Lord Selborne Tells of Disastrous Effects That Would Follow the Repatriation of the Chinese.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, Monday, March 5.—The editor of The Times's financial supplement says he is satisfied that there has been a good deal of exaggeration in the published stories about the slump in Kaffirs and about the London stock market in general.

He admits, however, that the Kaffir market is badly demoralized, and says that if the next settlement goes through satisfactorily it will be a miracle of jockeyship on the part of those who are steering the market in its runaway course toward the next fence. Nevertheless he thinks the Stock Exchange as a whole is gradually shaking itself free from the influence of Kaffir maladies.

A curious feature of the situation is the extent of the interest in Kaffirs held in Scotland. It appears as though the Scottish banks must have encouraged speculation in these securities, for they have sold the bulk of the pawned shares thrown on the market. The English banks are said to have very little Kaffir paper among their loans.

It is an interesting fact, too, that the only suicide attributed to the Kaffir depression was that of a Scotchman who had carried his speculation in mining stocks to such an extent that he had open accounts with ten different houses.

The present condition of the Kaffir market is attributed to the Campbell-Bannerman Government's attitude on the Chinese labor question.

That the policy of the Balfour Ministry would be negatived by the Liberals was almost a foregone conclusion. Chinese labor in the Rand under the peculiar conditions laid down when the importation of coolies was permitted was one of the chief issues in the recent general election. The Liberals denounced the conditions in the Transvaal as "slavery," and the controversy over this question was perhaps even more bitter than that on any other subject discussed at the political meetings. The London newspapers have been full of crimination and recrimination in connection with the accusations made regarding this matter. Liberal placards representing Chinese hanging by their thumbs, &c., have been denounced by the Unionists as exceeding all the bounds of proper campaigning.

Lord Selborne, the High Commissioner in South Africa, is strongly opposed to action which would deprive the Rand of Chinese labor. The British Government, while no definite steps have as yet been taken, announces its determination to put a stop to the further importation of coolies, and is apparently desirous of repatriating those already in the Rand. It is not expected that a final decision will be announced for some months, but in the meantime the condition of uncertainty is working havoc not only in the Kaffir market, but in other departments of the Stock Exchange.

The London Times on Feb. 21, in discussing a Blue Book on Chinese labor in the Transvaal, said:

"The mines alone are estimated to need 110,000 more laborers if they are to reach the development necessary to maintain a large British population in the colony. If this labor is withheld the Transvaal, as Lord Selborne puts it, must forego its potential development; and in a detailed estimate, markedly conservative in character, he sets forth some of the immediate consequences which must follow if that development is retarded 'owing to some distinction of principle, which I confess I do not understand, between the importation of Africans from Portuguese East Africa and of Chinese from China.'

"It is estimated that by the removal of Chinese 6,000 or more white men now employed in the mines would be immediately thrown out of work. From 17,000 to 18,000 white men, indirectly dependent on the mines, would sooner or later lose their work also. The money spent locally would be reduced by more than £4,000,000. The Transvaal revenue would lose, through diminution on the profit tax and the customs, at least £250,000 a year. The Central South African Railways would lose over £800,000 a year, and the increased contribution to intercolonial expenses thrown upon the Transvaal owing to this loss of revenue would involve it in a total deficit of £870,000.

"These are the main figures in the estimated loss. The loss to allied enterprises, such as the railways of the other South African colonies, has also to be reckoned in. The crippling of the whole mechanism of Government for the furtherance of education and material progress, alike in the Transvaal and in the other colonies, would be another inevitable and disastrous result."

BUYING CHEAP KAFFIRS.

Houses Here See Bargains in Collapsed Rand Shares.

Buying orders for South African mining stocks went from this market to London in considerable number last week. One house, in fact, is said to have done more business in Rand properties than in American securities, believing that Kafirs at present prices are a better bargain than is easy to find in this market. The Kafir stocks which have been on the down grade since the Boer war received a final blow when the new Government declared against the importation of Chinese labor into the Rand, and the collapse which has followed has necessitated the sacrifice of so many lines of stock that many of the Rand securities are selling at prices which are little more than the cost of plants and development work.

The slump has cost the British public, it is estimated, $250,000,000. There is more behind it, however, than the general belief that Chinese labor is a necessity in the gold fields. Dividends have not kept pace with the increasing output of gold since the war for many reasons, of which the labor difficulty is only one.

The year 1905 produced $104,010,370 worth of South African gold, $23,736,325 more than the previous year, and $10,054,620 more than the year which witnessed the opening of the Boer war would have produced had its last three months been completed under normal conditions.

But while this increased production has been taking place the grade of ore running through the mills has fallen from an average of $9.30 in 1905 to $8.81 in the last month of 1905 for which figures are available. In the same period the working costs, notwithstanding an increase of nearly 50 per cent. in the coolie labor, have decreased only 20 cents per ton, or the difference between an average cost of $5.70 in 1905 compared with $5.90 in the previous year. The failure of the much-vaunted Chinese labor to make a better showing in results is attributed to the initial heavy expense of importing and housing the coolies and the waste of time and labor during the period of breaking in when the white foremen, ignorant of a syllable of Cantonese, were struggling with the problem of directing the labor of the gangs equally ignorant of even the most elemental "pidgin."

Another element in the decrease of profits is the fact that during the acute period of labor shortage following the war most of the mines that resumed operations "stoped" only their widest and therefore most easily and cheapest worked drifts. They are now compelled to equalize matters by doing an extra amount of work on the narrower reefs.

Heavy expenditures on repairs to plants long idle and the paying off of debts accumulated during the war have compelled many companies making actual profits to withhold dividends. Twenty-five companies in this position were reckoned in the South African correspondence of The London Times last month.

THE STEEL TRADE POSITION.

Pittsburg Reports Production of Iron Up to Consumption—Prices Sagging.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., March 2.—There is considerable waiting among iron and steel consumers for lower prices in some lines. This is true of foundry pig iron, gray forge, and basic iron. It is the belief that production has about caught up to the consumption. This will compel furnace operators to either sell at a lower price or to stack their surplus iron.

The production of pig iron was never so great. It is reported that the lake docks are being scraped clean of ore, and there will not be a ton remaining on the docks when the lake navigation season opens. This means that shipping on the lakes will start early this year, even if the freighters have to pay higher insurance rates.

Bessemer prices are very firm and show no weakness. There has not been any buying, however. There are very few sales of foundry iron in this district. Buyers claim they can get Southern foundry for $14 per ton, Birmingham, and they are unwilling to pay $17.50 for foundry iron at the Valley furnaces. Five furnaces went out of blast during February for repairs. Several more furnaces are scheduled to close down duing March, and no additional furnaces are ready to go into blast. The output will remain the greatest in history in spite of this.

Coke prices are beginning to weaken as the bituminous strike talk quiets down. Furnace coke, which was held at $2.50 per ton last week, is now offered at $2.30, and foundry coke, which was firm at $3, is selling at $2.75 per ton. Bituminous coal prices did not go any higher in spite of the adjournment at Indianapolis without reaching an agreement. This indicates that the large consumers never feared a strike.

Bar iron prices, which have been declining for the past month, remain weak, especially in the East and West. The output of bar iron is greater than the demand. Pittsburg prices on common iron bars are $1.80 to $1.85 per hundred pounds. Some sales have been made at the lower figure, and buyers look for still lower prices. The pool price is $1.50 per hundred, so that bars are really selling 30 cents a hundred above the pool figure.

The shafting manufacturers have been holding sessions trying to bolster up prices on their output. The price has been low in sympathy with steel bars, which have been selling for the past year at $1.50. No change in prices have been made by the shafting makers, but they are willing to reduce the discounts just as soon as the demand will stand it.

The heavy buying of structural shapes is paralyzing the mills. Many large contracts are being held up because the mills cannot promise deliveries at a seasonable date. In the meantime many small contracts are being taken and the contractors for these are willing to await their turn. An order for 25,000 steel freight cars is hanging fire for the same reason. The car manufacturers cannot make deliveries. The small car shops of Columbus, Ohio; Middletown, Penn., as well as the larger plants in and about Pittsburg, with the American Car and Foundry Company plants, are filled with orders which will require eight months of steady employment to complete.

Steel billets and bars are so scarce that several mills in Youngstown, Ohio, and in Chicago have been compelled to close down. Steel billets are being sold at $28 per ton in some instances, while $27.50 is the latest contract price. The scarcity of billets and bars is causing concern among some manufacturing concerns dependent on the open market for their supply. Hence one Youngstown concern is building its own steel mill, and other large independent corporations are preparing plans for furnaces, blooming mills, and billet and bar mills.

Scrap metal is getting lower in price, and melting stock, while selling at $15.50, is believed to be sliding toward $15 per ton. This has caused a weakness in basic pig iron, which had been quoted at $17.50 to $17.75 per ton at the furnaces. It is cheaper to use scrap metal at $15.50 than pig iron, which is $2 a ton more.

But the mills are all busy, and it would require very little additional buying to create an advance in the weak lines in crude and finished materials.

WE OFFER, SUBJECT TO SALE,

$1,000,000

PAN-AMERICAN RAILROAD COMPANY

FIRST MORTGAGE FIVE PER CENT. BONDS,

Dated June 1st, 1903; due January 1st, 1934. Interest payable January 1st and July 1st, at The American Trust & Savings Bank, Chicago, Ill. Denomination $1,000.

The Pan-American Railroad starts at San Geronimo on the line of the Tehuantepec Railway and extends in a southeasterly direction through the States of Oaxaca and Chiapas to a point on the Guatemala border.

At the present time about 200 miles of road are completed and in operation, and construction work is rapidly progressing on the projected line, so that within eighteen months the entire 300 miles of completed road will be in operation and one can then travel by rail from the City of Mexico to the City of Guatemala.

Price and special circular on application.

GEO. D. COOK & CO.
25 Broad Street. New York.

To the holders of four and one-half per cent. gold collateral trust notes of The CINCINNATI, HAMILTON AND DAYTON RAILWAY COMPANY, issued under its collateral trust agreement, dated March 1, 1905;

Default having been made in the payment of the coupon which matured March 1, 1906, the holders of notes which have not yet been deposited under the agreement constituting the undersigned committee are requested to deposit the same at the earliest practicable date with Central Trust Company of New York, the depositary designated in said agreement, at its office, No. 54 Wall Street, New York City. All notes must be deposited in negotiable form, and must bear the coupon which matured March 1, 1906, and all subsequent coupons. Certificates of the depositary will be issued for notes deposited.

A large amount of notes has already been deposited under said agreement, and in the judgment of the committee it is essential for the full and proper protection of the rights and interests of the noteholders that the remaining notes be deposited without delay. The right is reserved to terminate the privilege of deposit at any time without previous notice. Copies of the deposit agreement may be obtained at the office of the depositary and from the members of the committee.

Dated, New York, March 2, 1906.

To the Holders of the First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Bonds of the
AMERICAN SEWER PIPE COMPANY,
Formerly American Clay Manufacturing Co.

The undersigned Trustee under the mortgage above referred to desire, under authority of said mortgage, to expend the sum of Fifty Thousand ($50,000) dollars in the purchase of bonds of said issue, providing said purchase can, in their opinion, be now made advantageously.

Offers of said bonds may be sent to Knickerbocker Trust Company, 66 Broadway, New York, on or before March 20th, 1906.

Knickerbocker Trust Co.,
By C. T. BARNEY, President.

Dated New York, March 1st, 1906.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF
The Fort Smith & Van Buren Bridge Co. First Mortgage 6 Per Cent. Gold Bonds.

New York, March 1, 1906.

The undersigned, Trustee under the mortgage securing the bonds named above, will receive proposals or offers to sell said bonds up to and including Monday, April 2d, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, when the same will be opened, and bonds offered at the lowest prices (not exceeding 105 and interest) to the extent necessary to exhaust the amount in the sinking fund at that time will be accepted in the order that proposals are received. The interest on bonds offered and accepted will cease on April 1, 1906. If bonds are not offered and accepted in accordance with the above, they will be designated by lot for payment on October 1, 1906, at a price of 105 and accrued interest to that date.

MARCH

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

The failure of local banking institutions to recover from the interior any considerable portion of the funds which left this city last year to finance the harvesting of the country's crops and to meet the demands of unwonted business activity lies, of course, at the bottom of the conditions which found expression in the money market last week and which exercised the chief influence upon stock market operations. Warnings of the consequences which were to follow this interruption of the traditional inflow of money have been forthcoming from time to time since the first of the year, but these were either questioned or deliberately thrust aside by many operators for the rise in prices until they were borne out last week in unmistakable fashion by the advances of both call and time funds to rates to find a parallel for which, at this season, one must go back a number of years in Wall Street's annals. The development of this situation in the money market led to the relinquishment by many holders of securities which it becomes unprofitable to keep, owing to the fact that returns upon such securities are out of line with the cost of carrying them, and while this liquidating movement was under way occasion was taken by those who participated in it to review the factors which have led to such restrictive activity in money, and to forecast, so far as this may be possible, the probable duration of money activity and the various matters which may serve to confine it within certain rather indefinite limits. There are certain very plain reasons for the retention of funds at interior points and for the general full employment of money at this time. A reading of the records of bank clearings at great inland cities shows that in almost every instance the volume of business passing through Clearing Houses is at wholly unprecedented figures, and this, no less than the splendid railroad reports which came to hand during the week, speaks eloquently of the full and vigorous tide of trade.

A single instance taken from the industrial field will serve very clearly show the additional demands which the flood of prosperity is putting upon the country's money supply. A corporation engaged in the manufacture of railway equipment reported some days ago an increase of over $15,000,000 in its gross sales for 1905, as compared with its gross business in the preceding year. Where this company had called upon the combined money stock of the country in 1904 for only $4,500,000 to cover its gross sales in that year, last year its demands totaled $19,500,000, and when this instance is multiplied by hundreds in order to arrive at the total expansion of trade, it is readily seen how great is the pressure put upon money. Again, in further illustration of this point, there are found illuminating data in the reports now issuing from the Census Bureau upon manufactures in the various States. Compared with 1900, the increase in manufacturing establishments in Alabama led in 1905 to an increase of 51 per cent. in the value of products turned out last year, the total being $109,000,000. In Indian Territory the number of manufacturing establishments increased from 179 in 1900 to 466 last year, while in Oklahoma the figures were 316 in 1900 and 657 in 1905. In the last-named Territory capital employed by these establishments increased from $2,462,000 to $11,107,000. In the same manner uncounted funds have gone into real estate as a result of the great boom in property the country over. It has been estimated that this boom in this city alone called for an additional $150,000,000 last year, while of buildings ordered for construction this Summer, sixteen call for no less than 200,000 tons of structural steel. The effects of these movements on the supply of available credit were unavoidable. As to the duration of this period of active money, there is happily no sign of abatement so far as the demands which grow out of business are concerned, but the outflow of currency now under way to the interior terminates usually in mid-April, and in view of the accumulations of funds at interior points, owing to the failure of a return movement of last year's remittances, the planting demands this year may be somewhat smaller. The situation may also be relieved in large measure by the lending here of foreign money. Such a development has in the past been a source of relief, and there is no reason to believe that it will be less efficacious at this time, if interest rates continue as attractive as at present and the European situation is undisturbed. Unless gold is imported, however, the operations of foreign bankers add not money but credits to the supply, and these must eventually be made good, a fact which makes the relief from this source temporary. More effectual and more sound would be the alleviation found in the quieting down of speculation, not only in the stock market, but also in the real estate field the country over. The deposit of $10,000,000 of Government funds with the National banks, in accordance with Secretary Shaw's decision, should prove of great assistance to our banking institutions in financing legitimate business demands, and justification of the Secretary's action will be found if the funds are devoted to this purpose. If, however, they are put to direct, or indirect, use in market operations, their legitimate purpose will be defeated and their usefulness impaired.

Although it may well be doubted that there has been any movement on the part of holders of securities to dispose of their stocks as a result of the various anti-corporation resolutions introduced in legislative bodies, the severe break in the market upon the introduction of the Gillespie resolution and the sharp liquidation in Consolidated Gas, following the reduction of one-fifth in the price of the company's product, reveal the uneasiness provoked by these matters in Wall Street, which will not be entirely comforted until Congress ceases from troubling and the many State Legislatures are at rest for the Summer. The decree of the State Gas Commission is perhaps the most concrete expression so far of the widespread hostility which has been fanned into flame by a vast outpouring of periodical literature. A searching inquiry, as the result of the acceptance by Congress of the Tillman resolution into the status of the anthracite and bituminous coal roads and the enactment into law of the rigorous recommendations of the Armstrong committee would constitute additional expression of this hostility and might serve to convince Wall Street that the movement was to be so sweeping and drastic as to make it expedient to hold aloof from the stock market until its results could be clearly foreseen. The unsettled political situation in this State may become more and more a factor in financial matters as the year progresses, for money is proverbially timid and capitalists ever seek to precede their fellows in anticipating troublous times, a matter which results in the discounting of such times far ahead of their actual development. There has been no evidence of such a movement as yet, although the matters incident to it are canvassed more and more thoroughly in Wall Street each day. This misgiving in its indefiniteness and its possibilities is reminiscent of Bacon's argument and conclusion concerning certain lies "in which it often falls out that somewhat is produced of nothing, for lies are sufficient to breed opinion, and opinion brings on substance."

TOLD ROUND THE TICKER.

ANDREW FREEDMAN, the man who is credited with the success of the plan for the consolidation of the New York City traction companies, was the recipient of many congratulations last week when the success of the merger was formally announced. Mr. Freedman did most of the preliminary work in the matter of negotiations between the Ryan and Belmont interests, and it was he who paved the way for an agreement between these interests as to the terms upon which the several companies were to be brought together. Mr. Freedman, however, has kept more or less in the background, and for this reason has lost some of the praise which might have gone to him and at the same time avoided a good deal of the criticism which otherwise doubtless would have been leveled against him by those who on one ground or another were opposed to the traction consolidation.

ALBERT J. EARLING, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, is one of the many big railroad men of the West who have risen from the ranks. He began some forty-odd years ago as a laborer, and some of his old-time associates tell this story of his first promotion. When the President first went on the pay roll of the St. Paul he spelled his name Oerlin, as his father had before him. Young Oerlin was a hard worker, and it wasn't long before the Superintendent spotted him as good material. An assistant foreman was wanted in a hurry one day, and the "Super," remembering his good impression of Oerlin, sent word to the local agent to have "Earling" report up the line at once. The young man could hardly believe his good luck. He suggested to the agent that the boss must have meant some one else, that the name wasn't right. "It's you, all right," said the agent. "Go along and take your job." Young Oerlin reported to the "Super," with the wrong spelling of his name still in his mind. After thanking him, he ventured to remark that a mistake had been made in spelling "Oerlin." "Mistake!" growled the "Super." "You spell your name the way I spell it or get another job." Earling he remained, and some time afterward had the name made his forever by act of Legislature.

NORMAN B. REAM was the head and front of the glucose reorganization which seluted in the formation of the Corn Products Refining Company. He has been identified with the glucose interests since the time of the first big combination in the trade. This is how he came into the field, according to the story a friend of his family tells: He had put $100,000 of his money into the business to oblige a distant relative by marriage, and the time came when it was a question of going in deeper or running a chance of seeing the $100,000 charged up to profit and loss. Mr. Ream was of about an even mind on the subject. Finally, his friend says, he made it a toss-up and flipped a coin. It came down in the way he had fixed to mean "glucose," and Mr. Ream went into the industry in the thoroughgoing way that has made him one of the foremost figures in the trust.

GEORGE STILLMAN of the newly organized firm of Rosen, Stillman & Co. is one of the later additions to the squad of old Yale football men in Wall Street. There are scores of ex-college athletes on 'Change. In fact, if numbers count for anything it would seem that Wall Street follows the training table in natural sequence. Yale has, perhaps, a little the best of it numerically. A goodly number of her football stars immediately suggest themselves. There are, for instance: George T. Adee, '95, of Batcheller, Adee & Rawlins; Clarence De Witt, '96, of Meadows, Williams & Co.; W. R. Cross, '96, of Redmond & Co.; Paul D. Mills, '97, of Mills & Co.; H. F. Benjamin, '98, of Benjamin, Ferguson & McMurtry; and Gordon Brown, 1900, who was Captain of his team.

A. A. HOUSMAN will give a dinner on the 23d of this month at the Waldorf-Astoria to celebrate his fiftieth birthday. During the piping bull times of 1902 Mr. Housman's activities were conspicuously featured almost daily in the stories of the market, and he was credited with having made a fortune. His name has been missed in the history of the bull days of the past Fall and Winter, but his prosperity is said to have in no wise diminished.

German Foreign Trade.

According to the official statistics of German foreign trade in 1905, which have now been published, the imports into Germany during the year amounted to 54,304,508 metric tons in bulk and in value to 7,046,000,000 marks, (£352,300,000,) as compared with 48,886,316 metric tions and 6,864,000,000 marks (£343,200,000) the year before; while the export trade amounted to 40,567,019 metric tons, of a total value of 5,693,000,000 marks, (£284,650,000,) as compared with 38,855,405 metric tons, of the value of 5,315,000,000 marks (£265,750,000) the year before.

PRICES FOR PRODUCTS STEADY IN ENGLAND

Cotton Trade Active, with the Raw Material Advancing.

WOOL REMAINS VERY FIRM

Manufacturers Hampered by Its High Cost—Active Demand for Finished Iron and Steel.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

LONDON, March 4.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"Last week's reports of business and industrial conditions present no notable changes from the conditions prevailing since the opening of the new year. Raw materials were generally firm and finished products were steady. Breadstuffs, after a steadier market, became dull, though English wheat was steady. Maize and oats were firm. Barley was slow. Oil seeds were usually weaker.

"The cotton trade was active, with the raw material advancing and both yarns and goods selling readily.

"Raw wool continued very firm and in considerable demand. Active business is reported from the Midlands, but woolen and cloth manufacturers were hampered by the high rates for wool.

"Pig iron had considerable fluctuations and closed weak, but manufactured iron and steel had an active demand at good prices. Copper was steadier on a better speculative and consumptive demand. Tin ruled dull. Lead was firm. Spelter was unaltered."

FOREIGNS ADVANCE IN PARIS.

Operators Tired of Waiting for Results of Morocco Conference.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

PARIS, March 4.—The usual Mardi Gras celebration gave a holiday appearance to the Stock Exchange last week, although the Bourse was not closed. The monthly settlement passed off easily, money being plentiful and carrying rates low. This encouraged some operators who were tired of waiting for the results of the Algeciras conference, and a fair demand sprang up for home and foreign Government securities, which made a general advance, even Russians joining in the improvement.

Bank stocks were in good demand, it being expected that the banks will make good profits out of several impending issues. Spanish railways kept steady on the appreciation of the peseta, due to the vote of the Cortes making the payment of customs dues in gold compulsory. It is not believed, however, that the Spanish Government will further encourage the lowering of the rate of exchange, which might prejudice many industries in the country.

Rio Tintos advanced somewhat on account of the rise in the price of copper.

The South African department showed utter demoralization. London tried to sell in this market, but succeeded only in lowering the quotations without disposing of much stock. The general market, however, was not influenced by the semi-panicky state of the South African section, as the French public seems to have little interest left in gold mines.

Owing to the loss of trade resulting from the collapse of the mining market outside brokers are seeking a new field. It is said an attempt will be made to introduce a number of German industrials in the coulisse where Harpener stock is already dealt in.

BERLIN BOERSE UNEASY.

All Kinds of Stocks Affected by the Morocco Situation.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, March 4.—The uneasiness caused by the Morocco question became very marked on the Boerse last week. Speculators for the rise resorted to realizations on a large scale and those interested in the fall were very active.

All kinds of stocks were affected, more especially mining shares, which were likewise influenced by fears that the wave of industrial prosperity is beginning to abate.

The weakness of Russian stocks was primarily due to the statement that Russia would have to resort to extreme financial measures.

Notwithstanding the improvement in the position of the Imperial Bank it is not probable that there will be any reduction of the official rate of discount. The high rates of exchange with foreign countries will, it is expected, prevent the adoption of this measure. An attempt has been made to exercise pressure upon foreign rates of exchange, but the constant demand for London and Paris bills is so great that it has been impossible to prevent the rise. In the case of London the demand is connected with the heavy fall of South African gold shares, and also with commercial activity in view of the new German tariff.

The unfavorable state of exchange has resulted in the transfer of gold in small quantities from Berlin to Paris.

FREEPORT GRANTS FRANCHISE

Better Connections for Southern Long Island Will Be the Result.

The New York and Long Island Traction Company, in which the Belmont interests and the Long Island Railroad are joint owners, and the Long Beach Transportation Company, have obtained important franchises from the Trustees of the vilage of Freeport.

The Trustees have granted the two companies a franchise to lay tracks and switches to connect their lines at Atlantic and Ocean Avenues, and by a traffic arrangement cars will be run from Brooklyn, Jamaica, Mineola, and Queens direct to the steamboat landing at Little Swift Creek, Freeport where passengers can get boats for Point o' Woods and other resorts on the big outer beach that skirts Long Island's south side.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

Surplus Only Slightly Reduced Despite Large Loss of Cash.

A loss of $3,305,400 in cash was reported in yesterday's bank statement, but the decrease in reserve requirements was so closely adjusted to the falling off in cash that the surplus reserve was reduced by only $116,975. This showing confirms the estimates in banking circles on Friday that the loan and deposit items would correct, so far as the surplus reserve was concerned, the loss in cash which the banks were known to have suffered during the week. The amount of deposits reported yesterday was smaller by $12,753,700 than those of the previous week, and loans showed a reduction of $8,463,100. The small reduction in surplus brings that item practically to the $5,000,000 mark, the exact figures being only a few thousand dollars over that amount. A year ago at this time the banks had a surplus reserve of $8,389,700 against deposits of $1,189,970,000, which is $160,000,000 more than the banks hold at present.

The items of last week's bank statement, the changes from the preceding week, and the statement of March 4, 1905, follow:

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

A Lawson Company Sans Lawson—Banner Year in Montana.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 3.—During the weakness and irregularity of the stock markets this week the Boston coppers have maintained a steadiness and show of strength which has given point to views perviously expressed in this correspondence regarding the stability of the situation. Twenty-cent copper is looked for within sixty days, and meanwhile there is little disposition to let go of properties which show proved value. The quotations have shown strength and firmness of tone which indicate clearly enough how Boston looks at the future of the market.

Little is known of the new ventures which have come into print this week. The incorporators of the "Lawson Consolidated Mines Company," organized at Kittery, Me., with $10,000,000 capital, do not include Thomas W., at least his name is not among them, and there is no statement of the district in which the operations are to be conducted.

This company is distinct from the one promoted by Fred W. Bacorn of Butte, although the latter also is under Maine laws. The Bacorn company proposes to explore north of the present limits of the Butte copper belt. Its capital is $5,000,000.

Osceola's annual report was the cause of much favorable comment. Despite strikes and accidents, which reduced production between 7 and 8 per cent., the going price of copper was such as to allow of $6 in dividends as against $4 in 1904, and to leave almost as large a surplus as last year. The copper cost 10.68.

In connection with the increase in the Wolverine dividend some very handsome things are being said about the late John Stanton, its founder. Thirteen dollars in a year on a par value of $25 is indeed "going some." The present price of the stock is 184.

Some estimated outputs for February at the lake are as follows: Calumet and Hecla, 8,360 tons; Tamarack, 800; Isle Royale, 105; Ahmeek, 95. Mineral production is estimated as follows: Osceola, 1,135; Wolverine, 480; Franklin, 480; Mass, 155.

Stockholders of Rhode Island are cheered by Supt. Dennis's report that the Kearsarge lode crosses almost the entire property, and his further remark: "There are so many copper-bearing lodes crossing this property that it seems almost impossible that none can be found which carries copper in paying quantities."

The Victoria, in Ontonagon County, Mich., is expected become a producer with the starting up of its new stamp mill this month. Exceptionally low operating costs are expected.

Boston men have bought the Omega property in the Helvetia district of Arizonia.

Correspondence from Montana chronicles strikes and bonanzas which, if not exaggerated, promise wonders. One of the biggest finds is eleven miles north of Elliston, in Powell County, where it is said the copper runs as high as 70 per cent. Other finds are in the Big Chief mine, the Provost claim, and the Gould & Currie mine, near Elkhorn, and the indications are that 1906 will prove the banner year in Montana mining.

BANK FIGURES.

BANKERS AS DIRECTORS

Wall Street's View of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.'s Retirement.

MORGAN & CO. IN MANY ROADS

Railroad Relations of Other Firms—Results from Banking Point of View of Severance of Such Connections.

No intimation has yet been given by other prominent banking houses that they intend to follow the lead of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in retiring from the Directorates of all railroad companies. The formal reason for the retirement of that firm from participation in railroad management was the lack of sufficient time to care for their own business and at the same time devote proper attention to railroad corporation matters.

In connection with the reason assigned by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for their retirement from railroad boards, it is interesting to recall the statement made by Jacob H. Schiff before the insurance investigation committee that the average Director was a negligible quantity in the management of corporations. Mr. Schiff said that for the most part a Director's advice is sought by the executive officers only when they choose to do so, and that the Director under ordinary circumstances is powerless to detect irregularities in the management owing to the ease with which these may be concealed by the officers in actual charge of a corporation's affairs.

The general belief in the financial district is that the action of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. can be directly attributed to the developments in the insurance investigation which showed that partners in banking houses who were at the same time Directors in railroads with which their firms had financial transactions were often placed in embarrassing positions. The simplest way out of this situation, of course, was to withdraw from formal participation in the management of railroads while at the same time retaining all the friendly relations which in the past have resulted in the firm securing the bulk of the financing of the roads with which they were connected. Wall Street will regard Kuhn, Loeb & Co. as being as closely connected with Union Pacific affairs now as in the past, although no longer officially connected with the road. At the same time that banking house will be in a position of greater freedom without, in all probability, experiencing any diminution of its influence in financial plans related to the railroads from which the members of the firm have retired.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co.'s action gives special interest to the railroad alliances of other prominent banking houses, some of which have even more extensive railroad connections than those which heretofore have been held by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. J. P. Morgan & Co., for instance, in the person of one or another of their partners, hold Directorates in no less than sixty-two railroad corporations. It is true, of course, that a large part of the list represents roads subsidiary to one or another of the important systems in which Morgan & Co. are interested. At the same time the fact serves clearly to illustrate the great extent to which banking houses are represented in the direction of railroad affairs.

The railroad Directorships held by the members of four or five of the firms which have been most prominently connected with railroad financing in recent years, including the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. itself, are given in the following list:

J. P. MORGAN & CO.

J. P. Morgan.—Carthage and Adirondack, Clearwater and Raquette Lake, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis, Columbus, Hope and Greenburg, Fulton Chain Railway, Harlem River and Port Chester, Jersey City and Bayonne, Lake Erie and Western, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Mohawk and Malone, New England Railroad, New Jersey Junction Railroad, New Jersey Shore Line, New York and Harlem, New York and Putnam, New York Central and Hudson River, New York, New Haven and Hartford, Niagara Falls Branch Railroad, Raquette Lake Railroad, Walkill Valley, West Shore Railroad, Central New England, Hartford and Connecticut Western, Michigan Central, Naugatuck Railroad, New Haven and Derby, New York and Ottawa, New York, Chicago and St. Louis, New York, Ontario and Western, Pittsburg and Lake Erie, Poughkeepsie Bridge Railroad, Rutland Railroad, St. Lawrence and Adirondack.

John B. Dennis.—Houston and Shreveport.

LADENBURG, THALMANN & CO.

Ernst Thalmann.—Birmingham and Atlantic, and Seaboard Air Line.

Richard Limburger.—Northern Alabama Coal, Iron and Railway Company.

Benjamin S. Guinness.—Florida West Shore.

HALLGARTEN & CO.

Hugo Blumenthal.—Toledo, St. Louis and Western.

Hans Winterfeldt.—Colorado and Southern.

Harry Bronner.—Colorado and Southern and Colorado Midland.

J. P. Morgan holds the largest number of Directorships, numbering all told twenty-one. Charles Steel of J. P. Morgan & Co. is second in the list with nineteen Directorships. The other members of Morgan & Co. hold few positions in railroad Directorates. Some of them in fact do not appear at all in the list of railroad Directors.

Speyer & Co. and Blair & Co. are represented on a number of boards, but the railroad interests of these firms are far less diversified than those of Morgan & Co.

The relations of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to the railroads with which their firm was connected have always been regarded as of a more strictly financial character than those of the Morgan interests in the roads with which Morgan & Co. have been connected. In other words, the members of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are believed to have held places on railroad boards principally for the purpose of being informed at first hand of the affairs of the railroads whose securities they were handling in large amounts, and to be in a position, moreover, to fully protect the interest of their clients who purchased such securities from them.

Mr. Morgan and his associates are regarded as taking a much more active part than this in the management of a number of the railroads that have been under Morgan domination. The affairs of the Erie Railroad, for example, have always been considered as being much more under Morgan direction than Union Pacific affairs have been under Kuhn, Loeb direction. The purpose in referring to this commonly admitted fact is to indicate the improbability of Morgan & Co. adopting the policy announced last week by Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

In commenting on the policy adopted by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. other bankers generally took the position that while it was eminently proper to avoid entangling alliances it could in no sense be regarded, generally speaking, as improper for a member of a banking house to be on the board of a railroad company whose securities were being handled by his firm. The view expressed by bankers was that the question is one for individual decision rather than one which can be made a matter of general ruling.

Of the practical effect, from a banking point of view, of the withdrawal of a banking house from railroad Directorates, much has been said in Wall Street during the past week. Probably the concensus of opinion is that in the long run a banking house of prominence having no official connection with any special group of railroads will be in a position to command fully as much business as would result from such special association. One of the difficulties which have at times been encountered by bankers who have been accustomed to handle the securities of two or three systems has been that on occasions funds have been sought from them for use in ways which were antagonistic to other interests represented by the firms. In the case of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., for instance, it happened that the firm floated securities of some of the Gould roads even after the Goulds had decided upon plans which were antagonistic to the interests of the Union Pacific, with which, of course, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were more intimately connected than they were with the Missouri Pacific and other Gould lines. Acting simply as bankers, with no official connection with any railroad, this situation would be far less embarrassing.

Donetz Coal Combine.

Under the lead of the Mineral Salt and Coal Company of Southern Russia, a French concern, most of the coal mines of the Donetz region have formed a consortium to regulate the output and sale of coal in that district, in order to prevent a threaening ruinous competition. This combination controls about 80 per cent. of the coal product of the Donetz.

AMERICAN FOREIGN TRADE.

Steady Growth of Business with Various Countries Reported.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The trade of the United States with Austria-Hungary during the fiscal year 1905, according to a bulletin of the Department of Commerce and Labor, was approximately $22,100,000, of which over $10,500,000 are stated to have been imports and $11,600,000 exports. From 1895 to 1904, inclusive, imports into Austria-Hungary from the United States increased $21,700,000.

Consul Kellogg at Colon, in a report made public by the Department of Commerce and Labor, says the total freight carried over the single-track Panama Railroad in 1904 was 415,000 tons, an increase of 18 per cent. of 1903.

Freight traffic from the United States in 1904 increased by 4,500 tons to South Pacific ports; 6,200 tons to Central America and Mexico, and to Panama, 3,100 ton.s From Europe the increase was 20,000 tons, while the increase from Pacific points to Europe was 14,000 tons.

Consul General Dietrich at Guayaquil, Ecuador, in a report says the United States is now in the lead of all countries in sales of commodities to that country, selling $2,374,000 worth.

The Ecuadorian Government has contracted with a French syndicate for the construction of a railroad from Esmeraldas to Quito, $5,000,000 to be expended in the road, wharves, and docks.

Minister Sorsby, at La Paz, advises that the Bolivian Congress has authorized the proposed Government railroad lines, extending 1,300 miles in different directions from La Paz, which American surveying parties have been mapping out for over a pear.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—During the four months of the present fiscal year Mexican trade with the United States showed an increase in imports of over $1,000,000. Exports to the United States were $56,801,250, a gain of more than $13,000,000 over the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year.

ST. LOUIS SHORT A FIREMAN.

Maybe He Was Lost Overboard and Maybe He Didn't Even Start.

When the American liner St. Louis arrived here yesterday morning it was reported that a fireman named Frederick Lathrop, said to be a young American, who had signed to work his way home, had probably been lost from the liner. Chief Engineer George Cartmeff of the St. Louis was inclined to think, however, that the young man had failed to get on the steamer or had gone ashore on the tender when the steamer touched at Cherbourg.

The fact that when the St. Louis sailed from Southampton she was eleven firemen short caused the other officers to agree with the Chief Engineer.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, APPELLATE DIVISION, First Department.—In the matter of the application of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners for the City of New York for the appointment of three commissioners to determine and report whether a rapid transit railway or railways for the conveyance and transportation of persons and property as determined by the Board ought to be constructed and operated.—Brooklyn & Manhattan Loop Lines, Manhattan Route.

Public notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, the undersigned Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners will apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the First Judicial Department, at a term thereof to be held at the Appellate Division Court House, Madison Avenue and 25th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 9th day of March, 1906, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of three commissioners in the above entitled matter to determine and report after due hearing whether a railway or railways in the said city for the transportation of persons and property ought to be constructed and operated. The papers upon which the aforesaid application will be made are the petition of the said board dated the 8th day of January, 1906, and the affidavits and papers accompanying the same, all of which were filed in the office of the Clerk of said Appellate Division on or about the 9th day of February, 1906, and in addition thereto such other papers as shall be presented to the Court by the said Board.

A description of the route and general plan of construction of the said railway or railways forms part of the papers filed as aforesaid with the said Clerk of the Appellate Division. The following is a brief and substantial synopsis of the said route in the County of New York:

In the Borough of Manhattan: From the Williamsburg Bridge the route passes underground in Delancey Street, near Norfolk, and then runs west under Delancey Street to the Bowery, and under the proposed extension of Delancey Street to the corner of Centre and Grand Streets. The line then continues southerly through Centre Street and William Street.

Provision is made for three tunnels, which may be described as the Old Slip Tunnel, the Maiden Lane Tunnel, and the Beekman Street Tunnel.

The route of the Old Slip Tunnel is under William Street and Old Slip.

The Maiden Lane Tunnel begins at the corner of William Street and Liberty Street, and then passes under Maiden Lane.

The Beekman Street Tunnel passes under Beekman Street.

Each of these three tunnels passes under the East River to the easterly boundary of the County of New York.

There are several spurs forming a part of this route. One spur begins at Grand and Centre Streets in Manhattan, and runs west under Grand Street and Desbrosses Street to the Desbrosses Street ferry. Another spur forms a connection, by means of a line under Canal Street, with the Manhattan end of the Manhattan Bridge. A third connects with the City Hall loop of the present subway by means of a line under Beekman Street.

The object of the aforesaid application is to obtain the appointment of commissioners who shall determine after public hearing of all parties interested whether such railway or railways ought to be constructed and operated, and shall report the evidence taken to said Appellate Division, together with a report of their determination, which report, if in favor of the construction and operation of such railway or railways, (as this Board will ask that it shall be,) shall, when confirmed by said Court, be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners along the line of said railway or railways.

THE PITTSBURGH BULLFROG MINING CORPORATION, LTD.,

IS DEVELOPING one of the most promising properties in the famous Bullfrog District, which we believe will prove to be the extension of the Montgomery Shoshone mine, as the rhyolite outcrop in which the vein is carried extends across our properties for 3,000 feet, and the vein values are proved to within 300 feet of our line.

IN NINE MONTHS there has been blocked out in the Montgomery Shoshone Mine over $8,000,000 worth of ore, and we believe at equal depth we shall find equal values.

OUR DIRECTORS AND THEIR FRIENDS have shown the strongest possible faith in this by subscribing for 500,000 shares out of the total capitalization of 1,000,000, before offering a share for sale, and in becoming a stockholder you become an equal partner in proportion to your investment.

ONLY A LIMITED ISSUE of stock is now offered at

from the proceeds of which will be carried on the continuation of the development work now in progress, and the price of the stock is subject to advance without notice as development proceeds.

THERE IS NOT A SINGLE COMPANY operating on the extension of the great Montgomery Shoshone vein whose shares have not had a great advance in price over that at which they were first offered, nor is there a single mining company operating in the proven mineral district of Bullfrog which has not made good.

IF YOU REGARD GOLD MINING AS A RISK, is it not worth while taking a chance in such a property, where the possibilities of loss are at a minimum, while the possibilities of profit are almost unlimited?

MONTGOMERY SHOSHONE SHARES have advanced from 10 cents to $5 in twelve months.

IT IS VERY RARELY INDEED that a mining company possesses such a strong Board of Directors as conduct the affairs of this company, among whom is one of Pittsburgh's capitalists (our President); one of the leading members of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange (our Secretary); two of the foremost bankers of Southern Nevada (our Vice President and Treasurer); and Mr. Frank T. Bonneau, President of the Shoshone Bullfrog, known throughout the West for the past twenty years as an able and honest mining operator.

NOW, those who are prepared to join us on an equal basis in developing this property want to bear in mind that we are NOT within a few hundred feet of, BUT, according to the best opinions obtainable from those acquainted with the district, ON THE GREAT MONTGOMERY SHOSHONE VEIN.

THE GREAT PROFITS in every mining enterprise are realized by those who invest while the property is being developed from a prospect to a mine; in short, at the beginning. Such an opportunity is now presented in the shares of this corporation.

SUBSCRIPTIONS BY MAIL to be accompanied by check to the order of this Corporation at the rate of 35 cents per share for the number desired. Minimum subscriptions accepted, 100 shares.

CAN YOU BEAT IT?
A LOT. ¼-ACRE.

Every man and woman who labors by the sweat of their brow digs by day and night in the channels of life to find the streak of good fortune. Grasp such an opportunity as we present here, and we, as absolute leaders in the suburban business of New York, are always first in the field to give the honest and industrious wage-earner and the humble rent-payers a show to make money by small investments, or a chance to procure a place for a home in low-priced property on the very easy terms which have made our name the envy of the real estate world.

Our Real Estate Transactions Are with the Masses.

We deal almost exclusively with the man or woman who works for a living—those whose ambition and love is to own a home of their own or to invest in a small way for a sure profit.

MARCH 1906

COMMUTER ASKS A POSER OF PEOPLE'S INSTITUTE

If Your Work's Monotonous, Why Don't You Quit?

COME OUT TO THE COUNTRY

"He's Answered All the Problems," Said a Man Who Had Planned to Quiz Mr. Sprague.

The regular Sunday night quizzing of lecturers on ethical and economical subjects, by members of the People's Institute in Cooper Union Hall was made more interesting than usual last night by the appearance of a new type of questioner in the big audience. Leslie W. Sprague, the lecturer of the evening, had answered many queries from persons profoundly interested in the subject of discussion, "The Ethics of Work."

He had put himself in target position when he declared that the monotony of machine working was hurtful to the development of the man at the machine.

The effect of monotony as the result of the mechanization of work made an issue that was welcome, evidently, to his audience. The members grabbed this subdivision of his topic, and one of the audience, after apologizing for his lack of command of the language of his adopted country, raised the question of the revolutionary Socialistic Party's possible reform of economic conditions.

It was after he had propounded his momentous question that the new element in the People's Institute disentangled himself from those packed about him and requested the attention of the lecturer and of the multitude.

"I'd like to ask a question," he said at the top of a powerful voice. "It's this: Ain't it better for you folks who find your work monotonous to quit it?"

No answer was offered so the stranger resumed:

"Why not get out in the country?"

Still no one vouchsafed an answer but at least 1,200 pairs of eyes were fastened on the stranger and those eyes saw that he was a commuter strayed, a suburbanite who had missed his train or had read about the forum of the people in Cooper Union Hall and had come to town to vent his feelings and opinion.

"If you find it monotonous," said the commuter, with a ring in his voice which carried every word to every corner of the hall, "come out to the country. You get variety in country life. It is pleasant out where I live. Come out. There ain't anything monotonous about it in the suburbs. That's the answer; if things don't satisfy you in town, get out where you can be satisfied."

Charles Sprague Smith, who is the Chairman of the Institute, attempted to repeat the answer in the form of a question to the lecturer, who had been quizzed in the matter of the relation of capital to labor, but there was in the brief statement of the commuter so much of novelty and so little of sophistry that no comment was made. Some in the audience who had dreams of owning a henhouse on the installment plan some day and a front and back yard applauded—one of them applauded violently. The thinkers and regular quizzers collapsed into silence unusual.

In the course of his address Mr. Sprague said that his little daughter at home made one night an addition to the Lord's Prayer. She prayed in this wise: "Give us this day our daily bread—with butter on it." That, he declared, was sometimes the prayer of the worker.

In expounding his doctrines on the ethics of work he gave another personal illustration. He declared that recently he had occasion to ask a business man what would be best for the honest person to do when he was confronted with the temptations that beset the average business man. "Turn and run," was the reply given to him, and to this was added the comment of another business man in the party that if the advice was followed there would not be a single citizen of New York City found below Fourteenth Street.

Where the Institute audience had found delight in baiting the Rev. Dr. Slicer in his recent course of lectures, with Mr. Sprague it seemed to lack capacity for questions, especially after the commuter had arisen and thrown into the forum the proposition that if the Institute didn't like work in the city it might go out into the country.

"The yap answered all the problems," said a man in the front row who had written out a series of stumping questions for Mr. Sprague.

MRS. BOOTH SEES PROTEGES.

Tells an Audience of 1,500 That They Are Prisoners, Too.

Under the auspices of the Twenty-third Street Branch of the Y. M. C. A. a revival was held yesterday afternoon at the Grand Opera House. The chief speaker was Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth. H. D. Dickson presided. The orchestra was crowded with men.

Among them were several who had served terms in prison and are now living honest lives, holding positions of trust, men whom Mrs. Booth put on the right road through her work among prisoners. They make it a point never to miss a chance of hearing "The Little Mother," as they call her, and after her addresses of shaking hands with her and telling her of their success.

Before Mrs. Booth's address there was a concert by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, violin solos by Master Sammy Kotler, and songs by the Akerlind Ladies' Quartet. Mrs. Booth said in part:

"The triumph of Christianity is that Christ's power is not dependent on circumstances. When the world has given up a man, or a woman, as hopelessly steeped in sin, Christ steps in to see the spark of goodness that is in every human soul, no matter how debased and dwarfed, to kindle and make radiant the light and bring to that soul the touch of sweetness and beauty.

"Now, I know that there must be many among you who are shackled, like the prisoners I visit. You are prisoners of ignoble sins, which you hide from other men as much as you can. It may be one sin, or another, such as drink. All you have to do is to look up, declare that with the power of the Saviour you will be the master of yourselves and the faithful servants of your Redeemer."

Mrs. Booth asked her audience to bow their heads in prayer, and such as had made the resolve to be free to lift their hands. One or two hands were lifted somewhat timidly, and then they went up by the score. Just before the conclusion of the exercises those of the audience who were Christians and those who had resolved to be Christians were asked to stand up together. Of the 1,500 men in the audience not more than fifty kept their seats.

NEED MORE MONEY, NOT LESS.

Child Labor Law Enforcers Object to Reduced Appropriation.

The appropriation for the Labor Department, contained in the Annual Appropriation bill, passed last Thursday by the Assembly, is $8,000 less than last year. This news has caused indignation among the settlements and other social workers who have struggled for years to have the child labor laws enforced. Secretary George A. Hall, of the New York Child Labor Committee, said yesterday:

"The action of the Assembly in reducing the Labor Department appropriation is the most severe attack the child labor laws have sustained in years. We cannot believe that the Senate will concur when the facts are understood. The present bill gives this department $8,000 less than last year's appropriation in spite of the urgent request of Commissioner P. Tecumseh Sherman for an increase of $21,000. It is impossible to enforce the child labor laws in any adequate manner unless this increase is granted.

"For the first time since our committee's organization we have a Commissioner of Labor in whom we have entire confidence. Although but ten months in charge of this department, the record he has made clearly proves that if he is provided with the necessary funds he will give to these humane laws an enforcement unknown hitherto and impossible if financial support is denied. More Inspectors are needed, which means additional appropriation for salaries and traveling expenses.

"Besides crippling the department in its child labor law enforcement, this bill, if passed by the Senate, will result in inadequate enforcement of several other laws, such as that which requires licensing tenements in which clothing is made, to insure the protection of the public health, protection of employes against dangerous machinery, that which insures sanitary conditions in bakeries, and other matters of great importance."

OCEAN TRAVELLERS.

The Hon. William Beresford and Bishop McEvay Among the Arrivals.

Among the passengers who arrived from Liverpool and Queenstown on the Cunarder Carmania yesterday were:

The Hon. William Beresford, a cousin of Admiral Lord Charles Beresford; Master G. Beresford, Harold St. G. Ogden, Major W. H. Edwardes of Liverpool, the Right Rev. F. P. McEvay, Roman Catholic Bishop of London, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Mackey, John T. Hearn, Wallace C. Henderson, C. D. Langhorne and Miss Langhorne, Dr. Z. B. Babbitt, the Rev. J. T. Aylward, Mr. and Mrs. Montague Baird, Don Gelasio Gaetani, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Comstock and Miss Dorothy Comstock, Henri Cruchet, Dr. J. F. Frantz, John M. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Congreve Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Prime, Mr. and Mrs. E. H Wendell, Thomas and Ernest Wye, and Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Brooks.

On the American liner St. Louis, from Southampton and Cherbourg, there arrived, among others:

Capt. W. H. Bridgewater, Abdon Corqueda, Dr. Rynier Van Nest, Dr. Hugo von Hagen, William Judson Johnson, Miss Inez Sprague, daughter of ex-Gov. Sprague of Rhode Island; Mrs. J. D. McCallum, Mrs. James Morrison, Isaac Purdy, Mrs. C. A. Whitney, Miss Josephine Dowling, Mrs. S. E. Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Dufaur, and Mrs. P. H. McMahon.

FIELD HOSPITAL FOR GUARD.

It Will Be Like That Attached to the Regular Army.

The New York National Guard is to have a field hospital, to be attached to headquarters. Orders for its organization will be issued in a few days. This new hospital will be used in caring for the sick and wounded when the guard is in camp or performing riot duty, or on other service.

The new hospital will not in any way interfere with the present regimental hospital corps. When the troops are in the field all sick men in the care of the regimental hospital, who had not recovered after twenty-four hours, can be turned over to the field hospital, as is done in the army.

The field hospital will be equipped with all the latest Government supplies, such as ambulances, wagons, stretchers, cots, &c. It will consist in time of peace of four officers and forty-six enlisted men.

All that medical science has learned in the Russo-Japanese war will be fully taken into account by the new field hospital, and it will be provided with a portable laboratory, whereby water, food, and ground can be examined in order to prevent disease.

Dr. William S. Terriberry of the Twelfth Regiment, who served as a medical officer in the war with Spain, will, it is understood, command the new field hospital, and will be assisted by Dr. William E. Butler of the Twenty-third Regiment and Dr. T. A. Neal, late of the Seventh Regiment. The fourth officer has not yet been selected.

A MAN OF MANY NAMES SHADOWED MRS. POILLON

Maybe He's Ross or Wilson or Williams—Maybe Not.

IS FINED BY MAGISTRATE

Declares He Knows Nothing About Brokaw or Carl Fischer-Hansen —Pays Up and Departs.

The man who was arrested in Fifth Avenue, near Twenty-eighth Street, last Friday night on the complaint of Mrs. Katherine Poillon, whose breach of promise suit against W. Gould Brokaw was recently settled out of court for $17,500, was fined $10 yesterday in Jefferson Market Court by Magistrate Cornell. Mrs. Poillon complained that the man had annoyed her by following her and repeatedly speaking to her.

Despite the endeavors of ex-Assistant District Attorney Goldsmith, who appeared for Mrs. Poillon, he was unable to make sure of the identity of the defendant. When he was arrested he said he was Arthur Ross and refused his address. Yesterday he testified that he was Henry K. Wilson of 14 Hamilton Avenue, Yonkers. After that another witness, who was called to corroborate his story, said he had known him for several years, and had always supposed that his name was Williams. Mrs. Poillon's statement to the court indicated that she believed him to be a private detective who had been shadowing her.

Mrs. Poillon was the first witness examined. She said she first met the defendant a year and a half ago and that he was then doing detective work. Last Tuesday night she was dining with her sister at the Victoria Hotel when Mr. Ross-Wilson-Williams came in with another man and took a table near her. Then she heard him say to the other man: "There's Mrs. Poillon, the woman who tried to blackmail Brokaw."

On Friday night she and her sister dined at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and on leaving the hotel she saw Mr. Ross-Wilson-Williams standing in the doorway. He followed them north in Fifth Avenue as far as Twenty-seventh Street and then passed in front of them "making," added Mrs. Poillon to the Magistrate, "the remark that I told you."

Magistrate Cornell appeared to know what Mrs. Poillon meant, for he nodded comprehendingly. Mrs. Poillon went on to say that after Mr. Ross-Wilson-Williams had passed close to her several times more she called a policeman and had him arrested.

She followed him to the Tenderloin Station, where, she said, the prisoner walked up to a man standing in front of the desk and said: "This woman is trying to get money from Carl Fischer-Hansen. She's trying to do him."

Counsel for the defendant said he would call several witnesses to testify to the good character of the defendant. Solomon Hanford of the law firm of Choate, Hanford & Larocque was the first. He said he had known the prisoner for several years, and had visited him when he lived with his family at the Hotel Aberdeen, 17 West Thirty-second Street. Mr. Hanford balked when asked the real name of the defendant, and, when pressed, was excused from answering on the ground that to tell would be to give information derived from his client.

Then the defendant was called to the stand.

"Is Ross your real name?" asked Mr. Goldsmith. The witness admitted that it was not.

"Why didn't you give your right name when you were arrested?" asked the lawyer.

"I did not like the possibility of notoriety, owing to the peculiar character of the case," replied the defendant.

On advice of counsel he declined to be sworn. When pressed, however, he said that he was Henry K. Wilson of Yonkers. He denied that he had made the remarks attributed to him by Mrs. Poillon, either at the Victoria Hotel or at the station house. He also declared that he had not been at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on Friday night, as testified by Mrs. Poillon.

In reply to a question by Mr. Goldsmith he said he had never lived at the Hotel Aberdeen with his wife and children. He denied with emphasis that he knew anything about the Brokaw case of Carl Fischer-Hansen.

"That's not in my line," he added.

A man who said he was John Lee, a contractor of 210 Fifth Avenue, then testified that he had known the defendant for two years, and had always supposed him to be a contractor. Mr. Goldsmith asked him if he knew the defendant's real name. He said he did. "What is it?" asked Mr. Goldsmith.

"His real name is Williams," said Lee.

Mr. Ross-Wilson-Williams stared at the witness, while several of the spectators laughed.

"I'm going to fine this man $10," said Magistrate Cornell. "That's all I can do."

Mr. Ross-Wilson-Williams paid up with alacrity and departed in haste.

"I don't care what they do with this man," said Mrs. Poillon, "so long as he leaves me alone. I shall do the same with other private detectives who dog my footsteps as I have done with this one. This man could tell a lot about the other side of the case, but I don't suppose he would dare give them away."

Henry K. Wilson is not known at the Yonkers address.

Carl Fischer-Hansen sent out a statement yesterday covering his relation to the Brokaw-Poillon case. In it he said:

"I never have been the attorney of record for Mr. Brokaw. I was only connected with the case in question in an advisory capacity for about five months in the Summer of 1902. Since then I have had absolutely no connection with the matter at all. Mr. Brokaw had from the beginning of the suit taken a firm stand, which he consistently kept to the end, to wit: that he was under no obligations, legally or morally, to the woman in question, and refused absolutely to give her, or permit her to be given on his behalf one single cent. Not one cent has ever been offered her or her attorneys by Mr. Brokaw or by anybody representing Mr. Brokaw, or his family, and least of all by me.

"I have never had the remotest interest in this Poillon woman's whereabouts or movements, and I have never been directly or indirectly interested in having her followed or watched, and it is therefore utterly false and untrue that the man whom she had arrested for annoying her has ever been in my employ, or in the employ of anybody connected with Mr. Brokaw; I never heard of the man before; do not know who he is, and don't care."

75 FAMILIES STRIKE AGAINST HIGHER RENTS

Start by Raising a Fund to Carry on Their Fight.

TEAR DOWN "TO LET" SIGNS

And Put Up Others Not Encouraging to Those Who Might Move Into Five Williamsburg Tenements.

The seventy-five families that live in the five tenement houses at 90 to 100 Cook Street, Brooklyn, have joined in a rebellion against the increase in rent by the landlords. From the way in which the leaders are conducting the fight, and have handled the opening skirmishes, it looks as if this contest would be a good deal longer and harder than others of the sort have been.

The trouble started last Thursday, when the collectors came around for the March rents. Every tenant found that an increase of from $1 to $3 had been made in his bill. A general revolution was organized at once. One and all they refused to pay the additional charges. They declared that it was a clear case of oppression on the part of the owners, who, the tenants declare, have raised the rents solely to get a higher price for the buildings, which it is said they are trying to sell.

The reply of the landlords was to issue dispossess notices to their refractory lodgers obliging them to pay up or be ejected from the premises next Tuesday. They also had "To Let" signs posted on the houses, but these were not allowed to stay up more than five minutes.

The tenants then formed into a sort of association, with M. L. Cohen at the head. To prevent any of the members showing the white feather at the last moment each has had to subscribe $3 to a common fund. This money will be forfeited by any one who leaves the ranks in the strike.

All day yesterday the tenements were decorated with signs of various shapes and sizes, some on wood, some on paper, some in English, and some in Yiddish. Some of them were:

We'll Fight to the End!
To Hell with the Landlords!
Don't Try to Rent Rooms Here if You Know What's Good for You!
Down with the Landlord Trust!

Whenever anybody came along the street who looked as if he was after a room his attention was called to the signs, and if he seemed in doubt as to their meaning it was quickly explained to him. The presence of a crowd of excited-looking men and women then seemed to be enough to send him on his way.

In the afternoon an indignation meeting was held in Rubin's American Hall. Most of the strikers were present with their families. Speeches were made by both men and women. Amid great excitement Mrs. Nettie Singer, the Chairman, closed the meeting with these words:

"We are all in this fight together. No one is going to back out now. People may think we are going to get licked, but if we all stick together we'll fool them. On Tuesday every mother here should bring her children and join in the procession to the Lee Avenue Court, where our dispossess cases are to be tried.

"Remember that any one who backs out loses the forfeit money. There should be at least four hundred persons in this procession if you all do your duty. Don't let the threats of the landlords frighten you. They can't do what they say they will. Let our motto be: 'One for all, all for one!'"

Mrs. Singer told a reporter that the tenants were confident of winning the strike, and that none of them would be turned out. She said they had engaged counsel to argue against the threatened evictions.

Some of the strikers say that the landlords played a trick on them by which they hoped to gain their point without trouble. They say that when the receipts for the February rents were returned to them the amounts were in every case raised $2 or $3, and that the change was not noticed by any one. Thus, when the March bills were presented and denounced as excessive, the collectors called for the receipts for the previous month and said there had been no change. Thus they tried to make a man who had only paid $15 the month before believe that he had really given up $18. That did not work, however.

FATHER SINGS ALL NIGHT.

Arrested on Complaint of His Family That They Can't Sleep.

Charged with keeping his family awake all night by singing, Bernard Holman, a merchant of Bayonne, N. J., has been arrested, on complaint of his wife. Mrs. Holman says it is impossible for her or her children to sleep because her husband sings, dances, and shouts till daybreak.

New Firehouses for Rockaway.

After an inspection of a new paid fire service established along the Rockaway shore front Fire Commissioner O'Brien, Deputy Commissioner Wise and Chief Croker decided the other day, it is said, to try to get an appropriation to build six brick modern firehouses down there. The companies at present have poor quarters. The cost of the new quarters will be about $250,000.

ALL PREACHED HIGH LICENSE.

Sermons Throughout Jersey in Support of Pending Bill.

Sermons in support of the high license excise bill were preached in every Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal pulpit in New Jersey yesterday. Circular letters from Bishops McFaul and Connor and Bishops Lines and Scarborough directed their clergy to urge united support of the measure designed to reform the liquor traffic.

Bishop McFaul, in St. Mary's Cathedral, Trenton, said:

"March 4 will be forever memorable in New Jersey as the day in which the Christian pulpit throughout the State raised its voice against the shocking abuses of the liquor traffic, and as the day on which the Christian denominations had pledged themselves to stand shoulder to shoulder in defense of morality and the American home against the entrance of politics into the saloon business, and to continue the battle until such laws are enacted as will cause the liquor traffic to be conducted without detriment to the peace and virtue of the community."

He added that the Catholic Church does not condemn the use of intoxicants, but determinedly opposes their abuse.

In Jersey City most of the police said they did not seek to drive the saloon keepers out of business. Their object was to regulate the traffic and make it as respectable as possible. The Rev. Henry Ter Woert, rector of St. Mary's Catholic Church, named one saloon in Railroad Avenue as a disgrace to the city.

City officials were generally held responsible by the speakers for prevailing conditions. Chief of Police Murphy and the Excise Commissioners denied, however, that they were to blame.

In sermons preached in the Oranges the character of some of the local drinking places was severely commented on.

In Morristown pastors urged their parishioners to use every influence with the members of the Legislature in support of the pending excise bill. Petitions were circulated.

GIRL'S HEAD BATTERED IN.

Murderous Assault with a Cleaver in a West Side House.

Cora Wilson, a young woman who for a week had been living with a man named John Gugler in the furnished room house at 226 East Forty-first Street, was murderously assaulted with a meat cleaver in her room early yesterday morning. Gugler has not been seen since the police arrived at the house. They had not caught him up to a late hour last night.

About 4 o'clock in the morning E. A. Grosse, a laborer, who has the front room on the second floor, was aroused by screams and cries in the next room. He ran out into the hall just in time to catch sight of a man fleeing down the stairs and out the front door. He called to him to stop, but the man paid no heed.

Then Grosse hurried to the room whence the cries had come. The young woman was on the bed, lying as if she had been flung there. She was unconscious from a bad wound on the right side of her head. She was quickly taken to the Bellevue Hospital in an ambulance.

Last night the doctors said that she would probably die, but that she still had a fighting chance for life. She was in such a hysterical, excited condition all the morning that she could not answer the questions put to her. Later in the day, however, Detectives Norton and Doran of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station took a man, whom they had arrested, to see her.

He said he was Charles Hall, a waiter, of 201 East Thirty-fourth Street. He was picked up on Third Avenue, and is held as a suspicious character. The police say that he was very friendly with the girl until a week ago. As soon as she saw Hall the girl burst into tears. After he had talked to her for a few moments she quieted down, and said that Gugler had struck her with the cleaver. She absolutely refused to give any further information about the man who had attacked her.

ESKIMO DOG IS A MOTHER.

Visitors See Five New Puppies at the Bronx "Zoo."

The New York Zoological Garden, in Bronx Park, received a notable accession to its list of regular boarders yesterday when Nellie, the Eskimo dog, gave birth to five puppies. Originally the Garden boasted a pack of eight full-grown Eskimo dogs, but the climate did not seem to suit them, and one by one they died until there was only one survivor—Peary, a giant male.

Peary was lonesome and it was determined to find him a mate. For a long time this seemed impossible, but finally Nellie, a fine animal which had served with the Ziegler polar expedition, was obtained. The attendants were almost as much elated over the new puppies as was Nellie, and the recent arrivals were pointed out to all visitors.

CRISIS AT ALGECIRAS; NO GERMAN CONCESSION

Russia Proposes That France and Spain Control Police.

RADOWITZ OPPOSES PROJECT

France Is Willing to Acept It, and It Is Indorsed by Spain, Portugal, and England.

ALGECIRAS, March 5.—This afternoon's sitting of the Conference on Moroccan Reforms was marked by an unexpected and important move on the part of the Russian delegates, who laid before the conference an exposition of the police question.

The document, which goes minutely over the existing situation in Morocco and analyzes the position of the various powers, concludes with an argument in favor of the proposition that France and Spain are the most fit to be intrusted with the task of controlling the police force which is about to be created.

Herr von Radowitz, the chief German delegate, admitted that of necessity the police force must be organized by the Sultan, but he asserted that there should be participation by all the powers represented at the conference. The German contention was therefore directly opposed to the Russian suggestion.

Baron Bacheracht, the second Russian delegate, argued that the inefficacy of collective action by the powers in Morocco had been proved by the unsuccessful operation of the International Sanitary Committee at Tangier. He pointed out that French officers' experience with Mussulmans and Spanish officers' experience with Riffians had placed them in the best position to control the Moorish elements which must form the main body of the police.

M. Revoil, the senior French delegate, expressed France's willingness to accept the Russian suggestion, following with the proposal that the police force should consist of 2,000 Moors distributed at eight ports, each having four European non-commissioned officers, and the whole being under the command of sixteen French and Spanish officers, who should be selected with the Sultan's assent, and who should become Moorish officials.

The Spanish delegates strongly supported joint Spanish and French control, arguing that the proximity of France and Spain to Morocco gave them greater interests than the other powers, whose equality of rights, however would not be affected thereby.

The British and Portuguese delegates expressed their agreement with the Russian view. Italy, though inclined to favor the scheme, reserved final approval. Henry White, the chief of the American delegation, and the delegates of the several neutral powers, did not express their views.

The French and British delegates to the conference regard to-day's expressions from the Mediterranean powers as likely to exert great influence on the final vote of the neutrals relative to the policing of Morocco.

Intense activity prevails here. The German delegates show discontent with Saturday's decision to take up the police question before the bank question is completed. The Germans intimate that things are being rushed and say that they do not intend to be pushed. They are said to be counting upon France losing patience and making a false step, which would throw the onus of a rupture upon France.

PARIS, March 5.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day War Minister Etienne, answering inquiries regarding the condition of war supplies, said that every branch of supplies and ammunition was completely assured in case of a mobilization of the troops.

GERMANY'S SIDE OF THE CASE.

Statement by Ambassador Sternburg —Vital Principle Involved.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The charge that the German Emperor is seeking an excuse for trouble with France rather than an agreement about Morocco was emphatically denied this afternoon by Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German Ambassador. "The time has come for plain speech," he said. "Enough has poured into America from European sources about Germany's intentions.

"It was for the specific object of reaching a peaceable arrangement that my Government urged the conference at Algeciras," the Baron said. He declared that Germany was contending for a very important principle at Algeciras. "Important as is the German trade with Morocco," he said, "the commercial side of the question is of secondary consideration. Germany's policy has been and is to preserve the status quo in all countries whose rights rest on the laws of nations. It is this policy alone which has enabled Emperor William to maintain peace in Germany."

The Ambassador said that in the light of "malicious reports from European sources," he felt it his duty to give the facts about Germany's contentions at Algeciras on the main point at issue—that of the policing of Morocco. "That Germany stands for the open door in Morocco is clearly shown," he continued, "by the proposals she has made regarding the international police system and the international bank. Germany believes that if the control of the bank is placed in the hands of France the equality of economic rights will be forfeited and the open door will soon be closed. Africa shows enough examples of assurances given by civilized nations which have gradually vanished, leaving in their place European protectorates.

"Germany has already recognized that France has a preferential position in her frontier regions in spite of the specific provision of the treaty of Madrid stipulating that all the powers shall have equal rights in Morocco. This concession by Germany was only made because of her earnest desire to do everything consistent with the national honor to bring about a peaceful arrangements. Should Germany now recede further she would appear in the eyes of the world as weak, but also—what is of paramount importance—she would be buying peace at the cost of a great international principle, which the future would prove to be poor economy.

"What power can accept the contention that a nation must sacrifice her interests outright simply because they lie in the way of another nation? The greatest good to the greatest number is a law among nations as among individuals."

The Ambassador went on to speak of Germany's rapidly increasing trade with Morocco. He concluded:

"The acceptance of the French proposals with regard to the Bank of Morocco and the polie system, it is Germany's firm belief, would give to France the control of Morocco in all economic and financial matters, thereby closing the door to the rest of the world and destroying rights acquired by treaty."

HIGGINS HALTS ODELL FIGHT.

Tells Emissary of President Action May Be Delayed Until Fall.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 5.—Representative James W. Wadsworth, Sr., left here to-day without accomplishing the object of his mission from Washington, which was to get Gov. Higgins to agree to the ousting of B. B. Odell, Jr., from the Republican State Chairmanship this Spring. Mr. Wadsworth is one of several emissaries from the President who have been here lately trying to get the Governor over to the proposition for the immediate deposition of Mr. Odell.

It is said that Major Wadsworth was sent as a sort of last hope on the part of President Roosevelt to win over the Governor, and that the Washington brigade of the reorganizers' army will probably now come to the conclusion that it will be impossible to get rid of Odell until the State Convention selects a new committee in the Fall.

The story here is that the State Congress delegation chose E. B. Vreeland as their candidate for State Chairman in the hope that the opportunity to have so close a friend at the head of the State organization would tempt the Governor to agree to take immediate action. It looks as if that plan had failed.

When Vreeland's boom came here last week the Governor was very much opposed to the idea of having such a close friend selected, for fear that the people might say he was trying to get control of the State machine. To-day it was stated that Gov. Higgins is not quite so much opposed to the idea of having Vreeland for State Chairman as he was last week, but that he has not changed from his attitude of declining to help oust Odell at this time. The Governor fears that any attempt to remove Mr. Odell summarily would only react against party success next Fall. He does not want to give Odell any excuse for fighting the party next Fall, and he fears that to eject him from the committee at this time might give Odell justification for such a course. Gov. Higgins believes that things will be smoother in the Autumn.

Gov. Higgins has not given up the harmonizing spirit which characterized him in the days of the Odell-Platt split.

RUSHED A SPECIAL FOR A BOY.

Operation Was Imperative, So Railroad Men Hurried for Former Comrade

The New Haven Railroad did its best yesterday to help save the life of the son of a former employe of the company who lives at Port Chester. A call for a special train to carry a doctor reached the Superintendent's office in the Grand Central Station shortly before 11 o'clock, and in less than a minute the order to make it up had been given and acted on, and in eleven minutes the train was waiting for the physician.

"Tell the yard master Joe Hamill's boy is dying," Chief Train Dispatcher W. H. Foster said to one of his assistants, as soon as he got word from the Superintendent's office. "Tell him to hustle; the train is to have the whole road."

And so the word was passed along: "Its for a doctor for Joe Hamill's boy," and nobody asked any questions, but hurried. Supt. Whaley took the message himself over the telephone from Joseph Hamill, who for a long time up to six months ago had been the ticket agent and station master at Port Chester.

"This is Hamill at Port Chester. For God's sake get a train ready to bring Dr. Carpenter up here!" said the voice. "My son has an abscess on the brain, and unless an operation is performed at once he'll die. Never mind the cost, but hustle."

"All right, Joe," said the Superintendent, who turned from the telephone to issue the necessary orders.

Dr. Alfred C. Carpenter of 219 East Nineteenth Street was the physician who boarded the train. He was delayed in starting, and did not get away until 11:25 o'clock. The train consisted of an engine and one car.

"I never had a ride like that before in my life," said Dr. Carpenter last night. "We made the run in twenty-seven minutes, but were delayed four minutes at the Harlem River Bridge, because the draw was open. We traveled from New Rochelle to Port Chester, ten miles, in eight minutes. I operated on the young man, and have been informed by telephone since returning home that he is a trifle better. The chances, however, are against his recovery."

One of the men in the train dispatcher's office said last night:

"Any man on the road would give his last dollar to Joe Hamill, or do anything in his power for him. He was connected with the road for many years, and while in its employ was always helping somebody. He got work for many a man while he was with us, and we all hope that his boy, Schuyler, will recover."

Hamill left the employ of the railroad six months ago, to take charge of the shipping department of the Simons Manufacturing Company at Port Chester.

CITY RAILWAY IN BROOKLYN.

Bill in Albany Puts Construction of It Under Controller Coler.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 5.—Senator Cooper of Brooklyn introduced in the Senate to-night a bill embracing Borough President Coler's ideas on municipal ownership of railways in Brooklyn. The bill authorizes the Board of Aldermen to construct, lease, or operate street surface railroads on any street in Brooklyn. Power is also given to the Board of Estimate to lay out routes for the roads which are to be constructed under the direction of the Borough President. The Board of Estimate may also lease to any now existing street railroad company or any to be hereafter organized the right to use any or all of such tracks, the lease not to be longer than for twenty-five years, with renewals not exceeding in the aggregate twenty-five years upon the revaluation.

GREAT STEEL MERGER REPORTED AND DENIED

7 Concerns, Valued at a Billion, Going to U. S. Steel?

HILL'S ORE LANDS INCLUDED

If Such a Deal Went Through There Would Be Few Independent Plants Outside the Trust.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 5.—The United States Steel Corporation is said to be arranging a deal by which it will take over the largest steel and iron interests in the country now independent of the Steel Corporation.

Appraisers are now at work on large and small independent steel and tin plate companies throughout the country which may be taken into the proposed merger. The companies and properties, together with their capitalization and value, which are said to be included in the deal, follow:

Great Northern ore lands	$1,000,000,000
Republic Iron & Steel pf.	25,000,000
Republic Iron & Steel common	30,000,000
Republic Iron & Steel mortgages and gold notes	10,000,000
Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. com.	22,552,800
Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. pf.	688,300
Tennessee C. & I. Co. bonds, &c.	13,000,000
Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. pf.	2,000,000
Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. common	44,200,000
Cok Fuel & Iron Co. bonds, &c.	45,872,000
Sloss-Sheffield Co. common	10,000,000
Sloss-Sheffield Co. pf.	10,000,000
Sloss-Sheffield Co. bonds	4,000,000
Labell Iron Co. stock, (at rate of $2 for $1)	14,000,000
Labell Iron Co. bonds	2,000,000
Shenango Furnace Co. stock	5,000,000
Shenango Furnace bonds	4,000,000
Total	$1,242,313,100

If the merger deal is put through the Steel Corporation will have acquired almost all the steel plants of any importance in the country.

A new adjustment of the steel and iron industry has been talked of intermittently ever since John W. Gates, Grant B. Schley, the late Charles S. Guthrie, and their associates in the Republic Iron and Steel Company purchased control of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company. It was then said that the ultimate purpose of the Gates syndicate was to build up a great rival to the United States Steel Corporation by merging the principal independent concerns, notably the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company of Birmingham, Ala., and others of the concerns in the Southern field. A combination of the Sloss-Sheffield Company and the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company had been attempted without success before the latter concern passed into the hands of the Gates-Guthrie-Schley interests.

Any intention on the part of this syndicate of extending the combination they had made was specifically denied.

An option held by Pittsburg interests on La Belle Iron Works, which has extensive plants at Wheeling, West Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, was allowed to lapse a fortnight ago, and no authoritative information has ever been had of its renewal.

J. J. Hill has frequently denied in positive terms that the Great Northern's ore lands were for sale at any price, but negotiations for their lease to the United States Steel Company have been hanging fire for a month because of the inability of the parties to come to terms.

There has been a rumor current for several weeks that the United States Steel Corporation had secured control of the Labelle, Wheeling, Republic Iron and Steel, and Colorado Fuel and Iron Companies. The reports have had no confirmation anywhere. Representatives of each of these independent companies have vehemently denied the rumors of change of control.

MRS. MORTON'S ESCAPE.

Wife of the Equitable President in a Railway Accident.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., March 5.—Mrs. Paul Morton, wife of the President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, had a narrow escape to-day in a wreck on Santa Fé Passenger Train No. 1. Spreading rails threw six cars into a ditch. The Gotham, Mrs. Morton's private car, was the last car of the train, and escaped the fate of the others.

Five persons were badly injured. The accident occurred near Toltec, eighty miles west of here. The train was traveling thirty miles an hour when the engine left the track. Two of the passenger coaches turned completely over, and of the eighty Mexican laborers in the front coach scarcely one escaped.

Express Messenger J. A. Summers of Albuquerque was caught beneath his car and lay there for four hours, until a wrecking crew arrived from Gallup. He is mortally hurt.

Mrs. Morton and her party, who were traveling to the Grand Cañon, were severely shaken up, and several members of the party received slight cuts and bruises, but they displayed the greatest coolness throughout, and Mrs. Morton walked forward to the wrecked coaches and asked if she could be of any assistance in caring for the injured.

DOCTOR INSTEAD OF PRAYER.

Chicago Officials Interfere to Save a Believer in Dowie.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 5.—By advice of Corporation Counsel Lewis, the City Health Department to-day interfered in a case of extreme sickness where the services of a physician had been refused by relatives.

Mrs. Ella Turner, a believer in John Alexander Dowie's teachings, had been suffering for twenty-four hours, and her life was in peril, as her condition called for an immediate operation. Her relations appealed to Overseer Voliva of Zion City, and he sent a Deacon to pray for the patient.

The woman's cries attracted a neighbor, who reported the case to the police. After Mr. Lewis had given his opinion a physician was sent to attend the woman, and her suffering was stopped.

On the Lake Shore Limited there are sleeping cars for St. Louis and Cincinnati with perfect service. Leaves New York every day at 5:30 P. M., via New York Central Lines. No excess fare.—Adv.

AUTO KILLS 11-YEAR-OLD BOY.

Chauffeur, Said to be Peter Cooper Hewitt's, Tried Vainly to Escape.

Robert Claudot, 11 years old, of 247 West Twenty-ninth Street, was knocked down by an automobile at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street last night and died in Roosevelt Hospital two hours later. His leg was broken and his skull fractured.

The lad, who is an orphan and lived with his aunt, was crossing Twenty-ninth Street when the auto, in charge of Terucatts Attillo, said to be a chauffeur for Peter Cooper Hewitt, came speeding east. Before the lad could dodge the auto knocked him to the ground. Attillo, the police say, increased his speed and darted through Twenty-ninth Street to Sixth Avenue.

A score of persons ran after the auto, but Attillo seemed likely to escape when at Thirtieth Street and Sixth Avenue the auto was headed off because of the congestion of traffic, and a policeman took the chauffeur in charge. Several persons identified him as the chauffeur who had run over the boy.

Policeman Thompson of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, seeing that the boy was in a dangerous condition, placed him in the automobile and had Attillo drive to Roosevelt Hospital. Attillo was locked up.

Coroner Harburger, who was notified of the lad's death, refused to go to the West Thirty-seventh Street Station to accept bail for Attillo. The Coroner insisted that the chauffeur be kept a prisoner on a charge of homicide until it had been determined whether the lad's death was an unavoidable accident or the result of negligence. The Coroner will hold an inquiry to-day.

FIVE SAVED FROM DROWNING.

Staten Island Rowboat Party Had a Narrow Escape from Disaster.

Three girls and two boys were rescued from drowning in the bay, between Tompkinsville and St. George, yesterday afternoon after their boat had been swamped by waves from the city's ferryboat Queens and a coasting steamer. Mae Baker, May Bart, Bessie McGarry, John Hoffman, and Randolph Frye are the young folks who were capsized. They were rescued by William Denyse, Beekman Denyse, William McVey, and John Barry, all of Tompkinsville.

The Hoffman boy owns a rowboat, which he kept at the old ferry landing at the foot of Arietta Street, Tompkinsville. After school yesterday Hoffman invited the others to go for a row.

They had gone a half mile or so when they were caught in rollers thrown up by the ferryboat Queens as she was proceeding to St. George. The boat was headed into the swell and would have ridden it safely had not a coasting steamer going out passed on the outside. The cross rollers from this vessel slopped the water into the boat, which speedily sank.

The rescuers jumped into a big yawl at a Tompkinsville dock and rowed out to where the five were struggling in the water. Some of them were pretty well exhausted, but none was permanently any the worse for the ducking.

STATE BOARD CUTS RATES.

Complaint of Favoritism to Standard Oil Causes Slash in Missouri.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 5.—By an order issued by the Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners of Missouri late this afternoon the rate on refined oil shipped from St. Louis to Kansas City is reduced from 20 cents per 100 pounds to 9 cents, and the rate from Kansas City to St. Louis from 17 cents to 9 cents.

The difference in the rate on shipments going east and those going west has long been the subject of complaint by independent refiners. They declare it was clearly in favor of the Standard Oil Company, which has refineries in Kansas City, and is therefore under no necessity of shipping oil west from St. Louis.

The worst the railroads expected was an order making the seventeen-cent rate effective both ways. It is understood the roads will combat the nine-cent rate in the courts, and meanwhile will adopt the seventeen-cent rate and ignore the ruling.

CLARK WINS BIG LAND SUIT.

Montana Senator Upheld by Supreme Court—No Fraud Proved.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Senator Clark of Montana to-day won the case against him in the Supreme Court in which the Government sought to have cancelled patents to 11,400 acres of public lands in Montana which were alleged to have been fraudulently secured. Justices Harlan and Brown dissented.

This was a civil proceeding instituted by the Government against Senator Clark to secure the cancellation of eighty-two patents to land issued under the Timber and Stone act. It was asserted that Senator Clark had entered into a contract to purchase the land before the patents were granted and that he had known the proceeding was fraudulent. The Government charged that Clark was not a bona fide purchaser. The Supreme Court upheld the lower courts, which held that no fraud had been proved.

THREE LOST OFF SCHOONER.

Seamen Refuse to Quit Vessel on Captain's Orders—All Drowned.

MACHIASPORT, Me., March 5.—The loss of the schooner Millie of Parrsboro, N. S., and three of her men, in Machias Bay, was reported here to-day by Capt. Gibson of the lost vessel, who arrived to file protest of the accident. The schooner was wrecked on Cross Island Ledge, her course having been miscalculated in a thick snowstorm and heavy gale. She began to break up soon after she struck.

Those lost were: George Porter, John Christiansen, and Frank Whalen, all sailors. Capt. Gibson and the men who escaped in one of the schooner's boats, had a terrific battle with the seas. Capt. Gibson says that as soon as the schooner struck he had the large boat lowered and ordered all hands into it. The three seamen refused to obey. The second mate then entered it, followed by the mate and cook. Capt. Gibson repeated his order to the seamen to take to the boat. They declared that they would take their chances and remain on the vessel. Capt. Gibson then left with his officers and cook. After a hard battle they safely reached the schooner John Proctor. It was then seen that the Millie was rapidly breaking up, and shortly afterward the body of one of the crew was found.

DYNAMITERS WRECK NON-UNION FOUNDRY

Decoy Watchman to His Home While They Work.

ROOF OFF; DAMAGE, $10,000

Nobody Hurt in Explosion in Harlem Early This Morning—Fire Follows the Crash.

An attempt, which was practically successful, to blow up the iron foundry of Ravitch Brothers, in East 136th Street, between Madison Avenue and the Harlem River, was made early this morning. The foundry is a non-union shop, and it is alleged by the firemen and the watchmen that union men are responsible for the explosion.

Carl Schroeder, of 134 East Fortieth Street, the watchman, was lured away by the receipt of a false message that his house was burning. When he returned the place was almost wrecked.

The same firm had a derrick dynamited at 115th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue two weeks ago, and at that time the firm laid the blame on the Housesmiths' Union.

It was just about midnight when Schroeder received a telephone message in the office that his home in Fortieth Street was burning, and that his mother was being burned to death.

He locked the office, rushed to the Subway, and hastened home. There he found the message false. Suspicious by this time, he hurried back, but was too late to stop the attempt to wreck the place. He found half of the offices and foundry in ruins.

The explosion was at 1 o'clock, the word to Schroeder having been nicely planned, the police figure, as he did not get back until 1:45 o'clock. It is supposed that dynamite was used. The explosive was set off just back of the office of the firm in the long foundry building.

This is a two-story structure extending for about four lots. The explosion was of great force. It tore off the roof over half of the distance of the building, wrecked the machinery, and tore the place up generally.

The place was afire soon after the explosion.

Across the street is the tank of the Pure Oil Company, which contains 500,000 gallons of kerosene, and the firemen paid almost all their attention to this. Two alarms were sent in. The flames were soon controlled.

The explosion shook houses for blocks around and startled hundreds who ran to the foundry.

Battalion Chief Larkin made a thorough investigation, when the report that the place had been dynamited reached him. He said that he found there was no boiler in the foundry to explode, and when asked whether he believed it had been dynamited, said:

"It looks as if it was something like that."

Larkin also heard Schroeder's story of his being lured away by the false message and then became more positive than ever that the place had been dynamited. Deputy Chief Ahearn shared his view, and the police with the firemen began an investigation.

The firemen said the damage would run from $10,000 to $15,000 at least.

NO CONCESSION IN RATE BILL.

Tillman Will Call Up Measure on Friday—The Escrow Idea.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The rate situation becomes more perplexing from day to day, so far as the views of the friends and opponents of the Hepburn bill are concerned. There is now much interest in the work that Senator Tillman is doing on the majority report. As the designated leader to take charge of the Hepburn bill in the Senate for both Republicans and Democrats, he has a peculiar and dramatic task set for him. Thus far he has risen to it with a firm sense of his responsibilities as a rock-rooted Democrat and a Republican Administration's chief defender.

Senator Tillman said to-day that he should move next Friday to make the Rate bill the special order and from that moment forward should urge its passage with might and main. Senator Tillman says he is just now out-Heroding Herod, and is even more a standpatter than the President himself on the Hepburn bill.

The court-review Senators are giving special attention now to the escrow amendment that Senator Spooner will offer. The aim of this plan is to require the railroads to deposit in court money sufficient to cover the difference between the existing rate and the rate sought to be established and then, in the event that the road is sustained, the amount thus deposited is returned and if the case should go against the road it will be apportioned to the shippers.

Probably no phase of the rate debate will present so much of interest and novelty as that which will consider this escrow idea.

SPOTTED FEVER IN BARRACKS.

Navy Doctors Puzzled by New Outbreak in Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, March 5.—Seaman Apprentice Frank E. Schauble of Erie, Penn., who was stricken with spotted fever at the naval training station Saturday, died shortly after 6 o'clock this evening.

The medical staff at the station have a theory that possibly the germs were spread by two boys who recovered from the disease, and returned to duty as cured five weeks ago. They confess that they are still very much in the dark regarding the nature of the fever and are unable to cope with its ravages.

H. H. ROGERS BEATS SALOONS.

Heads a Fight Against License in His Birthplace.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 5.—Henry H. Rogers, Vice President of the Standard Oil Company, put in an active day to-day at the election at Fairhaven, the place of his birth, in which license for liquor was defeated, 363 to 214.

The liquor interests were determined to carry the town for license, and Mr. Rogers set out to beat them. All day long he sped about the town in his automobile urging voters to go to the polls and vote against drink. He took many citizens to the polls.

While Mr. Rogers was working, the preachers of Fairhaven and women of the temperance societies were praying for his success in a room above the polling place.

BOMB IN HER HAIR.

Woman Arrested in Office of Governor Doubassoff, Moscow.

MOSCOW, March 5.—A boldly planned attempt on the life of Vice Admiral Doubassoff, Governor General of Moscow and member of the Council of the Empire, was frustrated to-day.

As in the case of Vice Admiral Chouknin, who on Feb. 9 was the object of a terrorist attack, the would-be assassin was a woman, and her method was practically the same as that of the woman who attempted the life of Chouknin. Representing that she came from personal friends of the Governor General, she gained admittance to the chancellery, but her agitation attracted the attention of an aide, who noticed particularly the luxuriance of the woman's hair, which was coiffed high upon her head.

When she was interrogated the woman attempted to flee, but was seized and searched, and a small bomb was discovered concealed in her tresses.

The identity of the woman has not been established.

LONGWORTH IN THE HOUSE.

Gives a Cigar Eighteen Inches Long to Speaker Cannon.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Representative Nicholas Longworth attended the session of the House to-day for the first time since his marriage to Miss Roosevelt.

He presented to Speaker Cannon a cigar at least eighteen inches long, which he bought in Havana while on his honeymoon.

NOT HER AUTO, SAYS NORDICA.

Singer Denies That Her Machine Killed McGowan's Collie.

William McGowan of 214 West 105th Street reported to the police of the West 125th Street Station yesterday that an automobile carrying the New York license No. 12,331 had run down and killed his collie dog. He said that there were two women in the car besides the chauffeur, and he believes that one of them was Mme. Nordica.

Mme. Nordica denied last night that she had been out in her auto at the time named. She couldn't for the life of her remember what was her auto number.

McGowan has asked the police to investigate. He feels that those in the auto should have stopped the machine when they realized that they had killed his dog.

PRINCE WOULD OBEY TSI-AN.

Tsai-Tsen Tells What He Would Do If He Became Emperor.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 5.—Prince Tsai-Tsen, the Chinese Imperial Commissioner, who has been mentioned as a possible successor to the present Emperor, spent to-day at the great flour mills and the University of Minnesota. He was asked:

"What would you do to-morrow if you were placed on the throne?"

Unhesitatingly the Prince replied:

"The Empress Dowager would tell me."

The Prince and his suite started for Chicago to-night.

ARMY FOR INDIA FRONTIER.

WHOLE VILLAGE NOW GONE.

Remainder of Tavernola Falls Into Lake Iseo—1,000 Persons Homeless.

ROME, March 5.—The partial destruction yesterday of the Village of Tavernola by the fall of cliffs into Lake Iseo was made complete to-day, what had remained of the village being swallowed by the lake.

The inhabitants, of whom there are 1,000, who have taken refuge at a distance from the lake, are destitute, and in terror lest further calamity befall them. The Government has sent supplies for their immediate needs.

A Faint Comet Discovered.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 5.—A telegram was received at the Harvard Observatory to-day from Prof. Kreutz at Kiel announcing the discovery by Prof. Kopf at Heidelberg of a faint comet. The position on March 3, 5:00:06, Greenwich mean time, was right ascension 11 hours 35 minutes 56 seconds and declination 1 degree 40 minutes. The daily motion in right ascension is 28 seconds, and in declination 4 minutes.

High License in Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 5.—As a step toward stamping out crime in Chicago the City Council to-night, by a vote of 40 to 28, passed an ordinance making the price of saloon licenses $1,000 instead of $500, as heretofore. The law will be effective on May 1 unless Mayor Dunne should veto the ordinance. Chicago has 7,017 saloons, and it is hoped high license will close many of them.

Hearst Ballot Watchers Withdrawn.

Representatives of William R. Hearst who for four months have been watching the ballot boxes which contain the vote of Brooklyn in the last election and which was stored in the Eagle Warehouse, on Fulton Street, have been withdrawn. The withdrawal of the watchers is regarded as indicating that Mr. Hearst has abandoned the idea of quo warranto proceedings against Mayor McClellan.

MACK QUITS BINGHAM AND DENOUNCES HIM

Declares the Commissioner and Truth Are Strangers.

DISMISSED, SAYS BINGHAM

"That's a Lie," Says Deputy—Accuses Bingham of Playing Politics—Says Root, O'Brien, and Ryan Meddled.

James F. Mack is no longer Third Deputy Police Commissioner. He resigned just before noon yesterday, and without delay issued a statement to the effect that he quit the department voluntarily. He explained that the tactics of Police Commissioner Bingham were not to his liking, and that he could not continue as Third Deputy and retain his self-respect.

Later in the day Mr. Mack made a detailed statement, bringing various charges against the Commissioner, among them that of playing politics in the department, and accusing Mayor McClellan, Fire Commissioner John H. O'Brien, Secretary of State Elihu Root, and Thomas F. Ryan of meddling with police matters.

Police Commissioner Bingham emphatically denied that Mr. Mack's resignation had been voluntary, and declared that the charges brought against him by Mr. Mack were untrue.

"I asked the Third Deputy to resign," Gen. Bingham declared, "to take effect at the end of office hours next Saturday. He handed in his resignation to take effect immediately, and his resignation was accepted. I requested his resignation because his work was not satisfactory. He pleaded with me to keep him.

"Mr. Mack seemed interested in his work and diligent. There was no great falling down anywhere. My dissatisfaction with the manner in which he performed his duties was cumulative, and as I am responsible it was necessary for me to take the step I did."

When told that Gen. Bingham had said his resignation was demanded, Mr. Mack got almost beside himself with anger.

"That is a lie," he explained. "I am ready to confront the Commissioner and tell him so. Bingham and the truth are strangers. Let the newspapers print this in the biggest type to be found and I'll prove it.

Bingham's "Brutal Policy."

"The fact is that I refused to lend myself to the brutal policy he seems bent on following. He is always looking for a chance to break somebody. Ninety per cent. of the police force voted against and worked against the little man in the City Hall and the administration has it in for the force on that account. When, as trial deputy, I let a man off with a light sentence Bingham would wear a face eight feet long. When I broke somebody, and that happened only twice during my connection with the department, he jumped out of his chair in glee.

"What does Bingham know about conditions in New York, and what does he care about the impression he leaves when he steps out? He told me that when his term was over he intended to go to Berlin to live and that it didn't make any difference to him what was said about him. He hasn't a drop of the milk of human kindness in his make-up. Last Friday he sent me up this memorandum:—

> Hereafter, failure to patrol, found guilty, will be fined 15 days' pay.
> Absent from reserve roll call, found guilty, 10 days.

"Now to fine a man 15 days' pay means to shut the door to future promotions in his face. Suppose a man, a first year patrolman, is off post. To fine him 15 days means that he will be a third grade patrolman as long as he is a policeman. He may never hope to be a Roundsman or even to be a second-grade patrolman. It would be more merciful to fine him $1,000 and be done with it.

"There has been friction between Bingham and myself for some time as to the fines inflicted by me. In a dozen cases where I fined a man a day's or a day and a half's pay Bingham raised the fine to 15 days. When I got his arbitrary scale I went to his office and protested.

"I told him that I could not reconcile such severity to my sense of right. I asked him to let Waldo have the job of trial deputy. Waldo has plenty of time for the task. He is nothing but a messenger boy, running errands for Bingham, anyway, while I had enough special duties exclusive of presiding over trials to keep half a dozen men pretty well employed. Bingham refused to accede to my request. That was early this morning.

"I went down to see Mayor McClellan to try and have him pull the Commissioner off, but the Mayor was busy. When I got back to headquarters I went right up stairs to my room without even taking off my overcoat and wrote my resignation as follows:

> I herewith tender you my resignation as Third Deputy Police Commissioner of the City of New York, to take effect immediately.

"My attitude was simple. I knew Bingham and I could never agree, and he was boss of the job. Somebody had to resign, and I saw it was up to me. Bingham asked me to let things go over this week, and I told him it was no use. He wanted to skip trial day, but I said to him that would get the docket so far behind that things would never get straightened out.

Says Bingham Played Politics.

"Now Bingham increased the fines inflicted by me without even looking over the evidence in the cases. This can be proved. He gave Capt. Dooley eight days for nothing, and broke that officer's heart. When the charges were submitted to me I wrote an opinion in which I said that Dooley had been guilty of no violation, in spirit, of the police rules, and that it was doubtful if he was even technically guilty. I advised against entertaining the charges.

"Bingham told me that I was a 'damned fool' for writing the opinion, and that Dooley would be tried anyway. He asked me if I didn't know that Dooley and his 160-odd men out at Coney had all worked against McClellan. John O'Brien asked me the same question, and so did Dan Slattery. [Gen. Bingham's secretary.] Bingham tried Dooley himself, and found him guilty. One might as well have had a phonograph sitting in judgment, ready to say 'Eight days' when the time came. Dooley didn't get a fair show.

"Then came the Schmittberger trial, and Bingham insulted Judge Rosalsky, who represented the Inspector, so grossly that I wished I was a thousand miles away. I was ashamed to be connected with the department in any way. It wasn't that my rulings were the only ones that Bingham failed to uphold. He has increased fines inflicted by Waldo time and again, but because Waldo is willing to stand for it is no reason I should.

MARCH 1906

"I worked myself up to the Deputy Commissionership from a railroad brakeman. It's a far cry, but I never forgot myself and suffered from an attack of the big head. I know men and I know New York and I won't lose my self-respect for all the McClellans and Binghams between here and hell.

No Humane Instincts.

"Bingham and Waldo were officers in the Spanish war. They want to apply the same rules to intelligent New York policemen who are earning their $120 a month that they did to the private soldiers in the army, where the pay is $13 a month. They are without humane instincts. I was in the Spanish war, but I served as a private, and I believe in giving every man a square deal. That isn't Bingham. That man is so insincere that when he laughs he laughs from his teeth out.

"As Third Deputy I was not only charged with all the duties of the First and Second Deputies, but in addition I had entire charge of the Bureau of Buildings and Repairs, the Bureau of Boiler Inspectors, the Telegraph Bureau, the office of the Property Clerk, the office of the Complaint Clerk, and all contracts and other matters involving the expenditure of money, including the certification of the payrolls.

"I had the expenditure of $13,000,000 a year in my hands. Only the other day, in a single matter—the care and shoeing of 52 out of the 676 horses in the department, I saved more than my salary for a year. If the same saving was effected on the other horses the city would be $50,000 to the good, but it isn't saving money that the Commissioner cares for. All he wants to do is to break people. New York has nothing but money.

"When I came into office I found Private Secretary Neighbors assigned to me. Now Neighbors's brother is private secretary to Elihu Root, Secretary of State. Bingham came to me and told me that I would have to let Neighbors go, as he was too close to the State Department. I figured it out that Bingham wanted nobody about him who was even remotely connected with the Roosevelt Administration, inasmuch as he was in charge of the Park Department and had a good position at Washington under McKinley, and the fur flew and he was retired when Roosevelt came in.

"I kept Neighbors for a while, as he was posted on the routine of the office and I was green. I let him know that he had better look out for another job, though, and he got letters from Elihu Root and Thomas F. Ryan. These men wrote Bingham, but he still insisted that Neighbors be dismissed.

Where O'Brien Came In.

"Then John O'Brien butted in. He told me that Neighbors was close to Root and that Root ran things at Albany, where bills were pending which might harm McClellan. He said that I must keep Neighbors or that he would have to take care of him. Slattery told me the same thing. Still Bingham insisted on the man's dismissal. I'll give him credit for having a little backbone. I didn't let Neighbors go, and I guess that helped get him down on me. This morning, when I resigned, Neighbors walked out, too.

"I am an organization man. I attened the Ed Murphy dinner and made a speech there. That didn't help with the Commissioner, who said that McClellan appointed him and he was there to carry out McClellan's policy. When that policy involves injustice to the men on the police force I won't lend myself to its enforcement. That, in a nutshell, is why I walked out.

"I will be back in my law office tomorrow morning," Mr. Mack concluded, "and will take up the thread of my work where I left it off. My salary as Third Deputy was $4,000 a year. I was making $5,000 at my practice when I accepted the place."

Commissioner Bingham would say nothing regarding Mr. Mack's resignation until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when he saw all the reporters together. After he had said that Mr. Mack had been forced out, a reporter told the Commissioner of an interview he had had with the ex-Deputy.

"Mr. Mack told me," the reporter said, "that he had advised you that Capt. Dooley, who was fined eight days' pay by you, was neither technically nor wilfully guilty of any violation of the police rules, and advised against placing him on trial. He said that you told him he was a 'damned fool,' as Dooley and his men worked against McClellan at the last election."

"That statement is not justified by facts," Gen. Bingham said. "I did not tell Mack he was a damned fool, and I did not know that Dooley had worked against McClellan."

The Commissioner explained that the schedule of fines which he had sent to Mr. Mack for enforcement was adopted by the last administration and that he had impressed it upon the Third Deputy that the duty of police was to police.

"Was it because the Third Deputy did not live up to the schedule that you demanded his resignation?" the Commissioner was asked.

"His resignation was demanded because his work was not satisfactory," replied Gen. Bingham.

"Did the Mayor request his resignation?"

"No; but the Mayor knew I had the step in mind."

"Did he oppose it?"

"Nothing to say."

"Rats!" Says Bingham.

"Was it because you asked Mr. Mack to do certain things which, if he had done them, would have lost him his self-respect, that you could not agree?"

"Rats!" shouted Gen. Bingham.

"Did you tell Mr. Mack that you did not care what people said of you, as you intended to go to Germany at the expiration of your term?"

"I did not."

"Mr. Mack said that his resignation was voluntary."

"I asked for it, and he pleaded with me to keep him," insisted the Commissioner.

"Have you any one in mind to succeed Mr. Mack?"

"Nothing doing," said the Commissioner.

When he learned what Gen. Bingham had said, and had entered his denials, Mr. Mack found consolation with the reflection that he retired with the respect of the men on the force.

"That's worth something," he declared. "I was fair to all, and to have done what Bingham wanted would have been ruinous. Mark my words—his policy will demoralize the whole department."

Mr. Mack was born in New Jersey. He came to New York in 1890 and worked as brakeman on the New York Central Railroad. As a witness in a damage suit he met James W. Osborne, and quit the railroad to study law. He was graduated at the New York Law School in 1898, just before the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. He enlisted as a private in the Twenty-second New York and served several months.

On receiving his discharge he was admitted to the bar. In 1903 he ran for the Assembly and was defeated. He was indorsed for the Deputy Commissionership by ex-President Grover Cleveland.

Following the announcement that Mr. Mack had resigned, it was reported yesterday afternoon that Second Deputy Commissioner Arthur J. O'Keefe of Brooklyn had also had a disagreement with Commissioner Bingham and was preparing to get out. This was emphatically denied by Mr. O'Keefe.

"There has never been the slightest disagreement between Commissioner Bingham and myself," said he. "I have had no thought of resigning."

NO SALUTE FOR CRANE.

Bingham's Orders Don't Go In His Court, Says Magistrate.

When Sergt. Smith of the Westchester Police Station entered the Westchester Court yesterday morning and faced Magistrate Crane he gave the court a military salute.

"Don't salute me, Sergeant," said the Magistrate.

"It's orders, your Honor," said the Sergeant, "to salute our superiors."

"Well, don't you do it here. I'll recognize you just as quickly without a salute. Commissioner Bingham doesn't control the courts, and his rules don't go here."

BINGHAM JOKES MARK TWAIN.

Says He'll Have to Stop Lecturing If He Can't Avoid Rumpuses.

Police Commissioner Bingham was asked yesterday if he had seen the reports of the disturbance at the lecture of Mark Twain at the Majestic Theatre yesterday.

"I understand that there was considerable of a rumpus up there," said the Commissioner, "and the matter will be thoroughly investigated."

He added that he had not received any complaint, but that the accounts published in the newspapers were sufficient reason for him to act. It was rumored that Capt. Daly, who had charge of the police detail, would be placed under charges for his conduct.

"I know Mark Twain," said Commissioner Bingham in a joking way, "and I must tell him that if he can't avoid a rumpus when he lectures, he will have to stop lecturing."

ROOSEVELT MAKES PLEA FOR BETTER DEFENSES

Sends Report of Expert Military Board to Congress.

GREAT NEED IN THE COLONIES

If We Are to Hold Them They Must Be Fortified—Needs of Chesapeake Bay.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—President Roosevelt sent a message to Congress to-day accompanying plans for coast defense prepared by a joint board of army and navy officers, in which he emphasizes the necessity for further defenses.

He calls especial attention to the recommendation of the board that the entrance to Chesapeake Bay be added to the list of places in the United States to be defended and declares the insular possessions cannot be longer neglected if the United States desires to hold them.

The report on which the message is based was made by the Taft board, which was constituted by Presidential order and consisted of Secretary Taft, Lieut. Gen. Chaffee, Major Gen. Bates, Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, Major Gen. Story, retired; Gen. Greely, Chief Signal Officer; Gen. Crozier, Chief of Ordnance; Gen. Mackenzie, Chief of Engineers; Samuel M. Mills, Chief of Artillery; Capt. C. L. Sperry, United States Navy, with Major George W. Goethals, General Staff Secretary. The message reads:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives:

"Our coast defenses, as they existed in 1860, were not surpassed in efficiency by those of any country, but within a few years the introduction of rifled cannon and armor in the navies of the world, against which the smoothbore guns were practically useless, rendered them obsolete.

"For many years no attempt was made to remedy the deficiencies of these seacoast fortifications. There was no establishment in the country equipped for the manufacture of high-power rifled guns. There was no definite adopted policy of coast defense, and Congress was reluctant to undertake a work the cost of which could not be stated even approximately and the details of which had not advanced—so far as could be ascertained—beyond the experimental stages.

FIRST ACTION FOR NEW DEFENSES.

"The act of March 3, 1883, was the first decisive step taken to secure suitable and adequate ordnance for military purposes. Under the provisions of this act, a joint board of officers of the army and navy was appointed 'for the purpose of examining and reporting to Congress which of the navy yards or arsenals owned by the Government has the best location and is best adapted for the establishment of a Government foundry, or what other method, if any, should be adopted for the manufacture of heavy ordnance adapted to modern warfare for the use of the army and navy of the United States.'

"This board, known as the 'Gun Foundry Board,' made its report in 1884, and directed public attention, not only to the defenseless condition of our coasts, but to the importance and necessity of formulating a comprehensive scheme for the protection of our harbors and coast cities.

"As a result the act of Congress approved March 3, 1885, provided that 'the President of the United States shall appoint a board, * * * which board shall examine and report at what ports fortifications or other defenses are most urgently required, the character and kind of defenses best adapted to each, with reference to armaments, the utilization of torpedoes, mines, and other defensive appliances.'

WORK OF THE ENDICOTT BOARD.

"The board organized under the foregoing provision of law, popularly known as the Endicott board, in its report of Jan. 23, 1886, cited the principles on which any system of coast defense should be based, and clearly stated the necessity of having our important strategic and commercial centres made secure against naval attack.

"In determining the ports that were in urgent need of defense, since a fleet did not exist for the protection of the merchant marine, fortifications were provided at every harbor of importance along the coast and at several of the lake ports.

"For any particular harbor or locality the report specifies the armaments to be used, the number of submarine mines and torpedo boats, with detailed estimates of cost for these various items..

"The proposed guns, mounts, and emplacements were of types that seemed at that time best suited to accomplish the desired results, based on the only data available, namely, experiments and information of similar work from abroad.

"After the report was made part of the public records the development and adoption of a suitable disappearing gun-carriage caused the substitution of open emplacements for the expensive turrets and armored casemates, materially reducing the cost of installing the armaments; the great advances in ordnance, increasing the power and range of the later guns, caused a diminution in the number and calibre of the pieces to be mounted, and this fact, combined with advances in the science of engineering, rendered unnecessary the construction of the expensive 'floating batteries' designed by the Endicott Board for mounting guns to give sufficient fire for the defense of wide channels, or for harbors where suitable foundations could not be secured on land.

IMPROVEMENT ON THE OLD IDEAS.

"Furthermore, keeping pace with the gradual development and improvement in the engines and implements of war, fortified harbors are equipped with rapid fire guns, and to a certain extent with power plants, searchlights, and a system of fire control and direction, now essential adjuncts of a complete system of defense, though not so considered by that board.

"While the details of the scheme of defense recommended by the Endicott board have been departed from in making provision for later developments of war material, the great value of its report lies in the fact that it sets forth a definite and intelligible plan or policy upon which the very important work of coast defense should proceed, and which is as applicable to-day as when formulated.

"The greater effective ranges possible with the later rifled cannon, the necessity of thoroughly covering with gun fire all available waters of approach, and the growth of seacoast towns beyond the limits of some of the military reservations have combined to move defensive works more to the front, and many of the gun positions now occupied have been obtained from private ownership. The cost of such sites has been a large item in the present cost of fortifications, and this purchase of land was not included in its estimates by the Endicott Board.

"An examination of the report also discloses the fact that no estimates were submitted covering a supply of ammunition to be kept in reserve for the services of the guns that were recommended, due perhaps to the fact that a satisfactory power to give the energy desired and a suitable projectile to accomplish the desired destruction of armor were still in experimental stages. These questions, however, are no longer in doubt, and Congress already has made provision for some of the ammunition needed.

"The omissions in the estimates of the Endicott Board and the changes in the details of its plans have caused doubts in the minds of many as to the money that will be needed to defend completely our coasts by guns, mines, and their adjuncts. New localities are pressing their claims for defense.

NEED OF DEFENSES FOR COLONIES.

"The insular possessions cannot be held unless the principal ports, naval bases, and coaling stations are fortified before the outbreak of war.

"These considerations have led me to appoint a joint board of officers of the army and navy to recommend the armament, fixed and floating, mobile torpedoes, submarine mines, and all other defensive appliances that may be necessary to complete the harbor defense with the most economical and advantageous expenditures of money.

"The board was further instructed 'to extend its examinations so as to include estimates and recommendations relative to the defenses of the insular possessions' and to 'recommend the order in which the proposed defense shall be completed so that all the elements of harbor defense may be properly and effectively co-ordinated.'

"The board has completed its labors and its report together with a letter of transmittal by the Secretary of War, is herewith transmitted for the information of the Congress.

"It is to be noted that the entrance to Chesapeake Bay, not heretofore recommended or authorized by Congress, is added to the list of ports in the United States to be defended, with the important reasons therefor clearly stated; that the gun defense proper is well advanced toward completion, and that the greater part of the estimate is for new work or gun defense, for the accessories now so necessary for efficiency, and for an allowance of ammunition which, added to that already on hand, will give the minimum supply that should be kept in reserve to successfully meet any sudden attack.

COST OF THE DEFENSES LESS.

"The letter of the Secretary of War contains a comparison of the estimates of the Endicott Board with the amounts already appropriated for the present defense and the estimates of the new board, from which it appears that a complete defense of our coasts, omitting cost of ammunition and sites, can be accomplished for less than the amount estimated by the Endicott Board even including the additional localities not recommended by it.

"In the insular possessions the great naval bases at Guantanamo, Subig Bay, and Pearl Harbor, the coaling stations at Guam and San Juan, require protection, and in addition defenses are recommended for Manila Bay and Honolulu, because of the strategic positions of these locations. In the letter of the Secretary of War will be found the sums already appropriated for defenses at some of these ports or harbors, and the estimates are for the completion of an adequate defense in each locality.

"Defenses are recommended for the entrances to the Panama Canal as contemplated by the act of June 28, 1902, (Spooner act,) and under the terms of this act the cost of such fortifications would probably be paid from appropriations for the construction and defense of the canal.

COUNTRY'S NEED OF DEFENSES.

"The necessity for a complete and adequate system of coast defense is greater to-day than twenty years ago, for the increased wealth of the country offers more tempting inducements to attack, and a hostile fleet can reach our coast in a much shorter period of time. The fact that we now have a navy does not in any wise diminish the importance of coast defenses; on the contrary, that fact emphasizes their value and necessity for their construction.

"It is an accepted naval maxim that a navy can be used to strategic advantage only when acting on the offensive, and it can be free to so operate only after our coast defense is reasonably secure and so recignized by the country.

"It was due to the securely defended condition of the Japanese ports that the Japanese fleet was free to seek out and watch its proper objective—the Russian fleet—without fear of interruption or recall to guard its home ports against raids by the Vladivostok squadron. This, one of the most valuable lessons of the late war in the East, is worthy of serious consideration by our country, with its extensive coast line, its many important harbors, and its many wealthy manufacturing coast cities.

"The security and protection of our interests require the completion of the defenses of our coast and the accompanying plan merits and should receive the generous support of the Congress.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"The White House, March 5, 1906."

In his letter transmitting the report of the board to the President, Secretary Taft says that the board estimates the cost of completing the defenses at $50,879,399, or $22,896,606 less than the sum proposed by the Endicott board.

"The changes that have taken place in the system of defense have been so radical," he says, "that the one proposed in 1886 is not comparable with the scheme as it exists to-day."

The estimates for the ports added since the Endicott board made its report, including Chesapeake Bay, are as follows: Eastern entrance to Long Island Sound, including $2,945,557, already expended, $8,021,263; Port Royal, already expended, $132,101; Tampa, including $704,487 already expended, $1,210,377; Puget Sound, including $4,280,915 already expended, $9,800,264; Chesapeake Bay, $6,102,871. The amount so far appropriated and allotted is $72,750,583.

He estimates the cost for the defense of the insular possessions, including the naval bases and coaling stations at $19,878,895, in addition to the $2,254,920 already appropriated. The estimated cost for the defense of the Isthmian Canal ports, exclusive of the cost of land, is $4,887,682.

A considerable part of the board's report is devoted to the necessity for defenses in the insular posessions and Isthmian ports. The places mentioned in this connection are Guantanamo, San Juan, Guam, Subig Bay, Manila Bay, Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, Colon, and Panama, the latter two the canal ports.

The recommendations of the Endicott Board for the defenses of home ports have been revised and the following ports recommended: Kennebec River, Portland, Portsmouth, Boston, New Bedford, Narragansett Bay, eastern entrance to Long Island Sound, eastern and southern entrances to New York, Delaware Bay, Baltimore, entrance to Chesapeake Bay, Hampton Roads, Potomac River, Cape Fear River, Charleston, Savannah, Key West, Pensacola, Mobile Bay, Mississippi River, Galveston, San Diego, Columbia River, Puget Sound, the lake ports, and Kiska Island.

Ports of the first importance should be defended with 12-inch guns and mortars; channels liable to cruiser attack 10-inch guns; places subject to naval raids, 6-inch guns; for the protection of mine fields, 3-inch guns.

Leschetizky

The Greatest Living Teacher of the Piano-forte Pronounces

The Pianola

The Only Piano-player Deserving Serious Consideration from the Musical World.

The following is a translation of a letter from Prof. Leschetizky just received at Aeolian Hall:

The Aeolian Company, New York:

Gentlemen:—Of all the piano-playing devices which I have heard your Pianola is the only one deserving of serious consideration from the musical world. Apart from the faultless technic and almost human touch which your instrument has, it is equipped with an invention which is of equal if not greater importance—that is your Metrostyle, which gives the player a true and authoritative guide to the proper interpretation of a composition.

An individual feature of the Pianola is its absolute submission to the personality and feeling of the player, thereby affording one an opportunity of giving his own sentiment full play. This freedom of personal control is of the greatest importance.

Prof Theodor Leschetizky
Wien 8 Februar 1906

AMONG musicians, this opinion from the greatest living teacher of piano-playing will come with tremendous weight. Who, if not Leschetizky, is able to settle beyond cavil the position of the Pianola in the sphere of musical art?

To the general public there are two points in Prof. Leschetizky's letter that are of immediate and direct importance: First, that he unreservedly commends the Pianola in all of its features; second, that he is unwilling to give serious consideration to other piano-playing devices that attempt in an imperfect manner to give similar results to the Pianola.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE:

Liszt and Leschetizky are the two names of modern times most famous as teachers of piano-playing. Leschetizky numbers among his pupils many celebrated concert pianists such as Paderewski, Mark Hambourg, Gabrilowitsch, Annette Essipoff, Fanny Bloomfield-Zeisler, etc. To be known as a pupil of Leschetizky is the ambition of pianists all over the world, and at the age of 76 to-day, he is engaged in Vienna with a dozen assistants, in putting the finishing touches on the musical education of advanced students of almost every nationality who intend to teach or to play in concert. Applications from would-be pupils are so numerous that to be accepted by the master is in itself considered a mark of high commendation.

Caution—It is necessary for the intending purchaser to discriminate sharply between the Pianola and all other Piano-players. To be genuine, the word "Pianola" must appear plainly upon the fallboard of the instrument. In Manhattan, the genuine Pianola and Pianola piano are sold only at Aeolian Hall.

Metrostyle Pianola, $250; Pianola Pianos, $550 to $1000
Easy monthly payments can be arranged.

TAKES OVER POWER COMPANY.

Pittsburg Reduction Concern Acquires St. Lawrence River Corporation.

The Pittsburg Reduction Company, which is controlled by the Mellons and other capitalists of Pittsburg, has taken over the St. Lawrence River Power Company, which owns a large water power plant at Massena, New York. The Pittsburg Reduction Company is the chief producer of aluminium in the United States, and has several reduction works, including a large plant at Massena. The Reduction Company is the principal customer of the St. Lawrence River Power Company, which also serves five or six other industrial establishments in the same neighborhood.

The Power Company has outstanding, in addition to $500,000 5 per cent. bonds, $3,500,000 of preferred stock and $3,000,000 of common stock. The company is taken over by the Pittsburg Reduction Company on the basis of an issue of $4,000,000 4 per cent. Pittsburg Reduction Company bonds in exchange for all the capital stock of the Power Company. The Reduction Company, moreover, guarantees the principal and interest of the $500,000 St. Lawrence River Power Company bonds.

MINE STOCK DEAL WENT BAD.

Brooklynite Seeks to Attach Gold Concern for $29,500.

Deputy Sheriff O'Neil was busy yesterday trying to serve an attachment for $29,500 against the Western Gold Mining Company, having offices at 49 Exchange Place. The attachment is the outgrowth of a suit in the Supreme Court by Charles Turner, to whom a claim was assigned by Charles M. Dunn of 22 Morton Street, Brooklyn.

The Western Gold Mining Company is an Idaho corporation, whose principal officers are in Chicago, and whose New York representatives are H. Whiteman & Co., brokers, at 49 Exchange Place. Werner Fabian of Chicago is President, Saul A. Hutchinson of Chicago Vice President, and William G. Neimyer of Chicago Treasurer.

The plaintiff alleges that on Feb. 7 Dunn deposited $29,500 with H. Whiteman & Co. as margin for 1,100 shares of Western Gold Mining stock, a curb security, at about $40 a share. It went to 43 within a short time and Dunn told Whiteman & Co. to sell. They said they would sell his stock at the profit of 3 points, but later reported that they were unable to find a purchaser at any price. Dunn was told not to become frightened, however. The bottom fell out of the market for Western Gold Mining and Dunn was told that he would have to put up $18,000 cash. This he was unable to do and was wiped out.

Dunn's attorneys found that Bernard Uhren, a partner in Whiteman & Co., had an agreement whereby he had the entire issue of the company under his control. The court promptly rendered a verdict in Dunn's favor.

Deputy Sheriff O'Neil yesterday served the attachment on the representative of H. Whiteman & Co. and also on Wells, Fargo & Co., to hold any deposit the Western Mining Company might have.

COAL OPERATORS CONFER.

President George F. Baer of the anthracite operators' Committee of Seven has issued a call for a meeting of the committee this afternoon at 143 Liberty Street, to consider the demands of the anthracite mine workers. After the meeting a joint meeting of the committee and the mine workers' committee will be called, at which the demands will be considered and action taken. This joint meeting will probably be held on Friday.

None of the anthracite operators would discuss the Pittsburg report that the soft coal operators in the Pittsburg and adjoining districts were willing to grant concessions to the miners if an anthracite strike could be forced. President Mitchell said that the report was a dream, so far as he knew.

C. J. Wittenberg, President of the Chesapeake and Ohio Coal & Coke Company, the selling corporation of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, said yesterday:

"The demand of the anthracite miners for absolute recognition of the union, I am pretty certain, Mr. Baer and the operators will not grant. The demand for higher wages would be insignificant compared with it. Recognition of the union, in the sense in which the miners look on it, would be a grave peril to the trade."

TELLS BY THEIR SLEEP

"I can tell by my little ones' sleep when a cold is coming on" said a mother when speaking of the advance symptoms of colds in children. "They toss about, are restless, their breathing is heavy and there are symptoms of night sweats. The next morning I start with Scott's Emulsion. The chances are that in a day or two they are all over it. Their rest is again peaceful and the breathing normal."

Here's a suggestion for all mothers. Scott's Emulsion always has been almost magical in its action when used as the ounce of prevention. Nothing seems to overcome child weakness quite so effectively and quickly as Scott's Emulsion.

EFFORT TO SAVE GIRL DELAYS CLAICHE TRIAL

Plea of Guilty to Less Serious Charge Than Murder Proposed.

JEROME LETS CASE GO ON

Mack Says a Policeman May Be Indicted—Witnesses Tell of Dead Man Gendron's Cruelty.

An effort was made yesterday by counsel for Berthe Claiche, on trial for the murder of Emile Gendron, to ascertain whether the District Attorney would consent to accept a plea of guilty to a less serious charge than murder in the first degree. The attitude of the District Attorney and his assistants on the matter could not be learned yesterday.

Just as the trial was about to be resumed yesterday morning before Justice Davis came the announcement that an adjournment would be taken until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The defendant, who was in court with her lawyers, showed no emotion as she was led to the detention room back of the courtroom.

Instead of being taken from there across the Bridge of Sighs to her cell in the Tombs at once, she was detained in that room for an hour. Of her counsel, Abraham Levy remained with her, while Mr. Rosalsky went upstairs to the District Attorney's office. Mr. Jerome did not arrive from Lakeville until about noon, when he went out to luncheon with the two lawyers representing the prisoner.

When Mr. Jerome and counsel were seen again Mr. Levy announced that his client would take her place on the witness stand about noon to-day, as originally planned. Asked if an arrangement had been made providing that all questions concerning corrupt acts by the police, which have been objected to so far by Mr. Ely and ruled out by Justice Davis, would be admitted without objection, Mr. Levy said that not a word concerning any such arrangement had passed.

James F. Mack, after his resignation as Third Deputy Police Commissioner, said he had posted himself thoroughly regarding the part the police played in the life of Berthe Claiche, and that he was convinced that there would be startling revelations.

"Whether or not the woman who is accused of Gendron's murder is convicted," he declared, "I firmly believe that a policeman will be indicted for murder in the first degree before the case is dropped. I am well satisfied that I know the man who bought the revolver with which the shooting was done."

Mr. Mack also said that the investigation would disclose untold corruption among members of the abolished vice squad. As Third Deputy he looked over the expense accounts of the members of this squad.

"All of these men, or practically all," he said, "were appointed to the force in 1905. They are young men. Their expense bills, which were paid by the city amounted to from $15 to $25 a night. I don't believe for an instant that they spent anything like the amounts they turned in, and evidence has developed that they took money from the unfortunate women upon whom they were supposed to spy. So it would seem that they got money from both sides."

At the afternoon session Assistant District Attorney Ely, in making objections to questions by Mr. Levy, repeatedly sprang to his feet and rushed to the desk in front of Justice Davis. When this had happened the third or fourth time Justice Davis said:

"Mr. Ely, I can hear your objections without your making them so loud."

Not long after that an old Frenchman named Charles Dumas, a caterer, testified to an attack he saw Gendron make on the Claiche woman in 1904.

"Oh," said Dumas, turning to the jury and gesturing at every word, "he was the very coarse man, the very, very coarse man. And he was so very tall, and then he was a man of most formidable expression, just like this. [Knitting his gray brows and pushing his lips far out and shaking his head violently.] B-r-r-r—b-r-r!"

"Stop! Stop!" cried Mr. Ely. A moment later Mr. Ely asked the witness with what weapon Gendron struck the Claiche woman.

"With that," answered Dumas, holding up a withered fist and pointing to it with his other hand. One of the half dozen overdressed women occupying reserved seats in the place set aside for lawyers broke into shrill laughter. Justice Davis winced and declared:

"If that laugh occurs again I shall be compelled to clear the courtroom. We are carrying on serious business here. This is no place to come for amusement—it is a place where a life is at stake."

Jeannette Roumain, a married sister of Berthe Claiche, testified to having seen Gendron strike her sister twice in the Spring of 1905.

William Hoffner, a clerk working on Seventh Avenue and a schoolmate of Policeman Harry Morton, told of seeing the arrest of Gendron and the shooting on July 3, 1905. He was certain that he had seen Gendron put his hand to his hip pocket and turn around just before the first shot was fired.

Maurice Heilmann, French Vice Consul to this port, was put on the stand to identify a record about Gendron copied from the Paris Police Department. It showed that he had been convicted of larceny once, of attempted murder once, and of assault twice. All efforts by the counsel for the defense to have the document admitted as evidence were ruled out.

Nathan Ballard, Jr., who described himself as "a private betting commissioner and an exhibition pool player," while admitting that he had at times earned his living as a mender of poolroom tables, described an attack on the Claiche girl by Gendron which he had seen in the Summer of 1904, while living in the house on West Twenty-eighth Street adjoining theirs. Ballard called the dead man's name "Gerdron," which was the way it had been spelled until it was proved by testimony of acquaintances in court that his real name was Gendron.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen announces that a public hearing will be held next Monday on the proposal to issue $120,000 of special revenue bonds to equip two Brooklyn and two Manhattan Assembly districts with voting machines for use at the next general election.

The second annual ball and entertainment of the Amcehat Society, held at the Grand Central Palace last evening, was a great success. The society is an organization of the employes of the Acker, Merrall & Condit Company. About 1,200 persons were present. The boxes were occupied by officers, Directors, and managers of the company. The very interesting programme was under the direction of Hurtig & Seamon.

ROCKEFELLER TO AID CZAR?

Report That He Offers $200,000,000 for Railroad Concessions.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 5.—According to a dispatch from St. Petersburg to The Daily News, John D. Rockefeller is coming to the financial rescue of Russia. The dispatch says:

"This information comes to The Daily News correspondent from a statesman who in speaking of Russia's financial crisis said:

"'Unless Count Witte gets money immediately a Cabinet and financial crash will be imminent. The Treasury is depleted and unable to meet current expenses. It is now confronted by the necessity of paying the bill for the maintenance of Russian prisoners in Japan, the bill for the purchase price of the land acquired by the Peasants' Bank, and the short-time bills held by the Mendelssohns.

"'All efforts to obtain a loan have proved futile. The Americans demand collateral. The Rothschild crowd refused to advance money until after the projected reforms had been realized. The French syndicate consented to make a loan at 6 per cent. interest and 2½ per cent. commission, the issue price to be 92, with the indorsement of the Douma. But the Mendelssohn notes are due in April, and our contract enjoins us from new loans until these are paid. Mendelssohn refuses to forego this stipulation, while the French syndicate is unwilling to make any advance.

"'Meanwhile 400,000,000 rubles ($200,000,000) is needed to settle the Mendelssohn and other pressing accounts. Count Witte wanted to issue an interior lottery loan, but the mere rumor that he had it in mind caused the price of former similar issues to tumble, ruining many of the small holders.

"'Thereupon Mr. Rockefeller offered 400,000,000 rubles for a concession for railroads from Tashkend to Tomsk and from Tehita to Polamoshna and a grant of land on both sides of the prospective lines. The money advanced will be paid back in installments and used in the construction of the roads. Count Witte likes the scheme and Grand Duke Nicholas, who is anxious to unite Transcaspia and Siberia, is also inclined to favor it. The Czar hesitates to sanction the step before the Douma assembles.

"'Meanwhile the financial situation is exceedingly grave. While the gold lasted which has been shipped abroad the ruble was at par. Now paper money is on the verge of serious depreciation. The only remedy lies in the adoption of broad, sincere reforms.'"

Hagenbeck's Big Shipload Includes Several High-Priced Beasts.

A shipload of Carl Hagenbeck's wild beasts, said to be the largest shipment ever brought into America, is due in New York this month on the Hamburg liner Praetoria.

In the collection are three giraffes, said to be worth $10,000 each; two hippopotami, valued at $5,000 each; twenty-eight elephants, thirty-seven camels, sixteen bears, a blue-faced mandrill six feet tall, and a general assortment of lion and tiger cubs, pythons, boaconstrictors, and monkeys.

Some of the birds and snakes and the mandrill are ordered for the New York Zoological Park in the Bronx. All the animals probably will be taken care of for some weeks at the park until they haye recovered from the trip.

TRACING HAMILTON'S SPECULATIVE ACCOUNTS

N. Y. Life Investigators Think They Swallowed Large Sums.

MORTGAGE ON JUDGE'S HOUSE

Rumors That McCall Was Treacherously Dealt With by Certain Trustees Are Bitterly Commented On.

Investigators in the employ of the New York Life Insurance Company have been looking up the financial affairs of Andrew Hamilton, whom Charles E. Hughes termed in the insurance investigation the "Legislative Generalissimo." The results promise to be interesting. It has been learned that Hamilton has among his assets two or three stock speculative accounts in which it is not clear just who was concerned. It has been suggested that an investigation of these be started and an effort be made to find out if they had any connection with his legislative activities.

The Armstrong Committee's inquisitors had hard work last Fall trying to figure out what Hamilton did with the hundreds of thousands of dollars that he drew from the New York Life Insurance Company on the executive order of John A. McCall. The Armstrong Committee never got further than the transcripts of Hamilton's accounts with two Albany banks, brought here by officers of the banks who knew as little what the items stood for as did the committeemen themselves.

The Armstrong Committee also produced from Hamilton's Albany office a man about thirty or thirty-five years old who said that he had long been employed at $10 a week as a general utility boy. But he didn't know more about Hamilton's bank accounts than that he had once or twice made deposits for his employer. The New York Life investigators are determined to have the partnership in Hamilton's various stock speculative accounts clearly determined as a possible means of throwing light upon some of the persons who received the amounts he spent "by order of the President."

Hamilton's House Is Mortgaged.

Besides these accounts about all the property that the New York Life investigators have been able to find is Hamilton's house at Albany, which is heavily mortgaged. Nothing will be done about seeing what property of John A. McCall may be left to levy on until his estate has been settled up.

In insurance circles there is an increasing amount of discussion of what may happen if an attempt is made to push suits against Mr. McCall's estate. Charges of treachery based on an alleged agreement between Mr. McCall and certain of the Trustees of the company that if he would pay back the $235,000 Hamilton got in 1903 and 1904, he would be let out of any further responsibility are freely made in some quarters. In this vein the Insurance Leader says in its current number:

> Justice seems to demand that it be recorded that in the opinion of most men familiar with present conditions in New York and particularly the company over which he presided so long that there was a Judas in camp and that Judas is now enjoying his thirty pieces of silver. Whether he will further imitate Judas by going and hanging himself remains to be seen, but God will smite him in time.

The Surveyor, another insurance paper says this under the caption "Anathema":

> The Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company should resign. If they, individually and collectively, retain any smoldering embers of manhood and remorse they will resign and separate themselves from the insurance business and try to forget the ignominy that covers them. If they will not resign, some way will be found of kicking them out. The interests of the policy holders of so great an institution are not safe in the hands of moral cowards who, in a futile attempt to shift their own responsibility, wantonly turned upon their great leader, an honorable, true, warm-hearted man, in order to save their own precious skins and reputations. Their reputations, forsooth! If to become despicable in the sight of all true men is a saving of reputation, then they have saved their reputations.

The Trustees of the New York Life held a meeting yesterday, to consider their attitude toward the Armstrong Committee's recommendations. They left the matter entirely in the hands of President Orr, who, as THE TIMES told on Sunday, has arranged with the officials of various other life insurance companies to go into a general plan for presenting the views of the companies to the Legislature on Friday. The New York Life Trustees adopted these resolutions:

Will Oppose Some Provisions.

> Resolved, That this board recognizes the merits of a large number of the proposed amendments to the insurance law presented to the Legislature by the Armstrong Committee, many of the provisions of which have heretofore been adopted by this board by resolutions of the board or by amendments to the by-laws of the company, and this board heartily approves of and indorses a large number of the recommendations of the committee;
>
> Resolved further, That this board, having been advised by its executive officers and its actuaries that some of the provisions of the proposed laws will in their judgment be highly injurious to the interests of the policy holders of the company, and will tend to lessen instead of to increase the safety of their investments represented by their premiums already paid, and will seriously impair the carrying out by this company of the purposes for which it was incorporated, and this board concurring in such advice, hereby authorizes and instructs the President of this company to take such action as in his discretion may seem proper, including the employment of counsel, to bring to the attention of the Legislature the objections to such proposed legislation.

There were several meetings of insurance officials yesterday at which the programme was discussed. The agents of various companies also held a meeting at 140 Broadway, and decided to send a special train to Albany on Friday morning, that the Legislature may see how many are those who believe that the report of the Armstrong Committee, if adopted, will destroy their means of livelihood.

Policy Holders' Voice in Elections Not Provided For, So Far.

When the Legislature listens on Friday to arguments on the bills recommended by the Armstrong Committee attention will be drawn to a seeming discrepancy between the recommendations of the report itself and the provisions of the bills. Lawyers who are concerned in the situation take it for granted because of the nearness of the hearing that all the committee's bills have been introduced.

The committee in its report considered under separate heads the question of Directors of a stock company giving to policy holders the right to vote for Directors and the question of the retirement of stock in a stock company. The report recommended that with the consent of a majority of the stock in both instances the way be paved for the degree of mutualization suggested. In the matter of giving to the policy holders the right to vote the committee discussed the legal status of the question in view of the decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the Lord suit to restrain the mutualization of the Equitable on the 24-28 division of the board, and then said:

> It seems to the committee that an amendment to the insurance law should be enacted giving to the Directors of life insurance corporations with capital stock authority to confer upon policy holders the right to vote for Directors with the concurrence of a majority of the stock, and the committee so recommends. Whenever the voting privilege shall be given to policy holders, statutory provisions for open lists, nominations, and balloting, as in the case of mutual companies, should become applicable.

This recommendation, including the requirement that the stock must consent, goes materially beyond the contention of some of the parties to the Lord suit, who argued that the Directors of the Equitable by a three-fourths vote had the right under the charter to mutualize the society by giving policy holders of $5,000 and upward the right to vote. If the Armstrong Committee's recommendation were adopted, it would settle the question of the power of the Equitable Directors to confer on policy holders the right to vote for the entire board under the society's charter provision.

In the bills which have thus far come to light, however, not even the recommendation contained in the report is proposed for enactment. The only thing contained in the general bill which the committee has had introduced (Senate Bill 528, entitled "An Act To Amend the Insurance Laws Generally") which has anything to do with mutualization is Section 95.

This section fixes the terms on which a life insurance company may reincorporate and may retire its capital stock, but says nothing about the right of policy holders to vote for Directors.

PEABODY NOT IN OIL.

Letter So Informs London Policy Holder—Speyer and Olcott Resign.

From a copy of The Review of London, a British insurance paper, it became known yesterday how President Charles A. Peabody of the Mutual Life has been reassuring English policy holders who have been disturbed by the accounts they have received of Mutual Life developments since his election.

To a London policy holder Mr. Peabody wrote this letter, according to The Review:

"Dear Sir: I received your letter of Dec. 29, and thank you very much for your thoughtfulness. It relates to a matter, however, in which I have no interest. The statements in the newspapers, as to my connection with the Standard Oil Company are nothing but the dreams of sensational journalism or the malicious products of those who wish to injure the company. I have never had and have not now any connection or interest in the oil business. I am glad you have thus given me an opportunity to contradict the erroneous reports. Very truly yours,

"CHARLES A. PEABODY."

Joseph H. Choate, to whom William H. Truesdale and John W. Auchincloss, the remaining members of the Mutual Life's investigating committee, have offered the appointment as counsel, returned to New York yesterday and sent word to the committeemen that they would have to "show him" before he would consider their proposal.

It is learned that Mr. Choate will insist on being satisfied with the purposes of the committee and with the condition of things in the Mutual Life generally before considering the post which William G. Choate, James B. Dill, and D Cady Herrick, and Bainbridge Colby quit after Stuyvesant Fish resigned because he became convinced that an investigation of the Mutual from the inside was an impossibility. Mr. Choate, it is understood, has even been urged to go into the board of the Mutual itself. Mr. Choate will have an interview with Messrs. Truesdale and Auchincloss to-day to consider matters.

Attention was called yesterday to the fact that the amended requisition which the Truesdale Committee sent to President Peabody after Mr. Fish resigned as a substitute for the drag-net requisition calling for information about the relations of the Trustees to the various subsidiary companies of the Mutual Life not only excludes all the Trustees but most of the clerks of the Mutual's supply department. Under the old régime these clerks signed vouchers for Fields with a freedom that the Armstrong Investigating Committee found hard to understand.

The requisition also does not apply to the existing head of the Company's law department, Julien T. Davies, who was appointed general solicitor by ex-President McCurdy just before McCurdy resigned. Mr. Davies has long been counsel for the Mutual, but did not become a salaried official until his appointment as general solicitor.

James Speyer announced his resignation as a Trustee of the Mutual Life yesterday and Dudley Olcott did the same thing in Albany, where he is President of the Mechanics and Farmers' Bank. Both of these resignations have been expected for some time, Mr. Olcott, in fact, having sent his to President Peabody last Saturday. Neither Mr. Speyer nor Mr. Olcott would say anything of their reasons for resigning. The resignation of Cornelius Vanderbilt is understood to have been already prepared and announcement of it is expected in a day or two.

Formal announcement of the organization of the International Policy Holders Committee of Mutual Life and New York Life policy holders will be made in a few days. It is taken for granted in insurance quarters that Stuyvesant Fish will be its Chairman.

NEW GRAND JURY CHOSEN.

Counsel Present in Behalf of Mutual Reserve Officers.

As a rule the selection, swearing in, and charging of the Grand Jury is a rather perfunctory ceremony, disposed of in a few minutes. There was a departure from this rule yesterday when the thirty-one talesmen drawn for the March Grand Jury appeared before Justice O'Sullivan in General Sessions. Former Assistant District Attorney Rand was present on behalf of the officers of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company and demanded the privilege of examining and challenging the talesmen under the provisions of Section 237 of the Penal Code.

Acting District Attorney Nott pointed out that the section applied only when somebody was already under indictment and that in the present case, no indictment had as yet been returned. He declared himself perfectly willing, however, to let Mr. Rand examine the jurors.

The examination of the affairs of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company was begun by the February Grand Jury, and was particularly directed against Frederick A. Burnham, President; George Burnham, Jr., Secretary, and George D. Eldridge, Vice President, who have been accused of employing the funds of the company to meet liabilities growing out of judgments against them as private persons. It was said yesterday that indictments may be expected within a few days and that they probably would have been found before but for the fact that the Burnhams and Mr. Eldridge had been permitted to appear before the Grand Jury in person in an effort to explain the transactions.

When, one year ago, the Grand Jury indicted Abraham H. Hummel in connection with the Dodge-Morse divorce troubles, his counsel fought the indictment because he had been before the jury. It was then deemed best to annul the first indictment and to obtain another from a new Grand Jury. In this case the District Attorney's office is said to have been bent on avoiding difficulties of a similar kind.

Edward Van Valkenburgh, a retired merchant, of 524 Fifth Avenue, was appointed foreman. Four talesmen who confessed to prejudices against insurance companies were challenged by Mr. Rand and excluded by the court. William G. Rockefeller was called as a talesman, but did not respond. Among those accepted was Henry Holt, the novelist-publisher. An hour and a half was spent in completing the jury, which now is as follows:

Edward Van Valkenburgh, retired, 524 Fifth Avenue, foreman; David Herrman, merchant, Cotton Exchange; Percy H. Brundage, Secretary, 49 Wall Street; Donald Nicoll, clothing, 503 Fifth Avenue; James Lawlor, painter, 360 West Twenty-third Street; Frederick Strauss, banker, 21 Broad Street; William Daub, Superintendent, Cauldwell Avenue; Solomon Tim, merchant, 93 Franklin Street; Heyward H. McAlister, retired, 603 Madison Avenue; William A. Topping, President, 65 Fifth Avenue; John Shreyer, President, 315 West Forty-second Street; Frederick S. Wells, dry goods, 320 Broadway; Henry Holt, publisher, 29 West Twenty-third Street; John W. Brice, real estate, 78 West Ninety-sixth Street; David L. Phillips, real estate, 158 Broadway; Robert A. Greacen, retired, 307 West Thirty-third Street; Louis M. Hornthal, merchant, 26 East Fourteenth Street; Emil Stork, cigars, 455 West Twenty-fourth Street; John L. Dudley, merchant, 55 Worth Street; Evert Jansen Wendell, merchant, 8 East Thirty-eighth Street; David H. Hyman, real estate, 17 Park Place; John N. Hayward, real estate, 45 Broadway; Rudolph A. Loewenthal, Vice President, 127 Duane Street.

In his charge to the Grand Jury Judge O'Sullivan did not mention insurance matters.

THEY PROMISED JEROME.

James H. Hyde and McCurdy Will Come Back If Needed.

District Attorney Jerome's first move in connection with the possible prosecution of officials of the big insurance companies became known yesterday in the news that before Richard A. McCurdy and James Hazen Hyde sailed for Europe the District Attorney accepted from them a promise that they would return when and if he should want them in connection with his investigations.

INSURANCE COMPANY QUITS.

Tradesmen's Life Asks That It Be Dissolved—Claims, $48,000; Assets Few.

The Tradesmen's Life Insurance Company of 253 Broadway, through George Merrill, Ephraim S. Johnson, and Albert G. Maher, members of its Board of Directors, asked for a dissolution of the company in the Supreme Court yesterday. The petition sets forth that the company's assets and outlook for new business are insufficient to warrant the continuance of its operations.

The company was organized in 1888 as the Jewelers and Tradesmen's Company. The name was changed in 1890. The mortality rate among the policy holders has been heavy of late. The policy holders number 506 at present. Twenty-seven claims, aggregating $48,000, remain unpaid.

The sole assets of the company consist of office furniture, $104 in cash, and $417 due from agents.

POLITICS, SAYS MARKEL.

Canal Contractor Says Rival Bidders Sought President's Favor.

WASHINGTON, March 5—Jacob E. Markel of Omaha, whose commissary contract with the Isthmian Canal Commission was canceled, resumed his testimony before the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals to-day. He repeated denials previously made that he had had the benefit of sample menus prepared by Hudgins & Dumas of New York, rival bidders, in making his bid for the commissary concession.

Mr. Taliaferro put into the record a statement prepared by his clerk showing that under the Hudgins & Dumas contract the receipts for the first year would have been $39,600 less than under the Markel contract, and in five years $691,200 less. Mr. Taliaferro asked Mr. Markel to state how it was that he had received the contract in the face of the showing made. The witness said he had no knowledge of Hudgins & Dumas, and Mr. Taliaferro read the names of several persons given by the firm as references. Among these was President Roosevelt.

"Do you not think this indicates the firm to be a reputable one?" asked Mr. Taliaferro.

"It indicates that it was after political influence anyway," retorted the witness.

Mr. Taliaferro asked Mr. Markel if he meant to imply that because a firm gave as a reference the President of the United States that it was seeking "political influence."

"I was asked what political influence had aided me, and I replied, 'Absolutely none,'" said the witness.

"Do you desire to change your testimony where you say that the men on the Isthmus were 'fed like hogs, the only difference being that the food was passed out on tin plates'?" asked Mr. Taliaferro. The witness said he was willing to let his statement stand as made on Friday. He also admitted that he had talked with Chairman Shonts and Lawyer William Nelson Cromwell about his testimony, but only in a general way. The committee adjourned until 10:30 o'clock to-morrow, when Chairman Shonts will be heard.

WASH-OUT CLOSE TO SUBWAY.

In Broadway, at 160th Street—Did Not Damage Tunnel.

Two gangs of laborers from the Bureau of Highways were kept busy for hours yesterday filling in a wash-out in Broadway at the corner of 160th Street. It happened early Sunday morning as a result of the heavy rains of Saturday. The laborers found a hole in the roadway six feet deep and twelve feet long. As it extended to within a foot and a half of the wall of the Subway tube it was believed at first that the subway walls at 160th Street had been damaged by the storm.

When the news of the wash-out reached General Supt. Hedley of the Interborough he sent engineers to examine the Subway tube. They reported that the Subway had not been damaged, although some water had backed up from a steel drain. This defect will be remedied. Even should all Broadway cave in around the Subway tubes, the walls would hold intact, the engineers said.

Ruling Upholds Closed Shop.

A decision in favor of the closed shop was handed down yesterday afternoon by Justice Marean in Brooklyn in an action to set aside a contract between the stereotypers' and electrotypers' unions and the United States Printing Company of Ohio, which has a plant in Brooklyn. The suit was brought by three employes, one of whom is a stockholder, to have the contract set aside on the ground of public policy.

Boy Killed by Stray Bullet.

Edward Gerard, 5 years old, of Adams Street, West New York, was accidentally killed in Jefferson Street, West New York, yesterday afternoon by Clarence Knight, a negro boy, 8 years old. Knight, who knew nothing of firearms, picked up a magazine rifle which another boy had laid down, and pulled the trigger. Gerard, who was playing some distance down the street, was shot in the temple. Knight was arrested.

HOUSE PUTS TRUST FIGHT UP TO THE PRESIDENT

Asks Him If Northern Securities Was Prosecuted Criminally.

WILLIAMS'S BITTER ATTACK

Minority Leader Says President Makes His Own Law and Suspends Legislation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—After listening for nearly an hour this afternoon to John Sharp Williams's caustic arraignment of the President and the Attorney General, the House passed Mr. Williams's resolution inquiring whether the Department of Justice had instituted criminal prosecutions against any of the individuals or corporations adjudged by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Northern Securities case to have violated the anti-trust laws.

The resolution was reported by the Committee on Judiciary some time ago, and was called up by Mr. Jenkins, Chairman of that committee, toward the close of the day. Mr. Williams began by explaining that he disliked to say what he had to say until he had received the answer of the Attorney General, but when he had asked for unanimous consent the other day to withhold his remarks until the answer was received, Mr. Payne, the Republican floor leader, had objected, and he was compelled, therefore, by the rules of the House to speak now or lose his opportunity.

"The people know now," he said, "that only by the execution of the criminal features of the anti-trust laws will the criminal practices be stopped. Injunctions will not do, because they are ignored or evaded, and fines are easily paid by the millionaire criminals and produce no effect. It is a year and ten months since the Supreme Court decided that this contract was a plain violation of the law. But everybody knows that the injunction has been ignored, just as it has been in the case of the Beef Trust.

"We are rapidly reaching the condition where the Executive is no longer merely the Executive, but indulges in discretion as to whether law shall be enforced or not. It is not a part of the Executive's duty to indulge in any reflection of the wisdom or unwisdom of the laws he is desired to execute. The President is the servant of the people and the legislative bodies, and it is his business to execute the laws he finds on the statute books. He has no right to suspend the operation of written laws. Charles I. was not suspended, but he was treated with equal finality because he had suspended the laws of his country.

"The execution of this law is not discretionary, but mandatory. The same act which gives the right to stop abuses by injunction also puts upon the Executive the duty of stopping them by criminal prosecution, and it puts both these duties in the very same sentence, saying 'by proceedings, suits, and prosecutions.'

"The saddest commentary on the present condition in the United States was made by an Omaha jury which acquitted a self-confessed kidnapper simply because his victim was the son of a member of the Beef Trust. When you let the people realize that the law against the trusts is to be executed according to the discretion of the Attorney General or President, you are approaching the verge of anarchy, and lay the country open to the inroads of chaotic fanatics, Socialists, and Anarchists."

Mr. Jenkins and Gen. Grosvenor both replied to Mr. Williams. Mr. Jenkins said he would have had nothing to say if Mr. Williams had not reflected upon the President and the Attorney General.

"The statute of limitations ran a long time ago," he went on, "long before the present Attorney General came into office. But there had been accomplished by the decision and the subsequent injunction all that was desired—the breaking up of the contract."

"I'll show you the only answer that can be made by the Attorney General," exclaimed Grosvenor. "It will be a complete answer, 'No criminal prosecution has begun.' That is the whole of it, and out of that the gentleman has made his bitter speech. On that we have had horrors upon horrors until they trod upon each other's heels, so swiftly they came in the gentleman's imagination."

"The gentleman from Ohio will never reach that stage," retorted Williams, "where he will be unready to defend anything that smacks of connection with a Republican administration. 'Out of their own mouths shall they be judged.' Perhaps I wanted to get a Republican Attorney General in a Republican Administration to admit his failure to attempt to punish these criminals.

"But are the violations of the anti-trust law any less since the decision? Is there a man of any sense within sound of my voice who does not know that there is a Beef Trust, a Steel Trust, a Glass Trust, a Tobacco Trust, &c.? But in one particular the gentleman from Ohio is right. The reply of the Attorney General to this resolution will not explain why no criminal prosecution was begun before they were barred, and it will not shift the responsibility from the Administration."

RABIES STUDY CUT SHORT.

Dog Chained in a Cage by Veterinarian Dies in Convulsions.

A study of rabies conducted by Dr. Arthur W. Smith of East Orange, N. J., was brought to an end Sunday night by the death of the dog which he had in a cage and was observing night and day.

"My reason for keeping the animal alive as long as possible," said Dr. Smith yesterday, "was because not nearly so much is known of rabies as is generally supposed.

"Real cases are not frequent and there is much to be learned about this disease; also a number of popular fictions to be overthrown. Dogs, when suffering from rabies, for instance, are not afraid of water. The term hydrophobia is entirely wrong when applied to that disease."

The dog which Dr. Smith had under observation was a fox terrier which belonged to a Miss Parmely. Its owner did not know what was the matter with it and led the dog about the streets while she was shopping. On Friday morning it entered a neighbor's yard and killed chickens. Then Miss Parmely took it to Dr. Smith, who is a veterinarian.

"It was suffering from actute rabies," said Dr. Smith. "There are two kinds of rabies—acute and dumb. In the latter a dog, no matter how ferocious before, will become as quiet and affectionate as a lamb. All dogs die, however, when afflicted with either kind of rabies."

SAY JEWELERS OWE $150,000.

Creditors of Edelhoff Brothers & Co. Call the Concern a Dummy.

Judge Blanchard of the Supreme Court has appointed Rawson L. Wood receiver of the assets of Edelhoff Brothers & Co., (corporation,) dealers in diamonds, jewelry, and fancy goods at 574 Fifth Avenue, on the application of J. R. Wood & Sons, creditors for $37,994. The receiver is a partner in the firm of J. R. Wood & Sons and his bond was fixed at $50,000.

Edelhoff Brothers & Co. was incorporated in September, 1905, with a capital stock of $150,000 and opened a store at 574 Fifth Avenue on Nov. 1. Gustave A. Edelhoff was President and Augusta G. Edelhoff Secretary and Treasurer. In the application for the receiver it was stated that it was believed the officers acted as dummies for Conrad Schickerling of Schickerling Brothers & Co., (corporation,) against which a bankruptcy petition was filed on Feb. 26.

Edelhoff Brothers & Co. purchased $100,000 worth of diamonds after starting in business and turned over to Mr. Schickerling $76,000 worth of the diamonds to be manufactured into jewelry, and he was allowed to dispose of them. When the company was organized, of the $150,000 capital stock only $2,000 was paid in, it is asserted, but jewelry, &c., to the amount of $98,000 was set aside by Mr. Schickerling in payment of shares of stock in Edelhoff Brothers & Co., but the officers permitted Mr. Schickerling to retain the jewelry and sell it and keep the proceeds.

The liabilities of Edelhoff Brothers & Co. are reported to be $150,000. A committee of three creditors has been appointed to look into the situation and see what can be done.

Hearing on Chinatown Park Plan.

Borough President Ahearn has set Tuesday, March 20, for a public hearing before the local improvement board on the proposal to wipe out Chinatown and establish a small park within the boundaries of Bayard Street, the Bowery, Chatham Square, and Park Row, Worth Street and Mulberry Street. Mayor McClellan favors the plan and many of the property owners interested have signed a petition for the park.

New Weights and Measures Inspectors

Mayor McClellan announced yesterday that he had appointed three Inspectors of Weights and Measures at $1,200 each. They are Patrick H. Lyden of 691 East 143d Street, who is a veteran; Galen B. Hathaway of 312 West 125th Street, and John F. Bammann of 262 West Seventeenth Street.

Begin to Build Church House.

Ground was broken yesterday for the new church house of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, which is to cost $150,000. The congregation decided to build the house on Jan. 24 last, and $80,000 have been raised already. The building will have a frontage of 48 feet, will be five stories in height, and will include a gymnasium, reading rooms, club rooms, and other features.

Todd Will Contest to Begin.

The contest of the will of Mrs. Margaretta Todd, the old woman whose body was found near Philadelphia last Summer a few hours after she left this city, will be begun before Surrogate Fitzgerald on Monday next. The contestants are her daughter and grandson, Mrs. Rosalie Tousey and Milton Berolsheim. They asked to be allowed to examine Lawyer Ingersoll Lockwood, the executor of the will offered for probate, before the trial. The motion was denied. Lawyer G. G. Hastings served a summons on Lockwood in a suit for an accounting of $97,000 worth of property, held by him as trustee for Mrs. Tousey.

SOCIALISM NOW MENACES THE NATION, SAYS O'BRIEN

Religious Faith Must Be Revived to Save Us, Justice Thinks.

AMERICAN CITIES THE BEST

In Lecture for Cancer Home He Discusses the Century's Civilization—Deplores Materialism.

"If there be a failure to realize our seeming destiny, it will be due to Socialism, materialism, irreligion, and the inordinate growth of the vices," Justice Morgan J. O'Brien declared in a lecture at Carnegie Hall last night. He was addressing a large audience gathered in aid of the Servants of Relief of the Hospitals for Incurable Cancer.

Ex-Judge Alton B. Parker occupied the chair, with Archbishop Farley on his left. Introducing the lecturer, Judge Parker said:

"It is a relief to turn from the nauseating exhibitions of human greed which we have witnessed in the last few months, and which have involved men in whom we had the greatest confidence, to another picture in which a body of women are banded for the assistance of those who, without friends or money, are dying of a terrible disease. It is refreshing to find people who are obeying the divine command to 'Love thy neighbor as thyself.' If there is a more admirable body of men and women laboring for the good of others I do not know it; if there is a more deserving charity I have not yet found it."

Justice O'Brien began his address on "The Civilization of the Twentieth Century" by referring to the marvelous material growth of the Oriental empires, and the rise and fall of Greece and Rome, laying stress upon the patterns of arts supplied by these empires, the sculpture of Phideas and Praxiteles, the poetry of Homer, the oratory of Demosthenes and Cicero, the philosophy of Plato and Aristotle.

"But amid all this material splendor and intellectual triumph," he said, "we look in vain for the existence of a single charitable institution for the unfortunate and afflicted. It was due to a policy which regarded the individual as nothing and the State as everything.

"How complete the change upon the advent of Christianity! With the advancement of its principles step by step went the erection of houses and institutions for the relief of every form of human misery.

The lecturer gave it as his opinion that the highest manifestation of the twentieth century city was to be found in America.

"It has been asserted by more than one," he said, "that it is more arduous to discharge the duties of Mayor of one of our municipalities than those of the Chief Executive of the Nation."

The massing of large numbers in one place, said the Justice, tended to strengthen the forces of "Socialism and materialism." He quoted an editorial from THE NEW YORK TIMES in which it was said:

"An invitation has been extended to every crook and criminal, to all divekeepers, gamblers, and blackguards the world over, to converge upon New York and ply their vocations.

"There is a vast horde of citizens openly in sympathy with vice and law-breaking, who actually desire a corrupt police system in order that the laws may be suspended and the profits of vice and illegitimate callings brought within their reach."

Justice O'Brien commented that this editorial was published a year ago, and that he read it to show that his remarks were not exaggeration.

Regarding the decrease of churches, compared with the increase of population in this city, the lecturer said:

"In a free country religion necessarily must be the handmaid of liberty, for it is axiomatic that the strength of a republic rests upon the virtue of its citizens, and virtue is essentially based on religion. A fact that stands prominently forth in our history is that virtue has decreased in proportion to the destruction of religious sentiment among our people, and it requires no prophet to tell what must be the inevitable end if some check to the rapid inroads of Socialism and materialism be not found."

UCHIDA INVITES US ALL.

Tells Michigan Alumni Japan Is Open to Americans to Make Money.

H. F. Shah, the Chinese Consul General, at a dinner of the University of Michigan Club at the Hotel Gotham last night, said:

"I want to assure you that there is no anti-foreign movement in China, in spite of the rumors we have heard in the last few days. The State Department has been assured of this already by Mr. Rockhill, your distinguished Minister at Peking."

The dinner became a regular college evening. The old yells were given, the old songs rendered, and graduates of twenty years' standing, with as much gusto as if they had taken their degrees last Summer, sang:

Here's to the maid with the golden hair,
And eyes that are brimming with blue;
Garlands of bluebells and maize intertwine,
And hearts that are true and voices combine;
Hail!
Hail to the college whose colors we wear,
Hurrah for the Yellow and Blue!

An address on the Hague Tribunal by W. L. Penfield, ex-Solicitor of the Department of State, followed, and then the Consuls General of England, Japan and China, who sat together at the guests' table, had to submit to mild hazing and make speeches.

Lindsay Russell, the toastmaster, in proposing their health, declared that England and America were the peace-makers, for they remembered the promise, "Blessed are the peace-makers for they shall inherit the earth."

"There may seem to be a lull in international affairs now, but remember there was a like lull in 1870, 1898, and 1903," said Judge Penfield. "There may not seem to be any prospect of war at present, but is it not our duty to take every step in peace to prevent the outbreak of another international conflict?"

Consul General S. Uchida then spoke. He said:

"I hope many Americans will come to my country. The Americans and English are the most popular foreigners in Japan, because you are its best friends. Come and see what chances you can find for making money in Japan."

THE NAVAHOE HARD ASHORE.

Clyde Liner Driven on Middle Shoal in a Gale.

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 5.—While proceeding to sea Saturday evening the Clyde Line steamer Navahoe, Capt. C. L. Hale, was caught in a southwest gale just inside the Cape Fear bar and was driven ashore on Middle Shoal, almost at the spot where the schooner Gen. Adelbert Ames foundered about three weeks ago.

Unsuccessful efforts were made by the United States revenue cutter Seminole, the tugs Marion and Blanche, and the steamer Compton, to float the vessel Sunday, and again to-day. The vessel is drawing seventeen feet of water, and is hard ashore in seven feet at low water. The cargo, consisting principally of lumber and naval stores, is being lightered, and a further attempt will be made to float the vessel at high tide to-morrow morning.

The Navahoe is lying easy and is in no peril if the weather continues favorable. Seymour Merrill of Wilmington, the only passenger aboard, returned to this city on one of the tugs.

$2,000,000 DAMAGE IN TAHITI.

327 Houses in Papeete Destroyed by the Cyclone and Flood.

PARIS, March 5.—Minister of the Colonies Clementel has received a cable message confirming the press reports to the effect that French Oceania was devastated by a cyclone and flood Feb. 7 and 8.

Tahiti was particularly affected. Three hundred and twenty-seven houses at Papeete were destroyed.

Two relief ships sent to the scene of the disaster in the Tuamotu Islands have not returned. The Governor of the colony has asked for aid.

The telegram, which was sent by the Governor of Oceania via San Francisco, March 4, adds that only one life was lost as a result of the cyclone and inundation.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Official confirmation of the reports of destruction wrought by a cyclone in the South Sea Islands came to the State Department to-day in the following message from W. F. Doty, the American Consul at Tahiti, dated Feb. 17 and sent by way of San Francisco:

"Cyclone destroyed the Consulate Feb. 8. Records saved, but damaged. Library, stationery, and Consular forms lost. Governor solicits subscriptions. Estimated loss in French Oceania, $2,000,000."

The State Department may find some difficulty in re-establishing the Consulate at Tahiti, which is the most important port in that quarter of the world, owing to the failure of Congress to allow the appropriation of $30,000 asked for to provide against such emergencies as this.

DIED TO PROVE INNOCENCE.

Sechoff Blew Out His Brains After Gapon Had Exonerated Him.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 5.—The accused member of the Father Gapon labor organization who committed suicide yesterday while the charge that the organization accepted money from the Government was being investigated was named Sechoff. He enjoyed high standing among his fellow-workmen, who are terribly depressed as a result of the scandal in the organization.

Father Gapon was present when Sechoff killed himself. Sechoff made an impassioned speech, in which he declared that he could not support the infamy involved in the charge that the organization had been in league with the Government nor the obloquy heaped on himself, as both he and the organization were innocent.

Sechoff then called upon Father Gapon to declare in the presence of his fellows whether he (Sechoff) had received a cent from the Government. Father Gapon arose and exonerated Sechoff, whereupon the latter said: "I will now give you supreme proof of my honesty," and, drawing a revolver, he blew out his brains.

CUBA DISMISSES MOERKE.

Isle of Pines Postmaster Appeals to the American Minister.

HAVANA, March 5.—Gen. Freyre Andrade, Secretary of the Interior, has decreed the dismissal of A. W. Moerke, Postmaster of Columbia, Isle of Pines, on account of his arrest for refusing to pay the storekeeper's tax on the ground that the Isle of Pines was not under Cuba's jurisdiction. L. C. Gilner, an American, has been appointed his successor.

Mr. Moerke, who in taking the oath of office swore fidelity to the Government of Cuba, now appeals to Mr. Morgan, the American Minister, on the ground that the Cuban Government is without authority in the Isle of Pines.

PRINCESS ENA'S CONVERSION.

King Edward May Attend the Ceremony of Abjuration.

PARIS, March 5.—Princess Ena of Battenberg, the fiancée of King Alfonso, will be received into the Roman Catholic Church on Wednesday at San Sebastian, Spain. The Right Rev. Robert Brindle, Bishop of Nottingham, England, Provost of the Catholic Cathedral at Westminster and a retired Chaplain of the British Army, will officiate.

King Edward will accompany Princess Ena from Biarritz to San Sebastian, but it has not been determined whether his Majesty will attend the ceremony of abjuration, which will be held in the English Church at San Sebastian.

GREAT SUFFERING IN JAPAN.

Unprecedented Cold Adds to the Misery from Famine—Many Dead.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The Secretary of the American National Red Cross has received information from Japan that the unprecedented cold in Northern Japan has greatly increased the suffering in the famine-stricken provinces. Millet is being bought with some of the relief funds, as it is cheaper than rice.

Many persons have starved to death or have died from the cold, and many more deaths are looked for in the next few months.

SPREAD OF DIPHTHERIA ALARMS DR. DARLINGTON

Health Officer Urges a Freer Use of Antitoxin.

EPIDEMIC OF MEASLES, TOO

This Month Likely to Break March Record of 7,000 Cases—Immigrants Are to Blame.

A pronounced increase in the number of diphtheria cases in the city and an increase in the death rate from this disease have caused Health Commissioner Darlington to appeal to people of all classes to use more generally the antitoxin treatment plentifully and promptly, even when there are only slight evidences of throat trouble.

"I do not like to say anything that may alarm the public," said Dr. Darlington last night, "but publicity is the only way to tackle an epidemic of this sort. Human life is being wasted just because the people do not use the antitoxin. The average of death from diphtheria is now 14 to the 100, and if the antitoxin was used it would be only about 2 to the 100."

There is also an epidemic of measles, which at this time of the year adds to the city's mortality, this disease bringing in its wake pneumonia. Dr. Darlington is not worried about the measles. The diphtheria increase in January and February was 616 cases over the number for the corresponding months last year. There were 77 more deaths from the disease.

"All parents, guardians, and other persons responsible for the care of children," said Dr. Darlington last night, "are most earnestly advised to send at once for a physician at the slightest complaint of sore throat on the part of any of their charges. If examination of the throat shows any condition at all suggestive of diphtheria, the physician should administer diphtheria antitoxin at once. The diagnosis can be confirmed by culture, but the physician should not wait to ascertain the result of the culture, for every hour counts in the treatment of the disease.

"All the other children in the family should have the antitoxin at once to prevent their taking the disease."

Dr. Darlington said that in cases of poor persons the Department of Health would send a man, any hour of the day or night, with the antitoxin and would inject it and treat the whole family without expense.

"We can do nothing without the help of the people," he said; "they must let us know of cases and then we can check the disease and reduce mortality."

The hospitals for contagious disease are taxed to capacity, but Dr. Darlington says that means will be found for taking care of those cases which cannot be looked after in the homes. The diphtheria seems to have spread through all the boroughs.

There were reported to the department 6,310 cases of measles for last month, as against only 901 cases for February, 1905. The cases reported last week amounted to 1,889, as against 257 for the corresponding week of last year. March of 1904 was the record month for measles in New York, 7,000 cases being reported, but this month promises to beat the record.

Hundreds of cases of measles, fever, and other diseases are being brought into this country by immigrants. One reason for the quick spreading of measles, Dr. Darlington says, is that the mothers prefer to treat their children themselves. Many cases are unreported and not isolated.

YONKERS HAS AN EPIDEMIC.

Follicular Tonsilitis Affects 1,000 Patients—It Is Contagious.

Throughout Yonkers more than 1,000 persons are suffering from a disease of the throat known as follicular tonsilitis. It is contagious, and every physician in Yonkers has been called to combat it.

Dr. Clark Sloan, chemist of the Health Department, who has made an investigation of the disease, declares that the symptoms are much the same as those of diphtheria. Many prominent persons have been laid up with the disease.

Dr. Mulligan, Health Officer, said yesterday that the cases were due to atmospheric conditions. This view is also taken by Dr. R. R. Trotter, who is attending fifty-five patients with the disease. Five of the family of the Rev. James E. Freeman, President of the Sanitary League, are down.

AGREEMENT ON FOOD BILL.

House Measure Provides Against Centralization of Authority.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—After a conference lasting for more than eight hours to-day the House majority Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce agreed on a pure food bill. In many respects it is like the Heyburn bill passed by the Senate, and it will still bear the Senator's name.

Only three members of the committee, Representative Adamson of Georgia, Bartlett of Georgia, and Russell of Texas, opposed the bill. They hold it is an assumption of the police powers of States by the National Government.

One of the most vital amendments to the Heyburn bill is a provision that in fixing standards of food products for the guidance of officials charged with administering food laws the Secretary of Agriculture shall consult the Committee on Food Standards of the Association of State Dairy and Food Departments.

It is provided that when any person or manufacturer desires to have the wholesomeness of any preservative or other substance added to foods passed upon, the Secretary of Agriculture shall name a commission of scientists consisting of one toxicologist, one physiological chemist, one bacteriologist, one pathologist, and a fifth scientist.

THE JUNKMAN'S REVENGE.

Builds House for Negroes and Italians to Spite His Neighbors.

Well-to-do people living near St. Andrew's Church, Yonkers, are paying dearly for having bought property on which stood the junkshop of James Callahan. They wished to drive the junk business out of their neighborhood.

Callahan, to get even, has built a twenty-room house, which he will rent only to negroes and Italians. The exterior of the building will be plastered with advertisements. The neighbors are preparing to fence in the building, running their fences clear up to its roof.

Jordan Sentenced for Perjury.

Joseph Jordan, alias "Skinny" Martin, who came from Texas to help Albert T. Patrick get a new trial and who had to plead guilty to perjury after being identified as an ex-convict, despite his denial that he had ever served time, was sentenced yesterday by Judge McMahon in General Session. He will spend a year and six months in Sing Sing Prison before he can return to Houston and "Big Annie's" saloon.

To Build Lake Champlain Hotel.

Negotiations were concluded in this city yesterday for the construction this Summer of a modern ten-story hotel at Burlington, Vt., on the east shore of Lake Champlain. The structure is to cost several hundred thousand dollars. Among the capitalists interested in the venture is Col. Edward Hatch, Jr., of the firm of Lord & Taylor.

S. P. C. A. REFORMERS TO MEET

Will Arrange a Public Gathering for Exchange of Views.

The S. P. C. A. Reform Association has called a public meeting for to-morrow night, to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria. Arrangements will then be made for a larger public meeting, at which the general public may have a chance to tell its views on the situation.

A committee of the Reform Association addressed a communication yesterday to the Vice Presidents and Executive Committee of the A. S. P. C. A., inclosing a set of recommendations, signed by about 600 New Yorkers, all to the end that the society allow a full examination of its books, records, and its employes. The recommendations declare that such an investigation, with its accompanying accounting for money paid into the association, is "for the best interest of the society, in view of the increasing public lack of confidence, evidenced by its diminishing revenues from membership dues, donations, and bequests."

The regular meeting of the society's officers will be held on Thursday at 4:30 and, it is said, a council will be held at 3:30, at which the latest move of the anti-Haines faction will be discussed.

Arthur Turnure, President of the Reform Association, said that the communication sent by his committee yesterday was signed by such prominent men as Cardinal Gibbons, the Rev. Samuel Schulman of Temple Beth-El; W. O. Stillman and David H. Cochran.

Schofield, who has been connected with the office of the Controller of the Currency since 1893 as National Bank Examiner and Receiver, has been assigned to duty in the District of Columbia as Mr. Albertsen's successor.

$5,000 from Box Sale for Purim Ball.

Patrons of this year's Purim Ball, which is to be given on March 14, at Madison Square Garden, for the benefit of Beth Israel Hospital, announced yesterday that more than $5,000 had been added to the fund by the sale of boxes. Among the boxholders are Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Jacob A. Cantor, Joseph S. Marcus, Isaac N. Seligman, Isadore Straus, Kaufman Mendell, Joseph H. Cohen, and Tiffany & Co.

Oriental Rugs : : Important Sale.
MARCH ALWAYS BRINGS AN ORIENTAL RUG SALE in the Loeser Store and hundreds of people with past experience in these movements wait eagerly for it.
This time the Sale is more important than ever, because we have larger stocks; because the wholesale prices of Rugs in the Orient have gone up and because there are Savings of a Fourth to a Third on as beautiful Rugs and as large and various a stock as can be found anywhere.
The Store has demonstrated unquestioned leadership in the selling of fine Oriental Rugs. Such an offering as this would be impossible outside of Loeser's.
A Remarkable Stock of Oriental Carpets.
It seems probable that there is no other equal collection of Oriental Carpets gathered in any one store in the country. It seems certain that such Oriental Carpets are not to be had outside this Store for such small prices. In fact, in the wholesale market, Carpets as fine would in most cases cost as much or more than the prices at which these superb pieces are marked. Here are new items—and they simply fairly represent the values in the Sale.

High Grade Undermuslins.
Save a Fourth to a Third.
THIS MARCH SALE FILLS A NEED. Yesterday demonstrated that. Most women are ready to replenish their stocks of Undermuslins and glad of the chance to buy garments that they know are fine and of more than ordinary daintiness for less than usual prices.
Hand Made Undermuslins Are a Feature.
An unusual stock of especially dainty garments for perhaps the smallest prices which such fine Undermuslins have ever cost. Find them in the French Room. Here are four hints:
At $2.25. Nainsook Chemises, entirely made by hand, one square shaped model is made with beading and ribbon and lace edged ruffle; others V shaped with insertions of French embroidery and finished with Torchon lace edge and ribbon.
At $2.98. Nainsook Chemises hand made and hand embroidered. One style is made with lace insertion in form of yoke, with feather stitching, lace beading, lace edge and ribbon run through.
At $14.50. Bridal Sets of three pieces, Gown, Chemise and Drawers. The gowns are made square neck with a band of hand embroidery two inches wide and wide ribbon run through, the chemises match the gowns; the drawers are made with a deep ruffle, very prettily embroidered, put on to the drawers with an embroidered band to match the gown.
At $5.98. An assorted lot of very fine Petticoats of cambric, nainsook or lawn. Made with deep flounces of embroidery in a great variety of patterns; some in the French embroidered effects, others in space work patterns, with ruffles put on to the skirt with ribbon beading.
$1.50 and $1.75 Nightgowns, Chemises, Petticoats, Corset Covers and Drawers at 98c.
GOWNS are made of muslin, cambric or nainsook, high neck, tucked yoke.
PETTICOATS are made of cambric, with deep flounces.
DRAWERS, made of cambric or nainsook.
CHEMISES of nainsook; some skirt lengths, others short.
CORSET COVERS of soft nainsook, all low neck.
$1.79 to $2.25 Gowns, Petticoats, Corset Covers and Drawers, at $1.29.
GOWNS are made of cambric and nainsook.
CORSET COVERS are made of nainsook, low neck, French bodies.
DRAWERS are made of cambric and nainsook, with deep embroidery ruffles.
PETTICOATS, made of cambric, in a variety of styles.
Second Floor.

$5 Imported Beaded Bags at $2.98.
A Special Value To-day.
THE SMART BEADED BAGS that would go fast at $5 apiece, if we had not decided to make them a special offer to-day at almost half price. They are crocheted by hand from black or gray silk with the tiny cut steel beads wrought into the meshes in very rich patterns.
The soft gray effect combined with the steel will be snapped up first, probably, for wear with new Spring gray suits, but the black Bags with steel patterns are equally smart. Square and oblong shapes, with lining of chamois and dainty frame and chain to match the beads—an offer, we think, not to be matched in value-giving in all Greater New York for $2.98

STOCK TAX ARGUMENT IN COURT OF APPEALS

Five Grounds of Attack Urged by Milburn and Dillon.

MAYER CHAMPIONS THE LAW

He Says That New York Has Not Lost Business Because of Its Enforcement.

ALBANY, March 5.—Arguments were presented to the Court of Appeals to-day in the litigation in which is attacked the constitutionality of the act of the last Legislature taxing the sale of shares of stock. The matter came before the court on an appeal from the Appellate Division sustaining a decision of the Supreme Court which upheld the constitutionality of the act.

Five days after the act went into effect, on June 5 of last year, Albert Hatch of Connecticut was arrested in New York City on a warrant of the Court of Special Sessions, charging him with a misdemeanor in selling shares of stock without the payment of the stamp tax imposed by the new law. He sought release on a writ of habeas corpus, on the ground that the law was unconstitutional, but the courts decided against him.

Mr. Hatch was represented to-day before the Court of Appeals by John G. Milburn and ex-Judge John F. Dillon, and the people were represented by Attorney General Julius M. Mayer, Assistant District Attorney E. Crosby Kindleberger, and John R. Dos Passos.

Messrs. Milburn and Dillon urged five reasons why the law should be declared unconstitutional:

"First—That it selects from all of the personal property of the State one species and taxes its sales, this being an arbitrary discrimination, the taking of property without due process of law, and violation of the equality clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

"Second—Because the tax is arbitrary, being 2 cents on each $100, of the face value of the stock, and does not take into its consideration the market or actual value of the stock.

"Third—That it is a tax on property situated without the State in so far as it taxes the sale of the stock of foreign corporations.

"Fourth—That it violates the Inter-State Commerce act in taking the sale of stock of non-residents sent into this State to be sold.

"Fifth—That the bill having been passed by the Senate on April 3, 1904, and passed in the Assembly on April 5, it was not on the desks of the members of Assembly three days in its final printed form before passing."

Attorney General Mayer made the argument in chief, urging the law. He contended that the stock tax was not a property tax, but a transfer or excise tax, and that the United States Supreme Court, in upholding the war revenue act of 1898, had settled the constitutionality of this tax upon this point.

In answer to the assertion that the tax singles out a special class of transactions and is confiscatory, the Attorney General showed that the predicted exodus of stock business from New York to other States had not taken place, but that, on the contrary, in January, 1906, the largest dealings in stocks since the act went into effect had been made.

He further argued that, under the modern development of corporate business, shares of stock had become a distinctive class of property. He said that no system of taxation could be perfect, and every tax must rest on some class of property, but that this was probably the least burdensome tax yet devised.

Assistant District Attorney Kindleberger argued that the constitutional provision that the bill must lie three days upon the desks of members had been fully complied with, and John R. Dos Passos urged that the act did not in any way violate the inter-State commerce provision of the United States Constitution.

CHANGES IN TRANSIT BILL.

Senator Page Puts In Safeguards for Operation and Construction.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 5.—The Page Rapid Transit bill, which is indorsed by the City Club, was amended considerably last night by Senator Page.

The amendments limit the time of letting of contracts for operation to twenty and twenty-five years instead of fifty years, and it is provided that inter-State roads having a terminus in New York shall be the only ones to which perpetual franchises shall be granted for that part of the road which either runs under the river or through that part of New York City leading to the terminus.

Senator Page says that under Section 32 of the present law any road can get a perpetual franchise. The bill also calls for the printing of advertisements for bids for joint contracts for construction, equipment, and operation, and also that there shall be advertisements for bids for separate construction, equipment, and operation. The Transit Commission and the Board of Estimate are given absolute discretion to choose the most advantageous bids from either class.

WADSWORTH'S DEFENSE.

Speaker Tells Why He Opposes Action on Hooker.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 5.—In spite of the opposition of Speaker Wadsworth in his efforts to stave off any further investigation into the case of Justice Hooker, Assemblyman Leslie J. Tompkins intends to press his resolution in the Assembly to-morrow.

Speaker Wadsworth said to-day: "I believe that a reopening of the Hooker case would create a dangerous precedent. I have no sympathy with any corrupt Judge, but in this case, it would mean simply that if the case was reopened, it would afford an opportunity for any malcontent, year after year, to make a party issue of the matter without doing the slightest bit of good."

JUDGESHIPS IN POLITICS.

Senate Passes Bill Giving McCarren and Ward an Extra District.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 5.—The Senate to-night passed Senator Carpenter's bill to divide the Second Judicial District into two districts. Through it National Committeeman W. L. Ward gets control of a judicial district which will hereafter be known as the Ninth Judicial District. Senator McCarren controls the Second.

The division creates one Democratic district comprising the Counties of Kings, Queens, Suffolk, and Richmond, and a Republican district comprising the up-State counties heretofore included in the Second Judicial District.

Several weeks ago Henry J. Henderson of Westchester came here in opposition to the bill and stated that it was the intention of the Ward machine to put up at auction the judicial nomination in the proposed new district in the same way that it auctioned off other offices. The bill was also designed to give McCarren control in his district.

GRAFT IN CHARTER GRANTS.

Up-State Republican Bosses Scheme to Get Rich Contracts.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 5.—Under the guise of giving a second-class cities charter to Yonkers, Utica, and Schenectady the Republican bosses of Albany, Syracuse, and Troy, through several bills introduced in the Legislature, are endeavoring to obtain for themselves certain contracts which heretofore have gone to their opponents.

A bill introduced by Senator White, for instance, provides, after giving the cities named their charters, that within thirty days thereafter the Common Councils of Albany, Troy, and Syracuse may redesignate the newspapers which are to have the public printing. Senator White has an interest in The Syracuse Post-Standard, Mr. Barnes owns The Albany Evening Journal, and ex-Gov. Black, with Editor Francis, controls The Troy Times.

At present these papers have not public printing patronage. Should the bill pass it would be possible to throw the awards to the opposition papers. In the case of Albany and Troy it is proposed to make contracts impossible of award except to the existing gas companies, which are dominated by Anthony N. Brady.

BRACKETT BOOM LAUNCHED.

Saratoga Senator's Home Delegates for Him—I. V. Baker Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 5.—Washington County Republicans are first in the field for Senator Brackett for Governor. At the primaries held Saturday the delegates elected were put on the ticket with the understanding that they shall support the Saratoga Senator in the event of his being a candidate in the State convention.

The primaries were a sweeping victory for ex-Superintendent of Prisons Isaac V. Baker, Jr., of Comstocks, whose sale to the State of his farm for a large sum, after it had been declared unfit for State hospital purposes, brought him considerable notoriety.

FIGHT FOR BANK INQUIRY.

Senator Stevens Threatens to Take It to Floor of Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 5.—There are indications of lively times in the Senate to-morrow if the Finance Committee persists in its refusal to report out the resolution now in its hands for a general investigation of the Banking Department of the State.

Senator Stevens is determined there shall be no more delay about it, and threatens to move to discharge the committee from further consideration of the measure and throw it out on the floor of the Senate.

SCHURMAN WARNS STUDENTS.

Demands That Sophomores Give Pledge Not to Molest Freshmen.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 5.—President Schurman of Cornell declared to a student mass meeting to-day that unless he has assurances from the sophomore class that no hostilities which involve destruction of property, danger to life, and loss of university work will be indulged in he will not permit the freshmen to hold their banquet this year.

He explained that the Faculty is not opposed to the human tendency to make a newcomer feel like a newcomer, which is even practiced in the New York Stock Exchange and the United States Senate. He cited instances of violence at former freshman banquets, and stated that unless there was positive assurance that there would be no violation of the present university regulations which prohibit all forms of hazing the armory would be closed.

The sophomore class will hold a meeting to-morrow to decide upon some action.

WALSH MAY GET $3,500,000.

His Roads Offered to Eastern Lines for $27,500,000.

CHICAGO, March 5.—The committee appointed by the Clearing House for the purpose of liquidating the affairs of the Chicago National Bank, of which John R. Walsh was President, offered to-day to sell the Southern Indiana and Chicago Southern Railroads, which are the principal part of Mr. Walsh's assets, for $27,500,000.

The offer was made to a committee of Eastern railroad men who have been inspecting the properties. If the sale is made the amount will pay off all the obligations assumed by the Chicago Clearing House, meet the book value of the Chicago National Bank, which was $242 per share, and leave Mr. Walsh $3,500,000.

The offer has been taken under advisement.

7TH'S OLD DRUM-MAJOR DEAD.

John M. Smith Had an Eye for Distance and Knew the Drum.

Brevet Second Lieut. John M. Smith, drum major of the Seventh Regiment from 1868 until 1900, died suddenly on Sunday at his home, 610 East Twenty-first Street, Flatbush. He was 75 years old, and leaves two married daughters and a son. At the time of his death he was living with his son-in-law, Charles H. Brown, who succeeded him as drum major of the Seventh Regiment.

The veteran drum major was regarded as an authority on the manipulation of the drum. He was noted for his judgment of distance, and it was said that he never made a mistake in swinging his musicians into just the position they should occupy.

The old man was a favorite with the Seventh, and was always a conspicuous figure in the parades of the regiment. His retirement was due to the fact that his body had grown too heavy for his legs. He was made brevet Second Lieutenant on his retirement.

Smith enlisted in the Fourth Artillery, United States Army, in 1840, as a "music boy." He was then nine years old. He served through the Seminole and other Indian wars. At the beginning of the civil war he enlisted in the Twelfth New York Volunteers. Three months later he joined the New York Zouaves as drum major and served through the war. He was honorably discharged after Gen. Lee's surrender.

He was an instructor of the drum corps of the different bands of the militia regiments of New York City until he joined the Seventh Regiment in 1868.

When the Prince of Wales, now Edward VII., visited this country he saw Smith in a military parade, and said of him:

"That is the finest marching bandmaster I have ever seen."

HEARD HIS SAFE BLOWN UP.

Frey Thought It Machinery's Noise and Slept Again.

Burglars blew open a safe in the saloon of John W. Frey, at 105 North Sixth Street, Williamsburg, early yesterday morning. They worked under the glare of electric lights in the street and in the saloon. A policeman was supposed to be on duty in that neighborhood all night, and also a night watchman engaged by Frey.

The saloon keeper closed his place, he said, at 10 o'clock Sunday night. Soon after midnight he was awakened by the report of an explosion. A few minutes afterward the sound was repeated and the house shook.

Frey thought the noise was caused by vibration of machinery in packing houses on the opposite side of the street, and went to sleep again. At 5 o'clock yesterday morning, when he went down to the saloon, he found the safe blown open. Cash to the amount of $400 had been taken. The burglars left some checks, a $5 gold piece, and a gold ring. A jimmy was lying in the street.

Usually Frey has thousands of dollars in his safe over Sunday, given to him on Saturday by the packers to keep for them until Monday morning.

RESCUED DEMENTED STEWARD

He Leaped Overboard from the Republic, but a Boat's Crew Got Him.

Passengers on the White Star liner Republic, which arrived here yesterday from Mediterranean ports, told of the rescue of a demented steward who had jumped overboard. It was noticed shortly after the ship had left Alexandria on Feb. 15 that one of the stewards, William Thompson, 29 years old, and a native of Liverpool, was showing signs of dementia. He kept praying while he went about his work, for "those who go down to the sea in ships," and repeating the prayer for deliverance from sudden death. He made the passengers so nervous that he was placed under guard in a cabin.

The man was not violent, and was continually at his prayers. Shortly after noon, when the Republic was about 500 miles west of Gibraltar, the guard left him for a moment. Finding himself alone, the steward wrenched the top off a steam register and battered down the door of the cabin. He rushed out on the main deck, where the passengers were sunning themselves, and before any of the crew could reach him he jumped over the rail into the sea.

The cry "Man overboard!" reached the First Officer on the bridge, and the steamship was stopped at once.

Capt. McAuley ordered a boat lowered, in charge of Second Officer Fryar. Meantime Thompson was swimming easily in the vessel's wake. It was evident that he wanted to get back to the Republic. Several excited women threw lifebelts toward him. The crew of the lifeboat [illegible]

PORTRAITS BY SHANNON, A.R.A.

The Knoedler Galleries on Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street have had a succession of clever portraitists this Winter, each one seemingly more startling than the last, especially in the painting of draperies and the electric vigor of the brushwork. Josci Koppay succeeds Chartran, and after him comes Emil Fuchs. Now it is the turn of Mr. J. J. Shannon, a painter born on this side of the Atlantic, but completely domiciled in London, where he has reached the rank of Associate in the Royal Academy. This is the second Winter he has passed in New York, where his talents have found appreciation. Boston and Providence have also contributed to the number of his sitters.

The dozen portraits shown at the Knoedler Gallery prove that he has a good eye for seizing a likeness and a remarkable gift at painting stuffs. The dress in the portrait of Miss Virginia Gammell of Providence is vividly, richly wrought by clear, deft strokes that sometimes make one think of Sargent. The white dress of the younger child in the triple portrait of Mrs. Herbert M. Sears and her daughters has some most delightful work in the shadows. Pose and expression of this figure remind one of Whistler's famous picture of little Miss Alexander, shown last Sunday in the pictorial supplement of this paper, but the putting on of the paint is very different. So likewise is the dress of Mrs. Robert J. Gammell full of spirit and wisdom in the deft rendering of the stuff.

When it comes to the faces, Mr. Shannon is still a little at the mercy of a habit, one of those tricks of a painter into which he slides unconsciously, a fashion which is very hard to break with because it seems to fit most sitters, and certainly expedites the portrait. It is the fashioning of the lips on a persistent pattern, as Sir Thomas Lawrence fashioned the lips of his sitters, and as greater artists than Sir Thomas did before his day. Another habit of Mr. Shannon is to draw the side of the nose which lies in the shadow a little too broadly, so that when the eye penetrates the shadow it looks a trifle out of place. These little tricks are so trifling that with nine persons out of ten they will pass unnoticed, but they are not unimportant to the painter, who can change them if he comes to the conclusion that the criticism is accurate. If he decides that it is not well taken, so much the better for his sitters and his own peace of mind.

By all odds the finest portrait here is that of Mrs. Robert B. Minturn. This handsome and distinguished looking lady is not painted as some others in the same room. The figure retires back of the plane of the frame instead of advancing with a slightly fixed expression and an air of being on parade. It stands very well alongside another portrait of an elderly lady, a full-length seated figure of Mrs. J. D. Rockefeller, who shows a perplexed face and something undecided even in the color scheme of dress and background. The full-length seated likeness of Mr. Herbert M. Sears has the same "jump-at-you" look that is a trifle uncomfortable in those of Mrs. Gammell, senior, and Mrs. Sears, possibly the result of trying to key the faces up above the strong note struck in the draperies and clothes. Observe that in Mr. Sears the artist has toned down the hands, which are excellently drawn, to a note that deprives them of good flesh color.

These remarks should not carry with them the idea that Mr. Shannon falls short of being a fine painter. On the contrary, they are only in place with a man who is extremely able, one who [illegible] standing girl who holds a mediaeval ship made of silver, gold, crystal, and jewels, rather oddly called "A Viking's Daughter." The palette knife has been used here slashingly. In so young a man it is remarkable to find such a power of brushwork, and if here and there one sees a point at which to place an interrogation mark, these are small indeed when weighed against the general impression of power that one gains from a careful study of details.

NASSAU GRAFT CHARGES PROVOKE AN INQUIRY

Supervisors Take Up Printing Scandal Dating Back to 1902.

ROOSEVELT'S TOWN IS ASTIR

Ex-Congressman Scudder and ex-Assemblyman Wallace Among Accusers —Taxpayers' Suits for $46,000.

Nassau County, the home of President Roosevelt, has determined to conduct an investigation of its own into charges of graft, collusion, and illegal action against public officers.

The Board of Supervisors decided on the investigation yesterday in executive session, and will arrange the details by resolution the first of next week. It is probable that the three Supervisors, William H. Jones of Oyster Bay, Edwin C. Willets of North Hempstead, and ex-County Judge Robert Seabury of Hempstead, will sit as a committee in the Court House, in Mineola, where all who have made any charges will be sworn and called on to tell everything they know regarding the alleged graft and collusion.

Halstead Scudder, who will conduct the investigation, is recognized as the "Father of Nassau County," having been chiefly instrumental in getting the divorce of the eastern towns from Queens County. His brother, ex-Congressman Townsend Scudder, has been an accuser of some of the men Halstead Scudder is advising. The Survivors say they have no fear of the fullest investigation.

The trouble has been growing gradually since 1902, when John C. Kennahan, owner of The Oyster Bay Pilot, and Fred Crandall, owner of The Roslyn News, got the job to publish the list of properties for sale for non-payment of taxes. County Treasurer Charles F. Lewis gave out the list, and it was published at an expense of about $46,000. Ex-Assemblyman George Wallace of Freeport, whose South Side Observer did not get the advertisement, charged that the list was padded at least ten times, and that the sale could have been conducted at an expense for advertising of about $5,000. His charges against County Treasurer Lewis were the basis of a libel suit, which did not come to trial. Lewis is Chairman of the Republican County Committee and Wallace the first Republican nominee for County Judge. Ex-Congressman Scudder recently started a taxpayer's suit to compel restitution. Supervisor Seabury was County Judge in 1902, and so is in no way connected with any charges.

Ex-Congressman Scudder, at his Manhattan office, 10 Wall Street, yesterday afternoon, said:

"I am delighted to hear of such an investigation, if it is to be taken up and conducted properly, fairly, and in good faith. If the comparison of the 1902 list with the lists of a majority of those of other counties of the State is careful, it will be discovered that wonderful improvements may be made in the manner of advertising tax sales in Nassau."

"What have you to say relative to your charges of collusion in your taxpayer's suit against Treasurer Lewis and other county officers and Kennahan?" was asked.

"I have made no personal charges orally, nor will I do so. My legal papers must speak for themselves."

Ex-Assemblyman Wallace said:

"If they call me I will willingly give them all the information I possess. But," he added, shaking his finger, "they will not call me."

"Why not?"

"Never mind; but you mark my words; they will not call me.

"When a public officer gives his pal a ten-dollar job and lets him charge $100 for it, by what other name would you call it than collusion?" asked Wallace.

"Do you class County Treasurer Lewis and Mr. Kennahan as 'pals'?" he was asked.

"I certainly do," said Wallace.

METZ FOR SALARY INCREASES.

Says City Will Lose Its Engineers Unless Pay Is Raised.

Controller Metz declared himself yesterday as in favor of salary increases in the city's technical force, and said that, unless many substantial increases were voted for the benefit of the engineers in the service the city would lose many of them to private firms.

The Controller is anxious to make several changes in his own office, but cannot do so unless increases are voted. He desires to make Chandler Withington chief engineer at $6,000 to succeed the late Eugene E. McLean. Mr. Withington now receives $4,000 in the department. Also Mr. Metz has an understanding with Borough President Coler of Brooklyn to assign R. W. Creuzbaur, who now receives $4,000 in the Finance Department, to be consulting engineer of the Sewer Department in Brooklyn, if Mr. Coler can have the place established with $8,000 salary.

Merritt Smith, who also gets $4,000 in the Finance Department now, is to take a $7,000 place with the new Board of Water Supply shortly.

CAR BARN LOSS, $250,000.

Employes All Accounted For After Forty-second Street Blaze.

When the fire that wrecked the old Dry Dock, East Broadway and Battery car barns, at the foot of West Forty-second Street, had burned itself out yesterday morning, the damage was placed at $250,000. Oren Root, Jr., General Manager of the Metropolitan Street Railway system, had estimated the damage at a more conservative figure while the fire was in progress.

The police and the fire authorities declared yesterday that they were unable to confirm the report that a man had lost his life in the blaze. Every one connected with the building had been accounted for yesterday.

The barn was built in 1886, and had a frontage of 220 feet toward the river and 180 feet each on Forty-second and Forty-third Streets. It had been used for years as the car sheds for the Thirty-fourth and Forty-second Street trolley lines.

DEUEL BACK ON THE BENCH.

He Frees a Young Woman Who Had Broken Her Parole.

Justice Joseph M. Deuel, whom District Attorney Jerome, James W. Osborne, and Edward M. Shepard are trying to remove from office because of his connection with Town Topics and other of Col. William d'Alton Mann's publications, and who returned to the bench yesterday after an absence in the South, freed a young woman prisoner in Special Sessions with the words:

"'Go, and sin no more."

She is Matilda Girard, a Broolyn girl of good family, education, and exceptional beauty, who, several months ago pleaded guilty to a charge of shoplifting. She said at the time that her desire to go on the stage had caused her to steal. Sentence was then suspended, and she was put in charge of Mrs. Axeman, the probation officer of Special Sessions. But instead of reporting as ordered, the girl disappeared, with the result that a bench warrant was issued and she was rearrested on Feb. 9. Since then she has been in the Tombs. She broke down and sobbed when her counsel addressed the court.

Her mother was called to the witness stand to speak to the Justices. She is a white-haired old woman, and tears blinded her so that she had to be led to the chair like one bereft of sight. Justice Deuel asked the girl if it was true that her father had denounced her as incorrigible.

"Yes," whispered the prisoner.

"But he has declared himself willing to take you back?"

"He has," murmured the girl.

"And will you promise to go home and to stay home in your parents' care?"

"Yes, Judge, I promise, I promise," the prisoner broke out.

She was then told that her sentence would be as before, to return to the custody of her father, with obligation to report to the probation officer.

COLUMBIA BUDGET, $1,444,460

Trustees Formally Organize the New Faculty of Fine Arts.

The Trustees of Columbia University yesterday adopted the budget for 1906-1907, appropriating $1,444,460.43. The expenditures on account of Barnard College, Teachers College, and the College of Pharmacy, to be agreed upon later, will increase this total to more than $2,000,000.

It was announced that Robert B. Livingston and John H. Livingston of the class of '69 had offered to place a large stained-glass window in Livingston Hall, as a memorial of Chancellor Robert R. Livingston, class of 1765. A gift of $500 was received from F. Augustus Schermerhorn, '66, for increasing the equipment of the Department of Astronomy.

Prof. William Hallock was appointed Dean of the Faculty of Pure Science, in place of Prof. Edmund B. Wilson, resigned.

The new Faculty of Fine Arts was formally organized, with James Rignall Wheeler, Professor of Greek Archaeology and Art, as Acting Dean. Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke and Edward Robinson, Director and Assistant Director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, are included in the corps of the department. The others who, with President Butler make up the Faculty, are Profs. Hamlin, Sherman, and Kress of the Department of Architecture; Profs. Rubner and McWhood of Music, Profs. Dow and Farnsworth of Teachers College, Profs. Young and Olcott, representing classical archaeology; Prof. Hirth of the Chinese Department, and Frederick Dielman, President of the National Academy of Design. The right to nominate for professorships is vested in the Council of the National Academy of Design.

SETH LOW FINDS A MICROBE.

So He'll Help Build a New Hospital in Northern Westchester.

In order to arouse interest in the work which the District Nursing Association is doing, and to raise money to start a hospital which the organization and the residents of northern Westchester County believe is necessary, a meeting was held at Sherry's yesterday afternoon. Col. William Jay presided and explained that the organization had about $3,000 and needed $12,500 to establish the hospital, the site for which had already been in part selected. The property he referred to, he said, was at Mount Kisco, where a lot with two small houses suitable for the work had been offered to the organization.

James Wood, ex-Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, explained that the proposed establishment of the hospital was the result of the necessity which had been demonstrated by the work which the District Nursing Association had already done.

Seth Low, who is building a house in northern Westchester County, said that he had lately found a new microbe on his Westchester property. "I do not know the name of it," he added, "but it compels me to give something for the establishment of the new hospital."

SAYS ROGERS WILL ANSWER.

That Is, If the Missouri Courts Decide Against Him.

Opposing counsel engaged in a warm argument before Justice Gildersleeve, in the Supreme Court yesterday, on the question as to whether H. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company should answer questions asked by Commissioner Sanborn in the efforts to revoke the company's charter in Missouri. The hearing was at last adjourned until March 26.

W. V. Rowe, Mr. Rogers's lawyer, declared that as the mouthpiece of Mr. Rogers he would promise that the questions would be answered by the witness if the Missouri courts finally decided against him without a further order from the court. Henry Wollman, counsel for Attorney General Hadley of Missouri, insisted that an order should issue compelling Mr. Rogers to testify. He said that the witness sought delay and opposed the adjournment for that reason.

Mr. Rogers's further examination has been set for March 23, and Justice Gildersleeve said that he would adjourn until March 26, because, according to Mr. Rowe, the witness would answer the questions on the date set for the examination if the Missouri courts decided against him prior to that date.

TRIES TO STAB DETECTIVE.

An Italian with a Stiletto Scares Passengers on the Elevated.

Edward Reardon, a detective at the District Attorney's Office, was attacked on a southbound Third Avenue train at Forty-Seventh Street yesterday morning by an Italian who attempted to stab him with a stiletto. The Italian was disarmed by Reardon, assisted by Detective Goss of the Fifth Street Station. The prisoner gave the name Charles Ross, and Reardon believes he is a friend of Guiseppi Defrancisco, whom he arrested on Sunday night in Eleventh Street, charged with creating a disturbance. He was fined $10 by Magistrate Cornell.

The car was thrown into an uproar by the struggles of Ross. The guards had given the signal to go ahead when women rushed for the door and with difficulty were restrained by the guard from jumping to the station platform. At Forty-second Street the Detectives took Ross from the train and hustled him to Yorkville Court. He would make no explanation of his attack. Magistrate Cornell held him for trial on a charge of felonious assault.

MONEY IN AUTO RACE; LONG ISLAND WANTS IT

Fear of Losing Vanderbilt Cup Event Arouses Residents.

A. A. A. WILL ACT THIS WEEK

Nassau Tradesmen Secure Many Names, Asking That Contest Be Held Over Same Course.

An unusual effort is being made by the residents of Nassau County, L. I., to secure the Vanderbilt Cup automobile race this year. Petitions are being circulated in Mineola, Garden City, Hyde Park, and other places adjacent to the course, asking for signatures favoring the holding of the big event over practically the same route that was used last October. These petitions will be presented to the Board of Supervisors at an early date. It is possible that this may be done before the meeting of the Board of Directors of the American Automobile Association on Thursday in this city, and in case the Nassau County Supervisors are willing to grant the request the Supervisors may be asked to send a formal application asking for the race, to the Executive Board of the A. A. A.

Sidney S. Gorham, the new Secretary of the A. A. A., said yesterday that no formal application had been received asking that the race be run on Long Island. He was glad to hear that the Nassau County residents were so willing to have the contest held there again, and he said that very likely some definite announcement regarding the event would be made at the Directors' meeting this week.

The fear that the big race might be held on some private speedway has aroused the hotel keepers, tradesmen, and, to a large extent, the farmers of Nassau County to a realization of what the loss of the race would mean to them. Thousands of dollars have been turned into the coffers of the merchants, hotel, and boarding house keepers as a result of the race. Last year every house in the vicinity of Mineola, Garden City, and adjoining villages was able to rent every available room for several days previous to the big event. On the night preceding the Vanderbilt race persons gladly paid $5 for a place to sleep and then submitted cheerfully to a tax of $1 for breakfast from the ordinary road houses. Many of the contestants rented hotels and private houses for the exclusive use of their drivers and mechanicians, and every man who could supply any necessity for the automobilist found no difficulty in driving a brisk trade.

While the Long Island course is admitted by practical automobilists to be the best that is obtainable for the great race, Chairman Robert Lee Morrell and other members of the Racing Board have expressed their belief that in the near future private speedways should be used for events like the Vanderbilt Cup contest.

It was said yesterday at the Nassau County Court House that several hundred names have already been secured to the petitions. Two of the three members of the Nassau Board of Supervisors are in favor of granting the request. Supervisor Seabury of Hempstead is not wholly in favor of the use of the public roads for high-speed contests, but it is not believed he will interpose any serious objection if it is the majority wish to have the race on Long Island again.

It is understood that William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., would be pleased to see his cup competed for again on Long Island, but he has done nothing to influence the choice of the A. A. A. Directors.

STRONG AS STEEL
The Kind of Nerves That Can Do Things.

A young athlete writes concerning the method by which he acquired steady nerves, and also of some good missionary work he has done:

"About a year ago," he says, "my nerves began to grow unsteady and I found myself troubled with sleeplessness. I set an inquiry on foot, and became convinced that the coffee I drank was the cause of the trouble, and determined to quit it right there.

"So I got a package of Postum Food Coffee and Mother and I prepared it. We did not boil it long enough the first time and were not much impressed by it. The second time, however, we followed the directions carefully and were more than pleased with the result.

"I can sleep like a log now, since I am using Postum, my nerves are as strong as steel, and my muscles, which used to tire easily, are hard and enduring as iron. Heavy athletics no longer give me pain in the side and chest as formerly.

"I have brought our whole family to use it, and it has done every one of them good. My father has found his asthma almost entirely relieved since he gave up coffee and began to drink Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A Family Gathering in Old Mexico.

To the traveler in any foreign country the native people are of unceasing interest. In Old Mexico especially, one finds many quaint types. There is the pulque peddler on his patient donkey, selling the native liquor from house to house; the women making Tortillas, the native delicacy, the bull fighters—heroes of Old Mexico since Spain held sway, in their grand array, and many other types equally as picturesque. Why not go and see all of it—people and country? The weather in Old Mexico is now delightful, an ideal change from our wet and chilly days.

An attractive booklet, "Sights and Scenes in Old Mexico," is ready for distribution. It is replete with interesting facts and fiction about the Egypt of the New World. Write for free copy.

How to go to Mexico

THE MKT

The principal highway to Mexico lies through St Louis. Most roads run through trains to St. Louis, and the M. K. & T. Ry. runs through sleepers from St. Louis to the City of Mexico, without change. The route lies through the most interesting section of the United States—Indian Territory and Texas, where greatest activity and development are manifest. Most of the principal cities of Texas and Mexico; Dallas, Ft. Worth, Waco, San Antonio, Torreon, Zacatecas, Aguascalientes, Guanajuato, etc., lie along the route, and stop-overs are allowed at pleasure. Ask your ticket agent to sell you a ticket via St. Louis and the M. K. & T. Ry. For rates and full information, write

Two Chances to Save Money

Spring Weight Suits, at $10.

These were marked $15, $18 and $20 last Spring and Summer and were extra value, as our customers who wore suits of the same lot will testify.

Single and double breasted models — long coats, deep vents. Because they were made in 1905 before the cost of wool and labor had increased so greatly, they are far better $15, $18 and $20 values than suits usually sold at these prices. Special.... $10

$18 & $20 Cravenettes, at $13.50.

New model raincoats for Spring 1906 bought from one of the best makers in the country, who sold them underprice because he was anxious to turn his attention to next Winter's clothes-making.

Extra long and full, made from grayish velours and worsteds expressly woven as raincoat materiels and proofed by Priestly Cravenette process.

The garments are journeyman tailored so thoroughly and deftly that they hold their shape, style and fit until worn out. Best $18 or $20 Raincoat any man ever owned. Special...... $13.50

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only. For sale by all reliable druggists.

AMERICAN OLYMPIC TEAM IS FINALLY COMPLETED

Thirty Men to Leave for Athens on March 31.

SIX NEW MEN ARE CHOSEN

Ray Moulton, Martin Sheridan, Ellery Clark, Harvey Cohn, Charles Bacon, and M. Spring Added to List.

The American committee of the Olympic games at Athens, at a meeting held at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, added six names to the list of athletes to be sent to take part in the games. Thirty men, including a manager, will leave New York on the North German Lloyd steamer Barbarossa for Naples on March 31. From that point they will take an Italian steamer to Athens, where they will arrive on May 16, or six days before the opening of the games.

To the list of twenty-three men selected by the American committee at its first meeting three long-distance runners, two all-round athletes, and one sprinter were added. The new men will strengthen the team in several of its weakest parts. F. R. Moulton, formerly of Yale, representing the Kansas City Athletic Club, was selected for the 100 and 400-meter runs. The former event will have five American representatives—Archie Hahn, Milwaukee Athletic Club; W. D. Eaton, Cambridgeport Gymnasium, Mass.; W. A. Schick, Harvard; G. H. Tueryrouze, New Orleans Young Men's Christian Association, and F. R. Moulton. The latter will also run in the 400 meters with H. L. Hillman, Jr., New York Athletic Club, and W. A. Schick of Harvard.

Martin J. Sheridan of the Irish-American Athletic Club and Ellery H. Clark of the Boston Athletic Association were the additions in the weight events and will also compete in the Pentathulum, or all-around championship. At a meeting of the Registration Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union, held yesterday, the charges of professionalism brought against Sheridan last year were thoroughly investigated and the champion all-around athlete was exonerated. The other weight men are James S. Mitchel and Richard Sheldon of the New York Athletic Club.

The new men in the long-distance events are Charles J. Bacon and Harvey Cohn of the Irish-American Athletic Club and M. Spring of the Pastime Athletic Club. These men will compete in the five-mile run and the Marathon race and should strengthen the team materially. The three originally selected were Joseph Forshaw, Missouri Athletic Club; J. Fowler, Cambridgeport Gymnasium, Mass., and W. Frank, Irish-American Athletic Club.

The other American representatives are H. V. Valentine, New York Athletic Club, in the 800-metre run; George V. Bonhag, Irish-American Athletic Club, and J. P. Sullivan of the same organization in the 1,500 metres run; H. W. Kerrigan, Multnomah Athletic Club, Portland, Ore., in the running high jump; Hugo Friend, Chicago University, and Myer Prinstein, Irish-American Athletic Club, running broad jump; F. B. Glover, Chicago Athletic Association, pole vault; Myer Prinstein, Irish-American Athletic Club, hop, step and jump; C. M. Daniels, New York Athletic Club; Joseph W. Spencer, New York Athletic Club, and Marquand Schwartz, Missouri Athletic Club, swimming; H. J. Borneman, Chicago Athletic Association, diving.

It was announced that although the above-named men were officially designated to compete in the different events selected by the committee, the Secretary is empowered to enter any of the contestants in any of the events in which, in his opinion, they may have a chance to win. It is probable that with the list of twenty-nine athletes America will be represented in every event at Athens.

M. P. Halpin of the New York Athletic Club was selected as manager and advisor of the team. The entire charge of the team has been placed in the hands of James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the American Committee, who will decide all matters relating to competition, and his decision will be final.

Col. G. B. Billings and Charles H. Carter of the Athletic Committee of the Boston Athletic Association authorized President Joseph B. Maccabe of the Amateur Athletic Union to offer a trophy valued at $100 to become the property of the American athlete winning the Marathon race, if an American should win the event.

Club emblems will be eliminated. The members of the team will wear a complete white uniform with quarter sleeves, with a small American shield or flag on the shirt. Entries for the games will close on March 12, and the American entries will be made at once and sent to Athens on the first steamer leaving for Naples.

My repeat orders are proof positive that my cigars are what I claim them to be.

Argue as you may as to what I can or cannot do, say what you may as to why men order their first hundred cigars of me, you cannot get around the evidence that the repeat orders offer.

That evidence can be construed only in one way—that every man who reorders has tried my cigars, proved them and found that I do as I say.

I have had over seven hundred of these repeat orders in one week, requiring over one hundred thousand cigars to fill them. Isn't that proof positive that my cigars are better than my advertising?

When thousands of other men have tried my cigars and liked them sufficiently well to go to the trouble of reordering from me, isn't it possible that you will appreciate both quality of cigar and economy in ordering from me?

That there may be no risk to you in trying the cigars, I make YOU the following offer:

MY OFFER IS: I will upon request send one hundred Shivers' Panatela Cigars on approval to a reader of THE TIMES, express prepaid. He may smoke ten cigars and return the remaining ninety at my expense if he is not pleased with them; if he is pleased, and keeps them, he agrees to remit the price, $5.00, within ten days.

Simply enclose business card, or give personal references, and state whether mild, medium or strong cigars are wanted.

MONEY READY FOR STADIUM.

Columbia Declares That Million Dollars Will Surely Be Forthcoming.

Columbia's million-dollar stadium is not so far removed in futurity as one might suppose from the announcements that have emanated from the university authorities thus far regarding the scheme. Plans have progressed much further than is generally understood, and with municipal consent to the plan assured, the work of constructing the mammoth plant might well begin within a very short period. Before the announcement of the project all the necessary steps were fully and completely considered and provision for them made. Even the financing of the scheme has been carefully canvassed, and while not one cent is subscribed, according to the committee in charge, the authorities know just where to go to get the money when they are ready to begin work. The funds will not be given by any extensive subscription, but will come from a few men who are wealthy and interested in Columbia and in the Public Schools Athletic League feature, who are said to be ready to advance it all.

The first step that must be taken is to secure the consent of the city officials to the plan. Mayor McClellan and the Board of Aldermen must approve the appropriation of the reclaimed land for the purpose and the Dock Commissioners and the Park Commissioners must acquiesce in it.

The ground as it is now embraces a strip less than forty feet wide between the New York Central & Hudson River tracks and the waterway. The dock line extends out some 400 feet into the river bed at this point. It will be possible to encircle the field by a quarter-mile track and surround this with quite extended grandstands and still have sufficient space to lay out a good-sized baseball diamond. All Columbia's athletic activities can well be housed within this inclosure with the single exception of the crew, and have room to spare for other purposes.

HERMIS'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Fell While Being Driven and Was Only Slightly Scratched.

Word comes from Bound Brook, N. J., that the famous race horse Hermis, owned by E. R. Thomas, had a narrow escape from serious injury on Sunday night. Hermis has been wintering on the farm of Alexander Shields at South Bound Brook, and the trainer, accompanied by the son of Mr. Shields, drove the horse, attached to a light racing cart, to Bound Brook. On returning home in the evening Hermis shied at an object in the freight yard and was thrown heavily on his side. The trainer and young Stewart Shields quickly jumped from the cart, and after hard work got Hermis on his feet. Outside of a few scratches the horse was found to be uninjured.

Hermis was nominated for the Brighton, Brooklyn, and Suburban Handicaps, and was assigned to carry 126 pounds in the Brighton and 127 pounds in the Brooklyn and Suburban. He has, however, been declared out of the Brighton and Suburban.

HORSES IN LIVELY GALLOPS.

Trainers Now Active at Gravesend and Sheepshead Bay Tracks.

At Gravesend yesterday morning there was considerable useful work accomplished by the trainers. Tom Welsh had out Ormondale, Merry Lark, and Duenna, with a big lot of two-year-olds. All were sent along smartly, though no speed test was required of any of them.

"Jim" McLaughlin was busy with Paloro, Kuro, Jack McKeon, High Brush, Race King, Oxford, and a set of two-year-olds. A two-minute gait was about all that was asked of any of them. All look well, and Oxford, particularly, was full of running, and it kept his boy engaged all the time to restrain him.

Burlew had all his two-year-olds under saddle, and the older horses shown in light exercise were Waterbearer, Green Room, Voorhees, Gold Badge, and Belmere. They were permitted to go along at a stiff pace, and there is not one of the lot but is close to racing condition.

George Odom worked his lot over the yearling track at Sheepshead Bay. He showed two good-looking fillies that have a way of going that promises well for the stable when the racing season opens.

Charles Littlefield also worked his two-year-old fillies over the yearling track at Sheepshead, and "Wally" Fessenden sent Pass Book and Lady Valentine along smartly. W. O. Scully had four handsome two-year-olds under saddle, and both Louis Stuart and Trainer Beckett had their Washington candidates in good galloping exercise.

A. J. Joyner did not bring out his Aqueduct division until noon, when he sent them along at quite a lively gait.

Jack Odom permitted Cassandra to step along for three furlongs in 0:41, and "Tim" Gaynor indulged Whimsical in a good quarter in 0:29.

HORSES OF CLASS WON.

Racing at New Orleans Under Favorable Conditions and on Fast Tracks.

NEW ORLEANS, March 5.—Tom Dolan, Monet, and Envoy, the class of their respective races, were the winning favorites at City Park to-day. The card was the ordinary Monday affair. Pirate's victory in the steeplechase was the surprise of the day. The weather was clear and the track fast. The stewards promulgated an order this afternoon ruling off K. Spence and William Brown for "offensive touting." Summaries:

FIRST RACE.—Three and a half furlongs. Tom Dolan, 113 pounds, (Nicol,) 7 to 10, won; Merry Leap Year, 110, (G. Schilling,) 12 to 1, second; Lady Mala, 105, (Koerner,) 8 to 1, third. Time—0:42 1-5. Capt. Hale, Vendido, Doc Kyle, Big Hand, Palatina, Brightly, Larry D., Jack Lee, Nicolin, First Lika, Fanny Marks, and Romping Sister also ran.

SECOND RACE.—One mile and a sixteenth. Thora Lee, 98 pounds, (R. Lowe,) 4 to 1, won; Rian, 107, (Pendergast,) 20 to 1, second; Labor, 107, (B. Smith,) 18 to 5, third. Time—1:47 2-5. Asclepias, Gilfain, Gravina, Morendo, Doeskin, Sanction, Bradley's Pet, and Del Carina also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Seven furlongs. Jack Dolan, 122 pounds, (Landry,) 23 to 5, won; Debar, 117, (Troxler,) 3 to 5, second; Massive, 107, (B. Smith,) 40 to 1, third. Time—1:27 2-5. Monterey also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—Short course steeplechase. Pirate, 131 pounds, (McClure,) 10 to 1, won; Wild Range, 148, (Pemberton,) 9 to 5, second; John E. Owens, 142, (Dupee,) 16 to 5, third. Time—3:16 1-5. Charawind, Chanlay, Ohio King, and Sweet Jane also ran. Little Wally fell.

FIFTH RACE.—One mile. Begona, 98 pounds, (Harrigan,) 13 to 5, won; Grenade, 110, (Nicol,) 11 to 10, second; Gold Coin, 104, (Romanelli,) 16 to 5, third. Time—1:41 3-5. Gauze, Long Bright, Oural, and Col. Bartlett also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Six furlongs. Monet, 123 pounds, (R. Powers,) 1 to 3, won; Delphie, 107, (B. Smith,) 20 to 1, second; Pat Bulger, 118, (Nicol,) 6 to 1, third. Time—1:14. Polly Prim, Strador, Billy Woodard, Rickey, Pitkin, and Ferroniere also ran.

SEVENTH RACE.—Seven furlongs. Envoy, 112 pounds, (Nicol,) 7 to 10, won; Florizel, 107, (Perrett,) 9 to 5, second; Freebooter, 112, (D. Austin,) 7 to 1, third. Time—1:27 3-5. La Cache, Malediction, and Virgie Withers also ran. Twenty Shot left at the post.

Globe Runner and Perfect were the only beaten favorites at the Fair Grounds to-day. The class of the card was in the fourth race, which was won in a canter by Ram's Horn. The weather was clear and track fast. Summary:

IFRST RACE.—Five and a half furlongs. Last Cherry, 99 pounds, (L. Smith,) 3 to 1, won; Electric Spark, 104, (Moreland,) 8 to 1, second; Globe Runner, 99, (J. Johnson,) 11 to 5, third. Time—1:08. Verbosity, Dreamland, May Brookwood, Loretta H., Abjure, and Simplicity also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Five and a half furlongs. Margaret O., 104 pounds, (Moreland,) 7 to 1, won; Perfect, 99, (Aubuchon,) 6 to 5, second; Owasca, 104, (L. Jones,) 4 to 1, third. Time—1:08 4-5. Lady Lasca, Maggie Lieber, Raining Leaves, Catherine R., Voltic, Intrigue, and Wedding Ring also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Six furlongs. First Premium, 110 pounds, (Perrine,) even, won; Dr. Coffey, 97, (Noone,) 8 to 1, second; Third Alarm, 114, (L. Smith,) 13 to 5, third. Time—1:14 1-5. Hocus Pocus also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—Handicap; one mile and twenty yards. Ram's Horn, 130 pounds, (Perrine,) 1 to 3, won; Ben Hodder, 105, (W. Robbins,) 9 to 2, second; Goldsmith, 111, (Bedell,) 20 to 1, third. Time—1:43 4-5. James Reddick and Don't Ask Me also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—One mile and a half. Bienenworth, 110 pounds, (Bedell,) 4 to 5, won; Aurumaster, 108, (Diggins,) 3 to 1, second; Hickory Corners, 97, (Perrine,) 60 to 1, third. Time—2:38 3-5. Tribes Hill, Dorothy Dodd, Chub, and Paul also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—One mile and a sixteenth. Nine, 90 pounds, (Johannessen,) 17 to 10, won; Atwood, 106, (H. McDonald,) 20 to 1, second; Kenton, 96, (T. Walsh,) 15 to 1, third. Time—1:49. Varna Fonso, Sonoma Belle, Triple Silver, Northwind, Depends, Colonist, and Sincerity Belle also ran.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

The Saratoga Stakes, which closed last midnight, showed many nominations yesterday afternoon, and there is every reason to expect an excellent showing when the mail is all opened. John Sanford was the largest nominator yesterday, having named horses in almost every fixture. For the Saratoga Special there were nine nominations received. Both Roseben and Ort Wells have been named in the Great Republic and the Saratoga Handicap.

Jockey "Willie" Shaw has been engaged to ride the starter E. A. Mitchell sends to the post in the Oxnard Dinner Stakes at Benning.

Jockey John Hoar sails for Europe to-day. He will ride in Russia, as he has for some seasons past.

AMERICANS GO SOUTH ON TRAINING TRIP

Baseball "Rooters" Give Players a Rousing Send-Off.

CHESBRO AND KEELER REPORT

Will Arrive at Birmingham To-night—Prospects for Good Team Promising.

That the Greater New York baseball team of the American League has a host of admirers who still believe Manager Griffith will develop a team at least equal to the aggregation that came within one game of winning the American League championship in 1904 was plainly in evidence yesterday, when some two hundred typical American League Park "rooters" assembled at the Pennsylvania station in Jersey City and gave Manager Griffith and the few men who left with him for the training grounds at Birmingham, Ala., a rousing send-off. Accompanying the astute leader were "Happy Jack" Chesbro, the hero of the "wet" ball; "Willie" Keeler, "Pat" Dougherty, Pitcher Leroy, Catcher Ira Thomas, an "Mike" Martin, the trainer. It is the first time that Chesbro and Keeler have accompanied the team on its preliminary training, the pair being usually employed in coaching at Harvard. This season professionals were barred at that university, but at that Manager Griffith intended that every eligible player should report to him for Spring training.

Almost simultaneous with the leaving of the local contingent yesterday word was received at the headquarters of the club that six players would start from Hot Springs, Ark., so as to meet Manager Griffith upon his arrival at Birmingham. The men who have gone through the "boiling out" process at the Arkansas resort are Elberfeld, "Doc" Newton, "Noodles" Hahn, and his compatriot, "Spaghetti" Hahn; Kleinow, and the "old war horse," James McGuire. With the addition of Conroy, who will join the local party at Camden, N. J., Williams and "Al" Orth, Griffith will be sure of having half of his men to care for when he arrives at the Southern traing quarters. As the balance of the team have been ordered to report on March 6, it is believed that the full complement will be on hand when the first practice is called for on Wednesday.

The absence of "Dave" Fultz is regretted by the management, but it is believed that Griffith has been anticipating such an event, and will develop an outfield equally as capable as the Greater New Yorks ever had. He is of the opinion that the prospects of the Greater New Yorks were never more encouraging. In fact, so good a judge as Manager Stahl of the Washington Club says, in reviewing the situation, that "if there is any serious upset in my 'dope' I rather believe the Greater New Yorks will be the ones to provide the sensation. If 'Grif' ever happens to get his bunch working right, and not too many accidents happen, they are a mighty dangerous proposition. If luck breaks right the New Yorks can win their share of games from any team in the business."

GIANTS' INFIELD COMPLETE.

Short Stop Dahlen Reports at Memphis—Donlin's First Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 5.—The famous infield of the Giants was completed to-day by the arrival of William Dahlen, the "Evangelist." During afternoon practice the men got in action for the first time since they celebrated their final victory in the world's championship series. Young Fitzgerald took care of affairs behind the plate, and the rapid firing of Devlin, Gilbert, Dahlen, and McGann did not bother him. In fact, the manner in which he whipped the ball to Dahlen and Gilbert, exhibiting both speed and accuracy, caused Manager McGraw to stop from his work at other things to note what might have happened to base stealers.

"Mike" Donlin took his first practice. He moved around in lively fashion, and, according to opinion expressed by McGraw, is in better condition now than at corresponding time last year. He is said to be lighter in weight than at the commencement of last season.

McGinnity is looked for at an early date. Strang, Browne, and others are also expected any day.

Manager McGraw, acting on a report published in an afternoon paper that Ed Hurlbut, a Southern League player, had thrashed a member of the New Yorks for alleged insults offered a young woman on the street, made a canvass of his team and every one denied that the assaulted party was a Giant.

Baseball Clubs Make Change.

The New York and Boston teams of the National League have been negotiating for a change in their playing dates, and according to advices from Boston it has been accomplished. On June 30 both of the New York teams are scheduled to play in Boston, but under the new arrangement the National Leaguers propose to transfer that game to New York, which is an off day for the American League. It will take the place of the game scheduled to be played between the two teams here on May 4, when the Greater New Yorks play the Philadelphia Athletics.

NEW YORK A. C. HAND TENNIS.

Upset for Dr. Ely in First Match of Singles Event.

Beginning with an upset the New York Athletic Club's annual handicap hand tennis tournament in singles gave promise of interesting sport yesterday, when Dr. L. W. Ely, one of the veteran players of the club, met defeat at the hands of J. F. Tracy. The latter is a comparatively new player at the sport which holds sway from one end of the year to the other in the big gymnasium of the Mercury Foot organization, Sixth Avenue and Central Park South. Tracy had the advantage of 7 aces over Dr. Ely and won his match by the score of 25—20, and 25—12.

The tournament in singles, which began yesterday, has attracted the strongest and largest entry list in the history of the sport at the club, where it was first invented and played thirteen years ago. Thirty-two competitors have been bracketed for this meeting, and upon the list are all of the former champions of the game. The score:

FIRST SET.

J. F. Tracy 13 aces—
3 0 0 2 2 0 2 0 2 0 4 2 1—Total, 25
Dr. L. W. Ely, 6 aces—
4 1 2 2 0 0 4 0 3 1 0 2 1—Total, 20

SECOND SET.

J. F. Tracy, 13 aces—1 0 1 1 4 4 1 6—23
Dr. L. W. Ely, 6 aces—0 0 1 6 1 0 2 2—12

Linesmen—Messrs. Fontain and Brown. Referee—Mr. Giannini.

The final round of the handicap doubles was played and resulted in a victory for W. A. McKenna and F. E. Hamlin. This pair, handicapped at 5 aces, defeated J. B. Naething and F. Kroehle, (8 aces,) after five keenly contested sets. Naething and Kroehle won the third and fourth sets by good volleying play at the net. They were not steady enough to win the deciding set, McKenna and Hamlin outplaying them at every point and winning the first place in the tournament by the score 25—17, 25—17, 9—25, 18—25, and 2[illegible]—10.

Harlem Oarsmen Elect Officers.

The annual meeting of the Harlem Regatta Association was held last night at Palatt's, Harlem, 236 West 125th Street. In anticipation of a fight for the Presidency there was a full representation. The election of officers resulted as follows: President—E. S. Connell, Union Boat Club; Vice President—E. W. Kimmelberg, Wyanoke Boat Club; Secretary and Treasurer—Samuel Cramer, Lone Star Boat Club; Assistant Secretary—Albert Marouseck, First Bohemian Boat Club. The only contest was for the office of Vice President, for which W. E. Cody of the Harlem Rowing Club opposed Mr. Kimmelberg, the latter winning by ten votes to seven, Columbia University refusing to vote.

The annual regatta will be held on the Harlem River, Decoration Day. The only change in the list of events will be the substitution of the senior four-oared gig race for the senior double sculls. After the regular meeting of the association the Regatta Committee was selected, with one delegate from each club. Richard Sturcke of the Waverly Boat Club was elected Chairman.

Race Meeting Extended Indefinitely.

CHICAGO, March 5.—Permission was granted to the New Louisiana Jockey Club at New Orleans to extend its race meeting from March 24 for an indefinite number of days by the Board of Stewards of the Western Jockey Club, at the monthly meeting to-day. The extension is to meet the competition of the City Park track, which is governed by the American Turf Association.

Herman Radtke, now riding at Hot Springs, Ark., who had been reinstated provisionally by the Stewards, was restored to good standing. Among the large list of others restored to good standing were J. C. Yeager and T. J. Hildebrand and their horses.

SPORTSMEN'S SHOW FEAST.

Canadian Clubs Barbecue on Catalo—Water Sports in the Garden.

"Buffalo" Jones presented the Canadian campers with a "catalo" yesterday, and the men from over the Northern border entertained their friends with an improvised barbecue. From the remarks of the guests steaks of the hybrid may soon appear on the menus of New York restaurants. But this was not the only cause for feelings of satisfaction at the Sportsman's Show in Madison Square Garden yesterday. The big crowd that filled the amphitheatre from the opening to the closing hour found ample chance to race around the big tank in motor boats. The boats were filled at every trip and at a meeting of the manufacturers the popularity of the convenient craft was shown by the fact that more than half a million dollars' worth of sales were reported for the period of the show.

Because of the interest displayed by visitors in a department of the Indian exhibit there promises to be a revival of the ancient sport of archery. In this exhibit Jim Long Feather and Whip-poor-will, two experts with the bow and arrow, spend their time in teaching visitors the method of holding the bow of hickory and fitting the arrow to the twisted deer thong so as to send it straight to the mark. Whip-poor-will is a typical son of the woods, and clad in buckskins he forms an inspiring picture. The illuminating exhibits in all branches of hunting and fishing are unusually complete during this final week of the show, while the tales told to visitors by the guides add spice and enchantment to those who gather about them.

Steve Van Allen, the rifle shot who has been giving exhibitions and supplying souvenirs to spectators by marking pennies thrown in the air, will endeavor to make a world's record this afternoon for shooting glass balls. He established a record last year by breaking 928 balls out of 1,000 shots in 1 hour and 31 minutes.

The following organizations of sportsmen will be represented at the show to-night by delegates: Bayswater, Canarsie, Erie Basin, Essex, Greenville, Huntington, Jefferson, Keystone, Kill von Kull, Manasquan, Mecox, Moriches, Northport, Ocean, Old Mill, Patchogue, and Seaside Park.

The water sports held in the tank provided considerable excitement among the spectators and resulted as follows:

Canoe Race, Single Paddles.—Won by F. Pendrill, New York; E. Hirsch, New York, second.

Swimming Race, 60 Yards.—Won by E. Spielberger, Rockaway; F. Tewes, College Point, second; J. W. Baldwin, Astoria, third. Time —0:35 3-5.

Man Fishing Contest.—First Trial—George Price, Tampico, Mexico, fisherman; Alfred Brown, College Point, man fish. Ended in a draw after 15 minutes. Second Trial—George Price, Tampico, Mexico, fisherman; Edward Lane, City Island, man fish. Price landed his fish in 4 minutes.

Mattress Race, 50 Yards.—Won by L. Pettigrew, City Island; L. Emanuel, Rockaway, second.

Canoe Tug of War, Singles.—Won by F. Pendrill, New York; H. Hirsch, New York, second.

Swimming Race, 50 Yards.—Won by J. W. Baldwin, Astoria; H. Kopff, Rockaway, second; F. Linenkohl, New York, third. Time—0:29 1-5.

Fourteen stalwart canoeists at the paddles rather had the best of it in the tug of war against the motor boat Buster Brown. This was the chief event of the night in the tank, and it ended with the canoeists wading ashore, as their frail craft swamped. The paddlers were divided as crews in three canoes.

NEW GARDNER YACHT.

A. H. Morris Building 40-Foot Sloop—All Classes on Sound Filled.

Two interesting facts of importance to yacht racing on Long Island Sound promising in the coming year exceptional sport developed among designers yesterday. It was announced from William Gardner's office that he has been at work on and has commenced building a new forty-foot rater, a sloop, which will meet Charles Lane Poor's Mira and H. Mason Raborg's Irondequoit in all the races in that class. It is building for Alfred Hennen Morris of the New York Yacht Club for cruising purposes primarily, but the designer's instructions were that it should have a turn of speed that would fit it well for racing against the two previous Gardner boats.

The other announcement was to the effect that not only would E. Walter Clark, Jr., who is building the new Herreshoff fifty-seven-footer, be a contestant on the cruise of the New York Yacht Club with the new boat, but that he would seek the opportunity of meeting the new Gielow-designed Effort, building for F. M. Smith, at every opportunity.

The assurance of these two classes fills every class of big boats on the Sound from seventy to forty feet. There is W. Ross Proctor's Mineola, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt's Rainbow, and J. Rogers Maxwell's Yankee in the seventies; Harry F. Lippitt's Weetamoe and J. Beree King's Neola, in the sixty-eight-foot class; F. M. Smith's Effort, the new Clark boat, and Fred M. Hoyt's Isolde, in the fifty-seven-foot; George W. Darr's Effort (the old Smith boat) and the Hanan brothers' Aspirant, in the forty-eight-foot, and Mira, Irondequoit, and the Morris boat, in the forty-foot.

To Name Place and Date to Row.

Oarsmen will soon know the place and date for holding the next National Regatta, for Secretary Fred R. Fortmeyer announced yesterday that the regular midwinter meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen would be held at the New York Athletic Club, Central Park South, on Saturday evening, March 17. Besides the selection of a course and date for the regatta, other business of importance will be considered, and as the meeting will be an open one, oarsmen are requested to show their interest in the association by their attendance.

Pick of Athletes for Pastime Games.

With four Amateur Athletic Union championships on the programme for the second annual Madison Square Garden games, to be held on the evening of St. Patrick's Day, March 17, the event may practically be called an indoor championship event. The Amateur Athletic Union events will be the sixty-yard run, 1,000-yard run, throwing fifty-six-pound weight for height, and putting twenty-four-pound shot. In the sprint will be Archie Hahn of Milwaukee, Wis.; W. A. Schick, former Harvard star and intercollegiate champion; Harry Hillman of the New York Athletic Club, all of whom have been selected to represent America in the Olympic games at Athens; Lawson Robertson, S. Northridge, J. J. Danaher, P. J. Callahan, and A. C. Johnson. Among the contestants in the 1,000-yard run will be James P. Sullivan, also on the Olympic team; Charles Bacon, the present champion, and Harvey Cohn. Entries will close on next Monday.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Medals for mileage and encouragement of touring this year will be offered by the Federation of American Motorcyclists. There will be three medals, gold, silver, and bronze, offered in each department, the competition opening April 1 and closing Nov. 30. Mileage reports are to be rendered monthly to M. E. Toepel Chairman of the F. A. M. Roads and Tours Committee, 930 Columbus Avenue. Mr. Toepel succeeds Carroll Le Roy Mosher, who has been transferred to the Chairmanship of the Transportation and Facilities Committee.

The news comes from Paris that the Darracq cars are the first entries for the big French automobile race known as the Grand Prix, to be held in June. Three Darracq cars are entered, and Hemery has been named as one of the drivers. This fact evidently shows that Hemery's refusal to obey the officials of the Ormond race meet will not interfere with the existing pleasant relations between American and French automobilists. In view of the bad management of the Florida races a great deal of sympathy has been expressed for Hemery, and the incident is one that automobilists are glad to forget. Wagner and Hauriot will drive the other Darracqs.

A thirty-five-foot motor yacht tender is being built by the Electric Launch Company at Bayonne for Cornelius Vanderbilt. It will be attached to his yacht North Star. The tender will be equipped with a sixty-horse-power motor, and the hull is being built from designs of Tams, Lemoine & Crane.

Joseph Tracy has completed his report of the Paris show for the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers. It is a sixty-eight-page book treating of the improvements on the vital parts of cars at the show, and will be supplied to the association's membership.

For the past two years the postal administration of Zurich, Switzerland, has been using automobiles entirely in its rural postal delivery system, and the experiment has proved so successful that the department has ordered automobiles for city delivery also.

The Boston automobilists are making special arrangements to entertain the party of New York motorists who are preparing to leave this city on the morning of March 10 in three cars on an auto run to Boston. A private view of the Boston auto show, which opens that night, will be given to the New York tourists between 5 and 7 o'clock.

FRENCH BALLOONIST COMING.

Comte de la Vaulx Expected Next Week—Ascensions at Pittsfield.

Plans for ballooning on a larger and more effective scale than heretofore, in this country particularly, are being made by the Aero Club of America. A big balloon that will hold from 40,000 to 50,000 cubic feet of gas will arrive here from France within a few days for Charles Levee, the young French aeronaut who made the two recent ascensions from West Point and Hillburn, near Tuxedo. Comte de la Vaulx is also expected to arrive in New York from Paris next week, and in order that he may be present at the next ascension, it is probable that the Aero Club may abandon the plans that were being made for an ascension at Pittsfield next Saturday.

Levee still has his small balloon, and it is barely possible, provided weather conditions are satisfactory, that he may take it to Pittsfield this week for an early ascension to study the currents of the air and to become acquainted with the topographical conditions. If this is done the ascension will simply be preliminary to a more elaborate ascension a little later when, besides Levee's new balloon, the Aero Club's balloon recently finished by Leo Stevens will take its first flight.

The Aero Club's balloon was built for the purpose of using hydrogen gas. This gas gives greater lifting power than the coal gas used in the last two ascensions. It is somewhat difficult to manufacture, but negotiations have been under way for some time to secure a plot of ground near Pittsfield for the Aero Club of America. Provided the preliminary balloon tests are satisfactory, the Aero Club may establish a regular plant there for making hydrogen gas. With this gas the balloons will be enabled to remain in the air for a considerable length of time.

Leveé's new balloon will be the largest in this country. It will carry four persons, and Mrs. Julian P. Thomas of this city will be the first lady to make an ascension in the balloon. Mrs. Thomas is the wife of Dr. Julian P. Thomas of 172 West Seventy-second Street. He has ordered a large balloon from Paris for his own use and he expects to make a number of ascensions later in the year.

PETERSON DEFEATS HOPPE.

Western Billiardist Outpoints Young Champion in Short Balk-Line Game.

Playing fast and accurate eighteen-inch balk-line billiards Peterson yesterday defeated William F. Hoppe, the world's champion playing one count in balk, at the latter's academy, Thirtieth Street, near Sixth Avenue. Peterson played two counts in balk against the young champion. The former scored his 300 points with an average of 25, leaving his opponent with only 264 points to his credit, with an average of 20 4-12.

In the night game Hoppe turned the tables on Peterson, making high runs of 88 and 83 before he completed his string of 400 points. Hoppe's average was 26 10-15 for this contest, in which Peterson only scored a total of 142 points. The scores:

AFTERNOON GAME.

Peterson—0 6 6 12 7 40 20 10 52 63 6 71 7. Total, 300 points; average, 25; high runs, 71, 63, and 52.

Hoppe—0 14 6 21 9 9 21 1 34 53 32 64. Total, 264 points; average, 20 4-12; high runs, 64, 53, and 34.

NIGHT GAME.

Hoppe—3 0 0 10 1 27 88 41 58 18 4 17 39 83 9 Total, 400 points; average, 26 10-15; high runs, 88, 83, and 58.

Peterson—0 5 25 0 32 7 1 22 3 8 14 13 11 1. Total, 142 points; average, 10 2-14; high runs, 32, 25, and 22.

Cline Won Deciding Billiard Game.

Harry Cline of Philadelphia last night defeated Thomas Gallagher in the deciding game in the 18.2 balk line "short stop" billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Billiard Academy, Brooklyn. The men tied last week, each winning four and losing two games. Last night's contest was slow and uninteresting, requiring thirty-seven innings. Cline took the lead at the start and held it throughout, winning by the score of 400 to 284. The winner's average was 10 20-37, with high runs of 70, 65, 60, 32, and 30. Gallagher averaged 7 25-37, and made high runs of 46, 42, and 28.

Wyley Won from David at Pool.

The handicap of 125 balls was too much for L. David to overcome in the match with B. Wyley, who had 100 to make, in the tournament now in progress at the Broadway Billiard Academy, and he was defeated by 100 to 85. The winner's best run was 23, with two scratches charged against him. David's highest contribution was 19, with two scratches. In to-night's game I. Lewine, with 90 to make, and B. Wyley, 100, will be the contestants.

American Rhodes Scholars Win.

OXFORD, England, March 5.—American Rhodes scholars captured three firsts and one second in the Oxford field sports to-day. In the high jump P. M. Young of South Dakota was first, making 5 feet 6¾ inches. Young was first also in the broad jump, clearing 22 feet. Warren E. Schutt of Cornell University was first in the mile run; time, 4:28 3-5. Albert M. Stevens of Willimantic, Conn., took second place in the hammer-throwing contest.

Columbia Picks Wrestling Team.

Columbia's wrestling team, which is to meet Pennsylvania in the Columbia gymnasium on Wednesday night, was finally chosen yesterday afternoon by Fred Gruhn, the coach, after the aspirants had some lively exhibitions on the mat. The Columbia boys, according to Gruhn, are in excellent trim for the Quakers. The final bouts, the winners of which constitute the team, follow:

Heavyweight.—F. J. Echeverria, P. G., threw T. T. Riley, 1908, L.

Light Heavyweight.—H. B. Post, 1908, S., threw P. J. Willard, 1907, S., and A. T. Moran, 1909, C.

Middleweight.—E. P. Kilroe, 1907, L., won by default.

Welterweight.—J. M. Howell, 1907, S., threw J. B. Tinney, 1908, C., and C. A. McCall, 1908, L.

Lightweight.—A. S. Shimmon, 1908, C., threw M. J. Elsing, 1907, S., and A. W. Evans, 1906, S.

Special Lightweight.—W. W. Wise, 1907, S., threw E. R. Alexander, 1907, C.

Featherweight.—I. Bloom, 1908, C., won by default.

Inflexible Breaks Down at Benning.

Word was received from Washington last night that while being galloped Saturday Inflexible had broken down so badly at Benning that it was decided to throw him out of training. He is the horse that broke down as a two-year-old at Saratoga, and there was no attempt made to return him to the races until this, his fifth, year. He was raced as a two-year-old by the late William C. Whitney, and was considered one of the best of his year. After breaking down at Saratoga he was sold to H. T. Oxnard for use in the stud, but he had apparently recovered from his unsoundness, and he was entered in several stakes this season.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—A considerably better tone appeared in wheat after midday, and the market closed with an advance of ¼c over Saturday's prices. At the opening and for some time afterward, decided weakness was a feature, influenced by an absence of bullish crop or weather news, liquidation and further aggressive bear pressure. The decline carried May off to 84½c, making a new low record for the season. The subsequent rally was started by the comparatively light visible supply increase and disturbing rumors from abroad regarding the Morocco question. On the bulge May wheat was carried up to 85¼c, closing at that figure. The Paris markets closed with a drop of 10 to 20 points, Berlin was 1¼ to 1¾ points lower, and Budapest 4 points down. Seaboard clearances were light and interior receipts about 100,000 bushels smaller than last year. The cash market closed irregular at 84c for No. 2 red in elevator and 86⅝c free on board afloat, nominal; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 88c free on board, afloat.

CORN.—Except right at the opening, when the market eased off with wheat, there was a good tone to corn throughout the day, and generally higher prices, especially at the West. Locally, the market closed ¼c net higher, after having been ⅜c below the previous close. A light movement and predictions for further reductions in Western receipts had much to do with the day's strength. Cash houses sold corn, and the visible supply showed a liberal increase, but there was less favorable news from the Argentine and good bull support all day. The crowd also construed the Snow estimate of 1,077,000,000 bushels in farm hands as rather bullish. His prediction for the Government was about 1,000,000,000 bushels. The Liverpool market closed ⅛d net lower, and exporters took 4 loads. No. 2 corn in the local market was quoted at 49c elevator and 47⅝c free on board afloat; No. 2 white, 48⅝c, and No. 2 yellow 47⅝c free on board afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was comparatively quiet yesterday, sales for the day being estimated at 200,000 bags. Prices fluctuated irregularly within a comparatively narrow range, closing within a point or two of the lowest, or 7@13 points net lower.

The opening was easy at a decline of 4@9 points in response to lower cables, good weather over the belt, and predictions for a decreased spot demand following the active business of the past month. Offerings were quite heavy. Southern spot markets, according to official reports, were unchanged to 1-17c higher. Liverpool reported spot sales of 12,000 bales and sales from the local stock for export and consumption were 2,818 bales.

A LONG JOB.

The commercial interests in the United States are moving in the right way to secure the Consular system they need and to which they have a clear right. A number of them, Boards of Trade and Transportation and Chambers of Commerce in the principal cities, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, &c., have called a convention for next week in Washington to discuss the matter and to provide for a permanent organization to study and act on the situation as it develops. The idea of a permanent organization is peculiarly expedient, if it can be made up of earnest and intelligent men, capable of understanding the constantly growing interests of the country and of bringing the influence of the business class to bear on Congress.

It will be a long job. The history of the Lodge bill is there to show it. So far as the improvement of the service is concerned, that bill included two very simple and obviously sensible features. One was that appointments to the service should be made in the lower grades after tests of fitness had been applied; the other was that promotions and transfers within each of the several classes created should be made by the President as the good of the service required. The Senate Committee struck out the first provision and also the provision as to promotions, and now the House Committee has struck out the provision as to transfers. The Senate decides that no pains shall be taken to get good men for the work; the House decides that the men shall not be employed where they can do the best work. It is as if a railroad corporation were required to fill its places without any means of discovering if the appointees are suited to the places, and then were forbidden to change them from places they are unsuited for to places for which they are proved to be suited. A corporation run on that principle would very promptly come to grief. The grief would arrive all the more swiftly if a large proportion of the appointments were made by the petty politicians of the Senate and the House.

The need of a practical and efficient Consular Service is immediate and progressive. The business organizations to which we have referred say in their call for the convention:

> Our factories have been gradually expanding, the greatly increased capital of the country has been and is seeking investment, and the time is fast approaching when our production of many classes of goods will be greater than the demand of our home trade. We shall, consequently, become more largely dependent upon foreign markets for the proper maintenance of our factories and for the full development of our commerce. It is obvious that, if we are to be successful in our efforts to secure foreign trade, we must be as well equipped in every direction as are the countries of Europe, which to-day carry on that trade on a large and profitable scale. These countries have for a great many years been extremely careful in selecting for the position of Consuls only men of ability and efficiency who, by training and business experience, are qualified to become largely instrumental in the development of the trade between the country they represent and the countries to which they are sent. Such men enjoy permanency of tenure of office, are promoted as vacancies occur, and their usefulness is thereby constantly increased.

This, it will be noted, is the statement largely of the manufacturing interests. It is not the cry of the hated and suspected importer. It is the argument of men who know that the country is steadily and rapidly outgrowing its home markets. Congress at present turns a deaf ear to it. But if the organization is sufficiently energetic and persistent, that cannot always be. As we have said, it will be a long job, but it is one of immense importance and well worth the utmost effort to accomplish it.

DEFENDING THE BANKRUPTCY LAW

It is to be hoped that the arguments of the representatives of the Credit Men's Association in defense of the bankruptcy law will prevail with Congress. This association is a strong one and is made up of precisely the classes that best understand the working of the law and the consequences of its repeal. That some amendments of the law would improve it is true, but it is equally true that the conditions which it has brought about are better than ever before prevailed and that its repeal would be followed by confusion, loss, and injury.

One effect of the law which is conveniently lost sight of by its opponents and by the advocates of a return to the chaos of State law, is the steady reduction of opportunities for fraudulent dealings. This has lately been brought prominently to public attention in connection with the vigorous and impressive action of Judge HOLT of the United States District Court in this district, in cases of criminal prosecution of parties engaged in fraudulent practices. The influence of the law in this direction is bound to be progressive, and if the law be repealed there is practically nothing to take its place in State legislation. There is almost no effort to conceal the fact that the workers for repeal would prefer the hodge-podge of the State laws because it tends to permit favoritism and discrimination. In the scramble for the assets of an insolvent the creditors who are best prepared and most vigilant as well as, in too many cases, least scrupulous, get the advantage. That is not only unfair, but it is injurious to the general progress of business which depends largely on uniform conditions and on reasonable certainty of calculations. The ideal of the Federal law is equal opportunity, and in the main it carries out that ideal.

TAKING COUNSEL.

The retirement of Mr. JAMES SPEYER from the Mutual's Board of Trustees, the meeting of the Presidents or other representatives of all the important life insurance companies in the United States doing business in New York held on Saturday, and the resolutions adopted by the New York Life's Trustees instructing President ORR to lay before the Legislature certain objections to the insurance bills now pending in that body, make it evident that the insurance business must for some time to come occupy the public attention. The time for excited clamor, however, has passed. The time for wise counsel has come.

The men representing the life insurance interests who met in this city on Saturday cannot all be bad men. If they are convinced that some of the measures introduced by the Armstrong Committee would be harmful it would be wise for the Committee to assume that they have good reasons in support of their conclusions which it would be worth while to hear and consider. It will not do to say that these officers of life insurance companies are merely seeking to perpetuate the old abuses, to keep open the old opportunities. Undoubtedly they know a good deal about the life insurance business. They may be able to point out to the Committee objections to the proposed measures that are really serious and would necessitate changes and amendments.

As to some of the recommendations made by the Committee, to give effect to which bills have been introduced, there is no dispute in any quarter. We do not suppose any insurance man would wish to be heard in opposition to bills forbidding political contributions or syndicate participations. But if any of the Armstrong Committee's bills would impose limitations not demanded by safety, if any of them would tend to increase the cost of insurance or to put old policy holders at a disadvantage as compared with those taking out policies in the future, the Committee, of course, would have a natural desire to be enlightened as to the provisions of the bills that might be criticised upon those grounds. The public has learned a great deal about the insurance business from the Armstrong Committee. Now that remedies are under consideration the Committee will naturally seek to obtain whatever information it can from practical life insurance men. It is the interests of the public, of the companies as trust institutions, and of the policy holders that are to be safeguarded. Criticism sincerely offered with the purpose of serving in good faith tese interests will be beneficial.

THE RETURN OF JUDGE DEUEL.

Since the days of BARNARD and CARDOZO we do not recall quite so impudent a defiance of judicial propriety and public decency as that which has been offered by Judge DEUEL of the Court of General Sessions in resuming his seat on the bench of that court as if nothing had happened.

We all know what has happened. Every intelligent citizen of New York knows it. Every rogue or every trollop who may be brought up before the Court of Special Sessions, while DEUEL disfigures its bench, will perfectly know it. Every such misdemeanant will have a strong suspicion, to say the least, that the Judge ought to form part of the society of the dock, instead of sitting on the bench to judge culprits quite as respectable as himself. A greater mockery of justice, a greater "contempt of court," than the continuance of DEUEL on the bench is unimaginable.

Think of it. A reputable and responsible periodical charged DEUEL with offenses which entirely disqualified him from holding a judicial position. He proceeded against his accuser for libel. A jury held that it was no libel to talk about him in that way. When that verdict was rendered the only thing for DEUEL to do, short of suicide, which we must not be undertaken to recommend, was to secrete himself and take his exercise after dark. For him to go back to the bench he had disgraced, and to undertake to sit in judgment on his peers or betters was a height of impudence, a culmination of contumacy, which merits treatment not only exemplary but punitive.

The Bar Association, upon which rests the primary responsibility for redressing this judicial scandal, has shown an amiable desire, really shared, we think, up to date, by a majority of the community, to let DEUEL down easy, as easy as the circumstances permitted. But that disposition should be changed by DEUEL's "stupefying impudence." It should be changed to a vehement desire to kick him out, and to kick him out hard.

THE TREASURY'S BANKING FUNCTIONS.

This year's redemption of banknotes exceeds $60,000,000 and the retirement exceeds $10,000,000. The distinction between redemption and retirement is important at a time of money-market sensitiveness, for it measures the contraction of the currency. Redemption signifies merely an exchange of lawful money for banknotes. If a bank wants clean money, or reserve money, it can send to the Treasury any amount of National banknotes—its own notes or any bank's notes—and get back Government "money," supplied, by requirement of law, by the banks whose notes are redeemed. The volume of circulation is thus unaltered, for both sorts cannot be outstanding together. Presumably it was this process to which Secretary SHAW referred when, in his controversy with the Chamber of Commerce, he contended that bank currency circulation was not restricted to reduction to the amount of $3,000,000 monthly.

The volume of circulation is affected only by the payment and cancellation of banknotes. This has occurred to a total in excess of $4,000,000 above the monthly quota for this year's two expired months. Secretary SHAW cannot claim this as another example in support of his dubious contention that the three-million-dollar limit is ineffective, because the retirements are compulsory under expiration of charters, and are not voluntary. Presumably the banks are renewing their charters, and in most cases will renew their circulation, instead of taking up the bonds securing the notes, and ceasing to do business. The circulation, therefore, may not be reduced as much as appears, but the incident is useful, nevertheless, because it illustrates the artificial nature of our banking system. We have another object lesson of the influences which are improperly effective upon the volume of currency, and which are emphasized in their effect instead of minimized.

The money market takes no account of how many checks or promissory notes are canceled, and very rightly. A banknote is not "money," even in the loose way in which greenbacks are called money. A banknote is merely a bank's promissory note, and ought to be issued and canceled with equally small disturbance. But our law requires reserve money to be deposited equal to the amount of banknotes retired, and the withdrawal of reserve money disturbs bank loans without reference to the convenience of borrower or lender, or the excellence of the credits. This may occur, as we are seeing, at a season inconvenient for many persons in no way rightly concerned, and may be the cause of cross-currents confusing judgment of the situation. For example, the burden of supplying the lawful money needed to redeem the National banknotes falls upon this centre, where our bank reserves are already undesirably low. Yet we are sending money to the very centres whose banks are ordering their correspondents here to make disbursements of reserve money for their account. This is a crazy system, if it can be called a system at all. Educated bankers and civilized law should find some way to offset these debits and credits without such disproportionate disturbance, even making allowance for the multiplication of the disturbance of loans in order to reduce requirements of reserves to the amount of reserves available. We like this Procrustean method of doing business. There can be no sort of doubt that we like it, for we go on doing it decade after decade, and listen to those who contend that it is unpatriotic to criticise the battle-stained greenback and war-born National bank system. We would like to see it mended, but this is the way to cause it to be ended.

It would be interesting to have some authority put together the banking functions exercised by the Sub-Treasury system, which was instituted as a protest against a National bank. It is a large beginning that it exercises substantially all the functions of the issue department of the Bank of England. It is compelled to take all the gold brought to it, and to issue its notes for the amount taken. It also provides gold for export in exchange for such notes. And it does this without the slightest attempt or ability to lessen the burden by correcting the exchanges by altering the price of foreign exchange. This is equally true of domestic exchange when it is necessary to plant or harvest the crops. Regardless of the relation of money markets it provides cash to be expressed about the country like dry goods, and even telegraphs the funds in some cases. Whoever passes the Pine Street back door may see porters and drays freely changing money for anybody to totals of tons and millions. Yet the Sub-Treasury is without any commercial connections whatever. All this must be done regardless of Treasury surpluses or deficits, or the state of trade. Whenever the Secretary needs information he must come to New York to get it, and is roundly denounced for conspiring with the money power. It is all right, of course. Everybody knows that one American is as good as another, unless he is a banker. He then becomes disqualified to give advice regarding the complexities which he understands, and whose existence enriches him at the expense of others. And when trouble comes it is always possible to blame it upon something or somebody else. Even before the Rate bill became ridiculous authorities not subject to discount said this topic was inferior to no other. Current events are emphasizing what they said when its truth was less plain.

THE CHILD LABOR LAW.

Would it not be a good thing for the Legislature to abolish one or two useless State Commissions and so save a little money that might be put to better use?

For instance, the Annual Appropriation bill which passed the Assembly last week cuts down the appropriation for the Labor Department by the sum of $8,000—from $133,000 to $125,000. Commissioner SHERMAN had asked for an increase of $21,000 for his department. Perhaps he could have got along with less, although he made a pretty good argument for the extra allowance. In particular, the enforcement of the laws regulating child labor is a matter that the Legislature should consider in a liberal spirit. The law prohibits the employment in factories of children under fourteen, and imposes certain educational conditions for those under the age of sixteen. It provides safeguards against unsanitary surroundings, the use of dangerous machinery, and so on. For the due enforcement of this law a continual and rigid factory inspection is required. The department ought to have more Inspectors; under the reduced appropriation it will have to employ less. The cutting down of the annual appropriation is discouraging to the workers who have given their disinterested labor to secure the enforcement of the laws protecting children employed in factories. The Senate ought to give candid consideration to their appeal for more money.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Advocacy of Assassination. Ranking very high among legislative curiosities is a bill just introduced at Albany by Assemblyman DE GROOT. This statesman, it seems, has taken with amazing seriousness the recent discussion of "euthanasia," and he is apparently afraid that something will come of it. At any rate, he has caused to be "read once and referred to the Committee on Codes" a bill which, if passed, would make "advocacy of assassination of invalids" a felony. "Any person," it provides, "who, by word of mouth, or by written or printed circulars, messages, letters, books, pamphlets, newspaper or magazine articles, or publications of any kind, made, issued, or circulated by him or by his authority, advocates, advises, or teaches the duty, necessity, or propriety of putting to death, by legal sanction or otherwise, persons afflicted with an incurable mental or physical disease, and because of their said condition, is guilty of a felony." That would certainly catch all the advocates of the quiet removal of troublesome relatives and friends, but we hardly think it will be necessary to put them under a special ban. Most of them are people entirely amiable, and, when it came to the point of actual killing, they would find no more reason for resort to desperate measures than do the rest of us. They argue logically enough from premises that are sound enough, but their conclusions are vitiated by the fact that the certainty upon which they would base their action would only be attainable in cases extremely rare. And when those cases are found there is usually some doctor with a hypodermic needle who is willing—to kill?—oh, no; only to prevent suffering and carefully to ignore the fact that if he did not prevent it so effectively the patient might draw a few more agonizing breaths. The bestowal of "euthanasia" to that extent always has existed and always will. It serves all desirable purposes, and anything more would be open to the most frightful abuses and excesses, with incidental advantages far too small to be compensatory. Mr. DE GROOT shouldn't worry over "the advocacy of assassination." That, in all its forms, is already felonious, and the folks whom he would suppress have as much horror of assassins as he has.

A Bill That Should Be Defeated. In a letter to The Medical Record, Dr. E. ELLIOT HARRIS presents with equal moderation and force the reasons why the demand of the "osteopathists" for a special Board of Examiners should be denied by the Legislature. Without a single denunciation of the men making this demand, and with no denial that there is value in "osteopathy" as a method of treatment, Dr. HARRIS builds up an argument against the Hinman bill that ought to destroy the last possibility of its passage. He even accepts the definition of "osteopathy" that has been formulated by its practitioners, but he declares that as a single agent it has no greater claim to be separated from the general practice of medicine than electropathy, hydropathy, kinesipathy, radiopathy, or psychopathy. Here is the unanswerable argument: "The eye, ear, nose, throat, electrotherapeutic, psychopathic, and other specialists do not ask exemption from the examination in the general science of medicine demanded by the Regents of the University of the State of New York of all candidates who apply for a license to practice medicine or any branch of medicine, and they do not ask for an examining board in their specialty. If the osteopaths desire to establish a special branch of medicine, than they, too, should possess at least that average of the knowledge of preventive medicine which is needed properly to control the spread of contagious and infectious diseases, and which is included in the general science of medicine demanded by the present law; and they should not try to escape the preliminary and final examinations for a license to treat the diseases of the human body." There is the whole case against the "osteopaths." If they will only make themselves doctors they can call themselves so to their hearts' content, and nobody will object however much they specialize in the direction of muscle and bone manipulation and adjustment. But a real medical course costs money and takes time—at least twice as much as the "osteopaths" devote to taking the courses in their own schools when they really follow out their own precepts. If they are not willing to pass the regular examinations they should be content to offer their services exactly as nurses and masseurs do, subject to competent medical direction. There is no hardship in this, and it is only to protect the public. Not all of us can view "osteopathy" as calmly as does Dr. HARRIS, but his calmness is highly effective and his letter should be brought to the attention of every Senator and Assemblyman. Nobody who is at once reasonable and honest can read it and still believe that there is a single merit in the Hinman bill.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—There is a good deal of talk at both ends of the Capitol about the "red house" in legislation. It is said that the "red house" is to be made a shibboleth for the rate fight, and one enthusiastic man has proposed to send to New York and have lapel buttons made with a small red house on them for the friends of the Hepburn bill to wear.

This talk is all due to a remark by the President. At a conference last week at the White House the President sought to make his position clear on the amendments to the Hepburn bill he desired or was willing to consent to. He remarked that he did "not care how the house was painted, so long as it was painted red."

"Somehow I can't help feeling," said one of the Democratic Senators to-day, talking with a friend, "that the President will win out in his rate fight."

"Just the same," continued the Senator, "it makes me think of a story that John Allen used to tell over in the House cloakrooms. The President has lost on the Philippine Tariff bill. It seems certain he will lose on the Statehood bill, the Santo Domingo treaty is not a howling triumph yet, and the way these judicial review amendments are being discussed the Rate bill may not be all we hope it will be.

"John Allen used to tell how a freight train down in Mississippi ran off the track and one of the brakemen was hurt. The conductor sent a telegram to the mother of the injured man, as follows:

"'Train derailed. John hurt. Arm, two ribs, neck, and both legs broken.'

"After an hour or so the railroad surgeon came and examined the man. He found that his arm was not broken. So the conductor sent another telegram to the sorrowing mother to this effect:

"'John not hurt as bad as I said. Arm not broken.'

"The Rate bill may be the arm in this Winter's smash-up."

Senator Tillman was talking about the Rate bill in his room to a number of his friends to-day.

"What do you think of Senator Spooner's escrow idea?" asked one.

"I always look for a good thing to come from Spooner," replied the South Carolina Senator, "but in this case I am a little distrustful."

"How's that?" said two or three together.

"I don't like the sound of that word," answered Tillman with his peculiar nasal drawl. "It sounds like a diet that has been served out to us Democrats too long and often."

Congress recently passed an appropriation providing for the marking of graves of Confederate soldiers who died in Northern prisons during the civil war. Secretary Taft is now considering the names of several candidates for the place of Commissioner, to find and mark the graves.

"What is the salary?" he was asked to-day.

"The Senate," replied Mr. Taft, "fixed the salary at $2,600, but the Democrats of the House, knowing my weakness for paying good salaries, struck that out and left the amount blank."

He ruminated for a while, and then rumbled forth in a thunderous chuckle: "Sometimes our Democratic friends find that there are good points about having a Czar."

"I have the highest respect for the present occupant of the Chair," said Judge Shackleford.

He was bending over his books and papers, and speaking as he did so.

"His fairness, his sagacity, his wisdom—"

At that point the Missouri Representative looked up and found that while he had been passing out his encomium on "Uncle Joe" Cannon the Speaker had called Curtis of Kansas to the chair. Shackleford stopped with a jog.

"Oh, I beg your pardon." And he interrupted himself with the thought that this might not be so pleasing to Curtis. "I—ah—well—I thought—"

Whatever he thought was forever drowned in the roar of laughter that kept the House happy for the next five minutes. No one seemed to enjoy the incident more than Curtis himself.

A catastrophe of which Speaker Cannon was both the cause and the victim marked the adjournment of the House to-day. All day there lay on the marble top of Uncle Joe's desk a big, shiny red apple that brought the water to the mouth of every man who looked at it.

Occasionally "Uncle Joe" stroked it caressingly with one hand, while with the other he toyed with the heavy-headed ivory gavel. At times, when the exigencies of his duty required him to maul his desk with the gavel, he thoughtfully thumped a spot at the other end, far removed from the precious apple. Not once all the afternoon was the luscious fruit in danger.

Then came the finish of business, and Sereno Payne, floor leader of the Republicans, was on his feet to make a motion to adjourn. Some one else started toward the Speaker's desk to get recognition. Just as he got within range, "Uncle Joe," growing a little weary of wielding the heavy gavel with his right hand shifted it to his left, and for one fateful instant forgot the apple.

Down came the ivory head with a smash fair on that devoted apple. There was a doleful crunch, a gasp from the House, and little jets of apple juice were flying from the desk in all directions.

"Shucks!" said "Uncle Joe," as he surveyed sadly the ruins of his apple.

And then the House adjourned.

Steffens Among the Wicked.

From The Springfield Republican.

The writings of Lincoln Steffens are radiant with glory, or black with the deepest villainy. No half lights for him. It is the magazine style at its fullest fruition. He is now "doing" Washington for a newspaper syndicate. In the White House, as he beholds our disturbed National capital, sits one who is not lower than the angels. The beautiful Capitol Building is filled with mischievous devils, bent on blocking righteous undertakings of the Executive head of this Nation. Seasoned newspaper correspondents in Washington sniff, as much as they dare, and we do not blame them. It is a mixed world, my masters, and one where the absolute, unshading lines of right and wrong mighty seldom run. The unmixed sentiment of God, home, mother, gets astray in Washington amid the more complicate forces of motive and action. Mr. Steffens should cultivate a more definite understanding of intricate justice in his distribution of praise and blame. Wholesale assumptions often miscarry. The President is honest, and so are no end of other folks, even in the National Capitol. While we whip the rascals, let not good men suffer unduly because our generalizations are not sufficiently expert and informed.

His Room.

From The Washington Star.

"Do you think that travel will enable that young man to make a better impression?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne; "during his absence."

SOFT SMOKE NUISANCE.

Charles T. Barney Reaffirms the Statements Dr. Darlington Objected To.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see Dr. Darlington says that if I had been on friendly terms with the Interborough Company he doubts very much if I would have given out for publication such a mass of inaccuracies in reference to the smoke nuisance. Nevertheless, Dr. Darlington did not point out a single inaccuracy in my statement. In the first place, I said that the Department of Health had power to suppress the smoke nuisance if they saw fit to exercise that power. Dr. Darlington admits that he has the power, and says that if the great power of the Board of Health were enforced every fire in New York City could be quenched.

In the next place I said that under Section 1,264 of the Greater New York Charter, every Inspector or officer of the Department of Health, acting under the regulations of said department, had the authority to arrest any person who shall, in view of such Inspector or officer, violate or resist the enforcement of any order of such Department of Health. The following is Section 1,264 of the Greater New York Charter set forth at length:

> Section 1,264. Any member of the police force, and every Inspector or officer of said Department of Health, as the regulations of either of said departments may, respectively provide relative to its own subordinates, may arrest any person who shall, in view of such member or officer, violate, or do, or be engaged in doing or committing in said city any act or thing forbidden by this chapter, or by any law or ordinance, the authority conferred by which is given to said Department of Health, or who shall, in such presence, resist or be engaged in resisting, the enforcement of any of the orders of said department or of the Police Department pursuant thereto. And any person so arrested shall be thereafter treated and disposed of as any other person duly arrested for a misdemeanor.

Any one can see whether Dr. Darlington or myself is correct in the statement of the law and whether Recorder Goff could have given to the interpretation of such section the twist that Dr. Darlington contends he did.

Another thing that I said was that the smoke nuisance was on the increase, and that prosecutions for violations of the smoke ordinance were decidedly on the decrease. Any one who walks about the city can judge whether the first part of the statement is correct, and the following figures obtained from the Department of Health show whether I am accurate in the latter part.

	1902.	1903.	1904.	1905.
Cases prosecuted	57	116	8	1
Discharged	40	70	8	1
Sentence suspended	17	36	..	..
Fined	..	10	..	..

Another thing that I said was that on Sept. 27, 1905, the Department of Health adopted the following resolution:

> Resolved, That until further order of this board orders be issued for the abatement of all nuisances caused by the discharge of smoke from the premises in the City of New York and that no summary arrests be made therefor; that no criminal action be taken for the alleged violation of any such order or orders without the resolution of this board or the approval of the Secretary or the Corporation Counsel.

Dr. Darlington has not undertaken to explain why this resolution was passed and why the authority to make summary arrests was taken out of the hands of a competent, sanitary official and placed in the hands of others, where action could only be obtained after delay. It was my intention, in making the statement that I did, not to antagonize Dr. Darlington, but to help him find out whether the law was adequate to enable him to suppress the nuisance, and, if it were inadequate, I would cheerfully have volunteered my assistance to obtain adequate legislation. Viewed in any light, however, my statement may have the effect of arousing Dr. Darlington to do his duty; his statements and reasons for not doing so have been so various it has been impossible to follow them. However, it will be interesting to follow his course in this matter from now on, since he admits he has the power to suppress the nuisance if he so desires, and we may yet get our clean city again.

I shall certainly continue this agitation until I can find out definitely whether the clear blue skies that used to be one of the chief charms of a residence in New York City can be restored, or whether we shall be forced to live in a city such as Pittsburg or Chicago.

Mr. Brady and Dramatic Criticism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. William A. Brady, in his "between the acts" speeches at the Liberty Theatre, is not merely talking for effect. There is a basis of sound common sense in his arguments. The jester has come to dominate among the dramatic critics of the daily newspapers. This is not a new thing, by any means. Since Hazlitt and Leigh Hunt the dramatic critics have been too prone to let their sense of humor carry them away. But with the development of the theatre and the multiplication of newspapers the evil—and it is generally an evil—has become more noticeable. Mr. Brady's Indian play is a rather old-fashioned romantic drama, beautifully mounted and very well acted. It may not be the very best subject to select for the beginning of a campaign against frivolous and facetious criticism. Other and better plays have been unjustly ridiculed. In London as well as in New York the pestilential funny man is too prominent among the critics. He has been pursuing his course of quips and wheezes for a long while to no good effect. He ought to see by this time that his methods are useless, artistically speaking, and try others. Serious, thoughtful criticism of plays and acting is always beneficial, no matter what the critic's point of view may be. As an old theatregoer I strongly incline to the opinion that newspaper dramatic criticism the morning after a first performance should contain fewer words and no jests.

"Subway Consumption."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The announcement from one of your correspondents that a new species of consumption is likely to appear in the near future among the employes and passengers of the Subway suggests the idea that a slim but powerful magnet, extending along the centre of the ceiling of each car, might avert this threatened catastrophe of flying steel particles. The possibility that should this expedient be tried it might result in a fringe of hairpins, veilpins, and even inverted umbrellas and canes, may negative this preventive in the minds of some of us, particularly if disheveled ladies, pausing to reclaim their possessions at each station, put the schedule out of business.

Carrying the Thing Too Far.

From The Florida Times-Union.

We have always claimed that the farmer was the most independent man on the top side of earth, but we are constrained to say that there is such a thing as carrying independence too far, as was done one day last week, when Ezra Tomlin, from the Bushy Hill neighborhood, shot our sanctum door full of bird shot because he had been asked to liquidate his subscription. Ezra's friends think he will be able to sit up and take solid nourishments in a week or so.

ARE THE PICTURES POOR?

A Reply to Gen. Hawkins as to One of the Paintings Criticised.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The quality of the picture by Etty to which Mr. Hawkins refers in your issue of Sunday can be judged by all who care to go to see it.

But Mr. Hawkins's remarks that Etty himself stood in the second or third grade among the English artists of his time, and that his reputation is no higher now than then, is simply the undiscriminating and uninformed fashionable opinion of the moment.

Those who know do not agree with Mr. Hawkins. Sir Walter Armstrong, Keeper of the Dublin National Gallery, well known and recognized as an expert on matters of art, writes on Page 197 of his recent "Life of Turner":

"Even now, when so many interests are concerned in bringing all things with any sort of merit out into the light, some excellent artists are still languishing in those cold shades that lie beside the main stream of fashion. An Etty, for instance, full of splendid painting, may be acquired for a few pounds; so may a Wilson, or a Couture, and so, until the other day, might the work of so supreme an executant as Frans Hals. But in all these cases it is, or was, the multitude that lacked appreciation. The cultivated few understand that Etty was a considerable colorist; that he painted flesh better than any one else, and that he was one of the sincerest artists that ever lived."

There are both dealers and collectors who are of the same opinion as Sir Walter Armstrong concerning the future of Etty's work, and is it not commendable if the authorities at our Museum have the judgment to look ahead ten years or so, and to secure examples of good art while they are still to be had at a moderate price, rather than wait until they have become the fashionable fad of the moment? Too often it is the case that such authorities let opportunities pass by through fear of just such criticism as that of Mr. Hawkins.

Simplicity in Life Insurance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

All offerings of life insurance companies should be based on actual facts. Every policy should be written in plain, distinct words, so that every plain man would be able to understand what he has to expect when he uses the hard-earned money to provide for his family.

There are at present so many different policies written that it requires a man of law to distinguish "which is which."

If the law would prohibit the issue of any but plain life or endowment policies the public would feel satisfied. The public would learn that life insurance would mean a provision of a certain amount that the policy calls for, and, in addition, such profit or dividends as honest business would yield.

That Public Library Inscription.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The very fitting protest of your correspondent against the inscription being or to be placed upon the front of the New York Public Library building should direct public attention to what apparently is a most surprising intention on the part of those having the matter in charge. It would seem that merely so to direct attention should arouse an expression from the people generally which would compel placing over the portals a more appropriate inscription along the lines suggested by Mr. Haydel.

Has It All Been Forgotten?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Advertised Nostrums.

From American Medicine.

The present warfare against nostrums should not blind us to the work being silently accomplished by quite a number of lay journals in various parts of the country. THE NEW YORK TIMES has been silently excluding, one after another, its nostrum advertisements, until it is already an example for many medical journals. The request for information as to anything objectionable, which still remains or which might slip in through oversight, is pleasant reading, after looking over the horrible local sheets from which the country doctor is so often compelled to get his news.

THE INEVITABLE BILL.

I might travel near and far,
Sprinting in a touring car,
Wear upon my swelling chest
Brilliants costly as the best;
I might own a country seat,
Join with horse and hounds each meet,
Did not Fate prevent such bliss
With a monthly bill like this:
  Sugar, lemons, lard and ham,
    Sausage, cheese, potatoes,
  Macaroni, tea and lamb,
    Cabbage and tomatoes,
  Ginger, butter, eggs and meal,
    Onions—Heaven blight 'em!
  Olives, porterhouse and veal—
    Thus ad infinitum.

This it is that keeps my nose
To the grindstone, and my clothes
Shoddy, coarse, and ready-made,
While my high ideals fade.
Like old Omar, I could be Happy, dearest heart, with thee
And a loaf and wine with ease,
Could I shunt such bills as these:
  Sugar, lemons, lard and ham, &c.

'CARMEN' AT THE OPERA FIRST TIME THIS SEASON

Crowded House Hears Mr. Caruso Sing Don Jose in French.

MISS FREMSTAD'S CARMEN

Miss Abott's First Appearance as Micaela—An Excellent and Well-Prepared Performance.

Carmen	Miss Fremstad
Micaela	Miss Abott
Frasquita	Miss Ralph
Mercedes	Mme. Jacoby
Don Jose	Mr. Caruso
Escamillo	Mr. Journet
Zuniga	Mr. Begue
Morales	Mr. Parvis
Dancairo	Mr. Dufriche
Remendado	Mr. Reiss
Conductor	Mr. Arturo Vigna

"Carmen" had to wait till the sixteenth week of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House before it was produced, and when its turn came last evening it attracted an enormous audience. Every seat was occupied, and the standing room was crowded to suffocation. The first appearance of Mr. Caruso here in the part of Don José, singing it in French, was doubtless the cause of much of the interest, but Miss Olive Fremstad's remarkable impersonation of Carmen, first made known here last season, ought to have had something to do with it, and even the potency of the music, the wealth of its inspiration, may have had its share.

The performance was carried through with much spirit and showed the evidences of a more careful preparation than has been given to some of the previous productions this season. Mr. Caruso is not made by nature for parts that have the suggestion of the cavalier in them, and Don Jose is such a part. There have been more convincing impersonations of the Spanish soldier than his, so far as appearance and action are concerned, but he showed a much stronger dramatic conception and a more adept method in it than might have been supposed.

It is true that in the highest pitch of the emotional tension at the close of the opera he cannot refrain from some of the lachrymose manifestations that usually accompany his denotements of great passion. But in this and in the third act as well he showed some powerfully temperamental traits in his acting. He sings the music, of course, with much beauty of tone. The purely lyric portions he delivered delightfully, as the duet in the first act, and the song about Carmen's flower in the second. It was strange that in neither of his entrances in the first two acts was a hand given to welcome him. In the second act, after his flower song, his ingrained Italian impulse to acknowledge applause even in the most affecting situations brought him the tribute of a burst of laughter from the audience.

Miss Fremstad's Carmen is one of the most interesting additions we have had to a long line of notable interpretations. It is original in its outlines, and much of the detail is strikingly effective. The sheer insinuating wickedness of character, its diabolical selfishness, its vulgarity, are emphasized. There is little charm, little allurement. Even in her costume Miss Fremstad properly makes no distinction between herself and the rest of the crowd of tobacco workers. Her dance in the second act was most artistic. Miss Fremstad's voice creates beautiful effects in many passages of the music which lie well for her lower tones, and she sings it with much beauty and dramatic expressiveness. Interest was also felt in the first appearance of Miss Bessie Abott in the part of Micaela.

It is an insignificant one dramatically, and its requirements are limited chiefly to the duet with Don José in the first act and the air in the third act. In both of these Miss Abott was somewhat disappointing. Her voice sounded unconscionably small, and not very steady, but its quality is agreeable, and there was evidently a call for allowance to be made last evening for nervousness on her part. Her style has grace, and charm, however, and the small volume of her voice is well produced and carries well.

Mr. Journet, who was the Escamillo, was suffering from a trouble in the throat which interfered somewhat, yet not materially, with the power and resonance of his voice.

The scenic accessories of this "Carmen" production are admirable. The representation of the square in Seville is realistic, and the management of the chorus in this act is intelligent and effective. Mr. Vigna conducted with energy and more finesse than he usually displays.

MISS CADY'S RECITAL.

She Plays Classical and Russian Piano Music in Mendelssohn Hall.

Miss Harriette Cady gave a piano recital in Mendelssohn Hall yesterday afternoon that was heard by an audience of considerable size. Miss Cady played a well-selected list of pieces beginning with a prelude and fugue from the "Well-Tempered Clavichord," and, after Mendelssohn's Serious Variations and a Chopin group, she played an interesting collection of smaller compositions by the Russians Scriabine, Glinka, (arranged by Balakireff,) Tschaikowsky, Arensky, and the Pole Leschetizky. Miss Cady plays in an unaffected and musicianly style and acceptably, though she has a long way to go yet to reach an authoritative artistic position. She has a considerably developed technique, in which the fluency of her right hand in passage work is notable. She needs more strength and certainty, however, and more variety and color in her tone. She played the pieces by Bach clearly and was at her best in Mendelssohn's variations. Her conception of Chopin's music seemed rather dry.

MME. SAMAROFF'S PLANS.

Her Former Manager Gave Out an Unauthorized Announcement.

THE TIMES yesterday printed an announcement that Mme. Olga Samaroff had arranged for a tour of France and Germany next season. The authority was the manager who had charge of Mme. Samaroff's bookings for the season. It now appears, however, that this manager for several weeks has had no authority to speak about Mme. Samaroff's plans, and the statement given by him as from the pianist, while written under her direction last August, was not issued with her consent.

Mrs. Carlos Hickenlooper, mother of Mme. Samaroff, said yesterday:

"My daughter will not go to Germany and France, because she cannot do so with safety. She has arranged for a tour of the United States and Canada with another manager next season. The statement published in THE TIMES was prepared last August. Afterward we decided not to give it out, as my daughter did not wish to tell the public of her sorrows. We feel that it has now been given out because my daughter has another manager."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Beginning to-day, Tuesday matinees of "Brown of Harvard" will be given at the Princess Theatre. Last night one hundred and fifty students from the College of the City of New York attended the performance.

Edna May sails to-day for London to begin rehearsals for the new musical play in which she is to be presented at the Vaudeville Theatre.

William A. Brady has accepted for early production Sydney Rosenfeld's play "The Optimist." Rehearsals will begin Thursday.

The professional matinee of "The Galloper," which was to have been given this Thursday at the Garden Theatre, has been postponed until a week from to-day.

HUMOR THIN IN NEW COMEDY.

Lawrance D'Orsay in Augustus Thomas's "The Embassy Ball."

Captain, the Hon. Hawarden-Kellie	Lawrence D'Orsay
Senator Bender of Oregon	George Clarke
Thomas Jarrett	Forrest Robinson
John Wetherell	Walter Hitchcock
Eugene Lewis	Harold Heaton
Daniel	George Grimes
Bell Boy	William Pickens
Madge Bender	Miriam Nesbitt
Mrs. Bender	Marion Barney
Emily Jarrett	Rose Hubbard
Mrs. Ewing Wetherell	Ida Darling
Mandy	Emma Cornick
Sally	Lizzie Carter

In his speech before the curtain at Daly's Theatre last night Lawrance D'Orsay explained that he had first appeared here as a King, then as an Earl; subsequently Augustus Thomas had written a play for him in which he was mere- have to be a silly ass again, and he an- Mr. D'Orsay, dubiously. "I asked him to write me a play in which I would not have to be a sil yass again, and he answered, "All right, dear boy, in the next play you shall be just your own self."

Without presuming to decide a question upon which Mr. D'Orsay himself seems to be in doubt, it may be said that in the chief part in "The Embassy Ball" Mr. Thomas has not made any very radical departure from the third of the classifications suggested in the actor's speech.

Captain the Honorable Hawarden Kellie (that is the name of the particular silly ass represented by Mr. D'Orsay in this play) always laughs at American jokes, though for the life of him he cannot understand them, and when he does try to explain one he becomes hopelessly entangled. He also has an especially well-developed talent for getting the names of people hopelessly mixed. Needless to say the latter peculiarity involves him in more difficulties than the former.

Having been attentive to a young American woman in distress in Paris, (she needed a bicycle permit and signed her name to a marriage certificate instead, the Captain ostensibly signing as a witness, but in reality bracketing himself as the prospective husband,) having subsequently met this young woman and proposed to her under the impression that she was somebody else, and having only a very little while later stumbled upon another American young woman for whom he has really formed a serious attachment, the Captain, as may be imagined, is in for rather an interesting time, particularly as all of the principals are more or less related to one another.

This matter Mr. Thomas has handled with a good deal of humor, expressed in several very effective situations and no end of bright lines. But his comedy on the whole is disappointing. The story is too thin to spread entertainingly over three acts, and the lapses in interest are rather frequent.

To add to the somewhat somnolent effect of much that transpires on the stage there is an unnecessary iteration of the Captain's peculiarities, apparently for the purpose of giving point to the climaxes, a result which is, indeed, achieved, but at considerable expense as regards the effectiveness of the comedy as a whole.

There is, as one might have expected from Mr. Thomas, an evidence of rather keen and penetrating observation as regards personal relationships, one minor theme of the comedy involving some differences existing between an aged Senator's second wife (she had been his stenographer) and the daughter of his first wife. Otherwise, however, the secondary interest, having to do with the wooing of a widow by a man who is only waiting to propose until he has got his unmarried daughter off his hands, is wholly conventional and disappointing.

From accounts that came when Mr. Thomas's comedy was first produced it apparently dealt largely in political satire, conditions in Panama providing the mainspring of its action. But all such matter has been eliminated, and what remains is for the most part colorless. What the play was in its original state one may not determine, but it seems pretty certain that, whatever its shortcomings, it must have then had body and substance which no longer exist.

During the first act last night there seemed to be evidences that Mr. D'Orsay's style had broadened somewhat—that his peculiarly delightful stage Englishman had lost some of its original charm in an apparent effort to make its qualities more telling. This, however, may have been due to first-night nervousness, which frequently occasions an exaggeration of personal idiosyncrasies, especially in the case of an actor of such marked peculiarities. At any rate, the fault was subsequently less noticeable.

Of the other men, George Clarke was especially successful. Of the women, Marion Barney and Rose Hubbard are to be commended. Bits of genuine color were provided by George Grimes, Emma Cormick, and William Pickens, who appeared respectively as a maid, a servant, and a bellboy, without the necessity for the usual make-ups of negroes on the stage.

AT THE THEATRES YESTERDAY

"The Smart Set" was the attraction at the Murray Hill.

"The Old Clothes Man" was the offering at the Third Avenue.

At the Grand Opera House "The College Widow" was presented.

This is the last week of "Bedford's Hope" at the Fourteenth Street Theatre.

Ford and Gehrue were seen in "Lovers and Lunatics" at the West End.

Charles T. Aldrich in "Secret Service Sam" appeared at the Metropolis.

The Rose Sydell London Burlesquers were at the Circle.

At the American, "Chinatown Charlie," a melodrama, was the week's attraction.

"King of the Wild West" was performed at the New Star.

At the Harlem Opera House Blanche Walsh was seen in "The Woman in the Case."

William J. Kelly and his stock company presented "The Belle of Richmond" at the Yorkville.

The offering of the stock company at Proctor's 125th Street Theatre was "Out of the Fold."

The all-star company at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre appeared in a revival of "The Prisoner of Zenda." The leading roles were taken by Amelia Bingham and James Young.

At the Eden Musee a figure in wax of M. Fallieres was the feature. Other attractions were the Hungarian Band and the cinematograph.

Liberra, the double man, remained the big attraction at Huber's Fourteenth Street Museum.

The headliner at the Victoria was Arthur Dunn. Other leading entertainers were the Vassar Girls, Crane Brothers, Melville and Stetson, and E. F. Reynard.

Henri de Vries presented "A Case of Arson" at the Alhambra. The other attractions were McWatters and Tyson, Picciani Family, Belman and Moore, and Clarice Vance.

James J. Corbett in "A Thief in the Night" was first on the bill at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre. The programme also included Dave Lewis, Therese Renz, Simon and Gardner, and Augusta Glose.

At the Colonial Cliff Berzac's Circus, Rigo, S. Miller Kent, Charles Leonard Fletcher, Frank and Jenny Latona, Millman Trio, Walter Kelly, and the moving pictures were the attractions.

The Waterbury Brothers and Tenny were the top-liners at Keith's. Others were Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar, James J. Morton, the Larson Sisters, and Le Roy and Clayton.

Mabel McKinley appeared at Hurtig & Seamon's. Charles Burke and Grace La Rue, Edwin Keough, Steely, Doty and company, and Coakley and McBride were others on the programme.

Charles E. Evans appeared in "It's Up to You, William," at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre. The programme also included Dan McAvoy, Kelly and Violette, Spissel Brothers and Mack, Aurie Dagwell, "The Girl Behind the Drum," and Milani Trio.

The attractions that remain are "A Society Circus" at the Hippodrome, "The Lion and the Mouse" at the Lyceum, "The Rogers Brothers in Ireland" at the New York, Otis Skinner in "The Duel" at the Hudson, Blanche Bates in "The Girl of the Golden West" at the Belasco, "Mexicana" at the Lyric, Louis Mann and Clara Lipman in "Julie Bon Bon" at the Fields', "The Redskin" at the Liberty, Fay Templeton in "45 Minutes from Broadway" at the New Amsterdam, Elsie Janis in "The Vanderbilt Cup" at the Broadway, Maude Adams in "Peter Pan" at the Empire, "The Earl and the Girl" at the Casino, Fritzi Scheff in "Mlle. Cohan in "George Washington, Jr.," at the Herald Square, "Mr. Hopkinson" at the Savoy, David Warfield in "The Music Master" at the Bijou, William Faversham in "The Squaw Man" at Wallack's, Henry Woodruff in "Brown of Harvard" at the Princess, "Twiddle-Twaddle" and "The Squaw Man's Girl of the Golden West" at the Weber Music Hall, Raymond Hitchcock in "The Galloper" at the Garden, "The Title Mart" at the Madison Square, "The Heart of Maryland" at the Academy, and Williams and Walker in "Abyssinia" at the Majestic.

GET THEIR PIN MONEY OUT OF THE RAILROAD

Bronx Women Have Been Getting Scores of Verdicts.

EACH COSTS THE ROAD $62

One Fair Plaintiff Has Obtained 30 Judgments for Damages Because Transfers Were Refused.

Women who live in the Bronx have discovered a profitable pastime in Manhattan. It consists of getting judgments for $62 from the Metropolitan Street Railway Company when conductors refuse to give transfers.

One lawyer—E. Van Rensselaer Ketchum—has obtained more than 600 judgments by the grace of the railroad law and has nearly 2,500 cases now pending. His clients are nearly all women, and most of them live in the Bronx. Every time a conductor refuses to give a transfer the Metropolitan is liable for $50 and costs, the latter amounting to $12. When the watchful read the final decision of the Court of Appeals on this matter it looked like easy money to them. It was.

"The Metropolitan has paid out some $200,000, I should say, since the final decision," said Mr. Ketchum last night. "No, I haven't had all the cases, but I've conducted a good many of them."

One Connecticut Judge came to New York on a special trip "to test the law." He wanted to see how it worked, he said. In case it suited him he was going to recommend it to the Connecticut Legislature. Incidentally, he sued when conductors refused to give him transfers, and got judgments aggregating over $200. It was a lucrative trip for the Connecticut Judge. Connecticut hasn't been heard from yet on the proposition to imitate the New York law.

Another person who wished to observe the workings of the law was a minister from Massachusetts, a full-fledged D. D. He obtained one judgment, and may get more. Mr. Ketchum refused to tell his name.

But it's the women who have been the busiest in enforcing the law. Miss Florence Vorhees, sister of the Rev. J. B. Vorhees, pastor of the Union Reformed Church of High Bridge, is the latest devotee of the new sport. Judge Tierney, in the Municipal Court in the Bronx, handed down a judgment in her favor Saturday. Here is a list of some of the fortunate women, with the number of judgments awarded to each one.

Florence Vorhees	1	Nannie Turrill	6
Blanche Tingley	12	Elizabeth Douglass	30
Charlotte M. Stout	3	Evelina V. Johnson	15
Elsie B. Parker	6	Amelia Merritt	1
Helen Seeger	17	Theresa Nicholson	4

One client of Mr. Ketchum's has obtained judgments amounting to more than $2,000, but who this is the lawyer refused to tell last night. A great many of the cases have come up before Judge Tierney. Section 104 of the Railroad law says that a street railway must give transfers at every crossing on its line or pay $50 for every failure to do so when asked. For several years the question was before the courts and finally it was decided, so that now the only way the company can keep from paying is to give transfers everywhere.

Miss Stout was one who obtained a judgment on Saturday. Miss Stout patronizes a restaurant in the neighborhood of the Battery. When she goes thither she invariably asks for a transfer between the trolley line and the horse line at State Street and Battery Place. The conductor, obeying the rule of the company, refuses. Two or three days later Miss Stout appears in court and fifteen days after that gets a check.

Since these suits began two or three years ago the Metropolitan has established forty-seven new transfer points; if the present rate of paying judgments keeps up it may establish more very soon.

"When the Metropolitan finds out that it costs more not to give transfers at a corner, then it decides to give 'em," said Mr. Ketchum, "but not until then. It has the calculation down to a fine point. What we're trying to do now is to make the company do away with these red and blue transfers—that is, let a passenger ride north on a transfer he got going south.

"There's nothing in the law about 'one direction.' The law says that a citizen has the right to go from one point in the city to any other point (on a car line) for the payment of one fare of 5 cents. Ultimately the Metropolitan will be forced to give transfers this way.

"This law is being observed by other States and many of them may enact one like it. A Western Governor sent his relative here specially to test it. Yes, the relative did get one or two judgments himself.

"The Metropolitan has the remedy in its own hands. All it need do is to establish a universal transfer system. The law on the subject is plain, and it cannot be dodged. The fifty-dollar penalty provision is the only way to punish a street-car corporation that disobeys."

PRICE COINS A WORD.

It's "Skiddering," and the Operation It Describes Appears Profitable.

Ex-Police Captain James K. Price coined a word yesterday. A commission was taking testimony on which to base awards for property taken by the city in the opening of Belmont Street in the Bronx, and it had been testified that houses were being moved around to various points in the line of opening of the street on purpose to get the awards.

When the commission began taking testimony yesterday at 90 West Broadway Harold Swain, a lawyer, angered Capt. Price, and the Captain said sharply:

"I want this commission to understand that there are about fifteen houses that have been skiddering along in this neighborhood, and that some of them have been moved at least four times to make a profit for the owner."

The "skiddering" houses, the Captain declared, were frequently not worth more than $7.

ENGEMAN ESTATE MUST SELL.

Brighton Track Association Wins Suit for Fifth Interest.

According to the decision of Justice Marean in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, Elizabeth G. Engeman, as executrix of George H. Engeman, will be compelled to transfer to the Brighton Beach Racing Association one-fifth interest in the Brighton Beach race track. She will take an appeal.

Engeman on Jan. 14, 1901, agreed to sell his one-fifth interest for $80,000, the deed to be delivered on Dec. 1, 1904. After the signing of the contract, it is alleged, the plaintiff paid sums amounting to $14,347.74. In November, 1904, Engeman repudiated the contract.

He died while the case was pending, and his adopted daughter, as executrix, was made defendant. She asserted that the property was worth $250,000, and that Engeman was deceived into signing the agreement.

Changes in "The Title Mart."

"The Title Mart," Winston Churchill's play now running at the Madison Square Theatre, showed several changes last night. Viola Kellog replaced Dorothy Revell as the heroine, and Perry Moore has Murray Carson's part as the lawyer. The author has added a new rural character, Obbie, who chums with the cock-fighting capitalist. The piece stays in New York only this week.

Brady Criticises the Critics Again.

William A. Brady again criticised some of the dramatic critics at the end of the second act of "The Redskin" at the Liberty Theatre last night. His remarks were of the same tenor as those made on previous evenings. Several theatrical managers were in the house to hear what Mr. Brady had to say.

PREHENSILE HARLEMITES.

Acquired Characteristics the Result of Many Years of Straphanging.

Not only is the male Harlemite entirely losing the desire for a seat in the Subway when headed for home after working hours, but the years of straphanging above the earth, on its surface, and under it are showing in his progeny.

A group of three small boys boarded a downtown Subway car at Ninety-sixth Street yesterday at noon, and although the car was not a third filled and there were plenty of seats the lads declined to sit down when their mother did.

"It makes me sick to sit down in a car," said one of the boys.

"It's more comfortable standing up," said another.

"When we grow up," suggested the third, "we will use the straps."

FOR CHRYSTIE STREET HOUSE

An Amateur Performance to be Given at Berkeley Lyceum.

An amateur performance will be given at the Berkeley Lyceum on Tuesday evening of next week for the benefit of "the Chrystie Street House." This is a temporary home at 129 Chrystie Street for young men and boys, who, according to the management, "are in trouble, any kind of trouble—either vagrants, discharged from hospitals, or from penal institutions."

The house affords accommodation for twelve at a time, and the recovery of many has proved so rapid that two hundred may be helped in the course of a year. There is a permanent clubroom for the young men of the neighborhood, and the Boys and Girls' clubs meet afternoons and evenings. The house is entirely supported by voluntary contributions.

Tickets for the entertainment are $2.50 each; boxes, $20. The programme includes "Six to One; or, the Scapegoat," a one-act comedy; a butterfly dance, "Proverbs in Porcelain," and "A Village Kermiss." Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. John Clarkson Jay, 106 East Seventy-ninth Street; Mrs. Benjamin S. Church, 36 West Twelfth Street; Miss Laura Jay Edwards, 11 West Forty-seventh Street, and Miss E. Bethune Stein, 11 West Forty-seventh Street.

GEN. GATACRE DEAD.

Ill-Fortune in Boer War Dimmed His Military Reputation.

LONDON, March 6.—The death is announced this morning of Major Gen. Sir William Forbes Gatacre, aged 63 years. Gen. Gatacre served with distinction in the Soudan, but his persistent ill fortune in the Boer war dimmed his reputation as a soldier.

Major Gen. Sir William Forbes Gatacre was born Dec. 3, 1843. He was the son of Edward Lloyd Gatacre of Shropshire. Before he became Major General commanding the Tenth Division and Nineteenth Brigade, Fourth Army Corps, he had a creditable record as a soldier, and had received several medals for brilliant leadership.

In the Boer war everything went against him. His last misfortune came at Reddersberg, where his troops, famished from thirst and worn out by the excessive heat, laid down their arms. After that Gen. Gatacre went back to England.

BRICKMAKERS INDICTED.

Accused of Destroying Highways and Causing Nyack Disaster.

NYACK, N. Y., March 5.—The Rockland County Grand Jury to-day presented indictments against three brick manufacturers of Haverstraw for destroying highways which resulted in the recent landslide by which twenty lives were lost.

The indicted manufacturers are the Excelsior Brick Company, John Nicholson, and John Reilley.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Miss Nannie Wright Brown and Harold Richmond Talbot are to be married on Thursday, April 26, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at the Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, by the Rev. Dr. L. D. Grosvenor. Miss Nellie Granville Brown will be her sister's maid of honor, and the complete list of bridesmaids follows: Miss Alice Kobbé, Miss Harriet Porter, Miss May Jones of Virginia, Miss Alice Du Viver, Miss Gladys Gittings of Baltimore, and Miss Grace Ruggles. The church ceremony will be followed by a reception for relatives and intimate friends only at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Waldron P. Brown, 32 East Thirty-fifth Street.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Brokaw are in Italy, and for some time have been at Nice.

⁂

This afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock, there will be at the Waldorf-Astoria a reading by Charles Gibson of Boston from his "Two Gentlemen of Touraine" and "Old French Inns." Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. I. Townsend Burden, Mrs. Newbold Morris, and others are among the patronesses.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph N. Ellis (Miss Elizabeth Warder) are spending their honeymoon at St. Augustine, Fla., where they have a cottage overlooking the bay.

⁂

Capt. James Brady Mitchell, United States Army, and Mrs. Mitchell, who was Miss Mabel Stebbins, are in town for a few days, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stebbins, on their way South. Capt. Mitchell has been stationed at Portland, Me., since his wedding, but has been transferred to Fort Monroe, and is due there on Saturday.

⁂

A benefit for the Vassar Students' Aid Society will be given at the Hudson Theatre on the afternoon of April 12. Four little plays will be given by professionals. The offerings will include an operetta by Harold McGrath, and a one-act Japanese play by William De Mille.

⁂

Mrs. George Law, who is at Monte Carlo, gave a breakfast there a few days ago. Her guests included the Duchess of Devonshire, Lady de Trafford, and Miss Barbara Sedley. Mr. and Mrs. Spreckels and Miss Lurline Spreckels also were at Monte Carlo for some time. The marriage of the latter to Spencer Eddy, Jr., it is reported, is to take place in New York at Easter.

⁂

Clarence P. Wyckoff will give his bachelor dinner at Delmonico's on April 14.

Hotel Chaplain's Task Made Pleasant.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your paper this morning I notice your reporter misquoted me and gave an impression which is misleading. I have always found THE TIMES fair and square in its dealings, and I trust you will kindly correct this statement. The Gideons, or Commercial Travelers' Association, hold their monthly service regularly in the Broadway Central Hotel, and in my address there last Sunday I remarked that their religious service was easier than mine, at least in one respect, for I was in a different hotel each Sunday evening, and it sometimes required me to go three or four times to find the proprietor at home so that I could make the necessary arrangements.

I wish to say that I have held services in twenty different hotels this Winter, one on each Sunday evening, and that I had arrangements already made in other hotels for services to last during Lent.

I furthermore wish to say that the hotel proprietors and managers have extended every courtesy, and by their good will, kind words, and cordial co-operation in my work make it exceedingly pleasant to me, and I have reason to believe also much appreciated by many of their guests. HENRY MARSH WARREN.

SERVANT GIRLS' FRIEND, MATRON BOYLE, IS DEAD

It Was Her Belief That the Angels Wear Aprons.

SHE MADE MANY MATCHES

In Her Opinion Servants Were Persecuted and "Housewife" Meant "Tyrant."

Business went on as usual in the Immigrant Free Labor Bureau at the Barge Office yesterday, as it has for thirty-five years, the duration of Matron Theresa Boyle's incumbency there. But not a servant girl remained all day—an unprecedented thing.

"Mrs. Boyle is dead!" was the word that went around, and soon the whole Battery knew of the death of the most motherly matron the immigrant girl has ever had.

"Mrs. Boyle died at 54 Conselyea Street, Williamsburg, Sunday night of cancer on the liver," was the reading of the simple placard, and the immigrant girls, among whom her fame had gone, even to their native land, had not the heart to stay.

Every housewife who within the last two generations has engaged an immigrant servant girl at the Barge Office has had to reckon with this vigilant matron. It was her working principle that "the poor critturs is shamefully abused." Scores of the servants used to impose on the old woman's good nature by seeking new positions there every week or so.

Mrs. Boyle, who was said to be a cousin of Lord Roberts, though she would neither affirm nor deny it, always addressed a servant as "my dear." She could not be moved from her opinion that servants were an immaculate, though persecuted, set, and that "housewife" was only another name for "tyrant."

"The blessed angels in heaven have got aprons on, just as ye have, and sure I believe they are all servants," she used to say to the spellbound new arrivals.

She hung above her head a warning notice to "servant hunters" that they must have letters of introduction from reputable business men—not "loafers, nor saloon people, nor politicians."

She eyed every "tyrant" housekeeper with suspicion. If the "tyrant" suggested a wage of $10 a month Mrs. Boyle would say that her girls were not looking for a charity home. After getting the audacious housekeeper out of doors she would tell the girls what a narrow escape they had from "that divil of a woman."

To letters that came from out of the city Mrs. Boyle would send scorching replies. She knew, she said, what the fate of the "poor critters" would be if they departed far from her. No, she would have them near where they could conveniently tell her their troubles. Mrs. Boyle proudly declared that she never yet allowed a saintly immigrant girl to go to the heathen of the rural districts.

The most remarkable thing about Mrs. Boyle's long career of over thirty-five years at the Barge Office and Castle Garden is that, up to a year ago she had missed only one day in two generations. It was not the day of the 1888 blizzard, either, for even then she appeared. It was upon the death of her son, Dec. 1, 1905, that she absented herself. After that she rapidly failed.

Mrs. Boyle was never averse to "making a match" for an immigrant girl. She received many letters from lonely farmers. She never sent the girl out, but wrote the applicant to come on. When he arrived she would step lightly to the servants' room and call out:

"Bridget, my dear, here's the gentleman to see you."

"Bridget" would trip forward with sundry blushes, and before the farmer could remonstrate Mrs. Boyle would push the couple toward the door with the words: "My dears, take a walk around the Battery; then come back and tell me how you like each other."

She never made a mistake in the men, and many an immigrant girl has she changed from a servant to the mistress of her own home.

In a like manner she made a specialty of prevailing upon housewives to take in married couples with children.

One of her last acts was a report showing that she placed 2,000 girls out at service in 1905. She drew attention to the fact that most of them were Germans and Irish, while 47 were Scandanavians, 32 English, 17 Polish, 8 Hungarians, 6 French, and 6 Russians.

Mrs. Boyle founded the mission of the Holy Rosary at 7 State Street in 1884. It has since passed under the charge of Roman Catholic priests. Mrs. Boyle was 73 years old and had been a widow for more than thirty years. She leaves two sons and three grandchildren. Funeral services will be held Thursday morning at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Leonard Street, near Maujer Street, Williamsburg. The burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

MERIDIAN TO ACCEPT AID.

Relief of Tornado Victims Too Great a Task for the City.

MERIDIAN, Miss., March 5.—It was decided to-day by the general relief committee that outside financial contributions from all sources for the aid of the victims of Friday's tornado, would be accepted.

The committee had announced that it did not need outside assistance, as the people of Meridian were amply able to take care of themselves. As the extent of the calamity is seen, however, the committee has realized that more money will be needed than it can get at home. It has had many offers of money already.

Gangs of convicts from city and State prisons, aided by citizens, are busily engaged in clearing away the débris. Several thousand carpenters were put to work to-day on temporary structures.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The weather east of the Mississippi River has cleared under the influence of a strong area of high pressure whose crest overlies Ontario. In Kansas, western Nebraska, eastern Colorado, and Oklahoma, rain or snow has fallen, due to a shallow depression that is central in southern New Mexico.

The rain area in the West and Southwest will spread slowly northward and eastward during Tuesday and Wednesday into the middle Mississippi and lower Missouri and Ohio Valleys and the eastern Gulf States. In other districts fair weather will prevail with unimportant temperature changes.

Winds along the Atlantic Coast will be fresh northeast to north; on the Gulf Coast fresh east to southeast; on Lake Michigan light and variable, becoming fresh southerly.

Steamers departing Tuesday for European ports will have fresh north to northeast winds and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND WEDNESDAY

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Fair Tuesday and Wednesday; fresh northeast to north winds.

Western New York and Western Pennsylvania—Fair Tuesday and Wednesday; warmer Wednesday, light variable winds.

	1905.	1906.		1905.	1906.
3 A. M.	17	34	4 P. M.	31	42
6 A. M.	14	33	6 P. M.	32	39
9 A. M.	18	35	9 P. M.	31	36
12 M.	25	39	12 P. M.	30	34

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 37; for the corresponding date last year it was 24; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 38.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 35; at 8 P. M. it was 36. Maximum temperature, 42 degrees at 4 P. M.; minimum, 32 degrees at 6:10 A. M. Humidity, 72 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 72 per cent. at 8 P. M.

THE HEALERS

By MAARTEN MAARTENS.

Author of "Dorothea," "God's Fool," etc.

This is a happy, humorous novel written on an unusual subject, and in an unusual vein. It is a satire on modern medicine, but the characters created are worthy of "Vanity Fair." An old professor with one set of medical theories, his son with another, an old spinster with horse sense, and two love affairs are jumbled together in a most interesting manner.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Major Livingston Mims.

ATLANTA, March 5.—Major Livingston Mims, who was Mayor of Atlanta in 1901 and 1902, and one of the most widely known men in the South, died at his home here to-day. He was 76 years old. He entered the Confederate Army in the civil war as a private; he later went to Virginia as a staff officer of Gen. Barksdale, and was made Chief Quartermaster of the Department of Mississippi and East Louisiana. Gens. J. E. Johnston and Pemberton specially valued his services.

After the war he entered the insurance business with Gens. Johnston and Humphreys. For two years he was President of the Southern Underwriters' Association, and for two years President of the Southeastern Tariff Association. For twenty years he was President of the Capital City Club.

Mrs. Clara Leete Hepburn.

Mrs. Clara Leete Hepburn, wife of Dr. James Curtis Hepburn, the medical missionary, died Sunday at a sanitarium in Paterson. She was 88 years old, and is survived by her husband and one son, Samuel Hepburn, who is in business in Japan. Mrs. Hepburn was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Leete. She was born at Guilford, Conn., and was married to Dr. Hepburn in 1840. Mrs. Hepburn went to Japan with her husband, on whom the Japanese Government conferred the Order of the Rising Sun. She had lived in East Orange for thirteen years.

Franklin Brooks.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 5.—Franklin Brooks died to-day at his home in this city. He was 51 years old, and was a member of the firm of Eugene Munsell & Co., at 218 Water Street, New York. He was an expert in mica mining, and had full charge of this branch of the firm's business. He had traveled over the greater part of the world in the interest of the mica industry.

Mr. Brooks had been a Director of the Union County Trust Banking Company here since its formation. He was President of the Mattono Club and the Elizabeth Club and of Trinity Episcopal Church.

Brig. Gen. J. M. Varian.

Brig. Gen. Joshua M. Varian, retired, who died on Saturday in this city, was, like his father, Gen. J. M. Varian, identified with military affairs for many years. He entered the Eighth Regiment of the National Guard in 1861 and rose to the rank of Captain. In 1886 he was made Brigadier General of the Third Brigade. As Chief of Ordinance he built many armories throughout the State. He was on the staff of Govs. Flower and Hill. He left a widow, a son and a daughter, the latter the wife of Dr. J. B. Locherty of this city.

Charles H. Brett.

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., March 5.—Charles H. Brett died here to-day. He was 89 years old. He was a descendant of Lieut. Roger Brett of the Royal Navy, who married Catheryna Rombout, an only daughter of Francis Rombout, a grantee of the Rombout patent under King James II. Mr. Brett's wife died two years ago in her eighty-sixth year. The couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1902. They are survived by three children. The funeral will be held at Matteawan to-morrow afternoon.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Break; Call Money Rates, 4½@5¾ Per Cent.

Declines Follow Weakness in Copper and Reading—Strike Uncertainty.

The negatively favorable bank statement of Saturday and the prospect of the deposit this week of some $3,000,000 in the local banks by Secretary Shaw were nullified in their influence on speculative sentiment yesterday by the hurried and apparently compulsory liquidation which developed in Reading and Amalgamated Copper shares at the opening of the market. This continued without intermission up to the noon hour, resulting in declines of some 9 points in the one stock and 4 points in the other. The entire list was unsettled, and losses of from 1 to 3 points were general, while in certain issues, such as Smelters, which have been the subject of operations corresponding to those which forced Reading and Copper to their extreme high prices, sharp breaks occurred. The pressure upon the shares directly attacked diminished around the noon hour, and as their prices recovered the market rallied, only to fall again upon a recurrence of the liquidation. Near the close the midday recovery was repeated, and prices of the stocks immediately under fire as well as those affected by their declines, rallied nominally. Reports that individuals interested in operations for the rise in Reading and in the Copper shares had been badly hit and through them commission houses affected were common, of course, but there was nothing to show that these were anything more than the reports which always accompany a market like that of yesterday. The movements in these shares have for some days past given clear evidence of anxiety on the part of those responsible for their earlier advances to reduce their holdings, and their declines yesterday were along the same lines, that in Reading being accelerated, doubtless, by fears of a strike in the anthracite regions. For some reason Wall Street has chosen to believe that there will be no coal strike, but those who are in close touch with the actual state of mind of the parties interested, and who are conversant with the negotiations in progress, are by no means so optimistic, and it may prove that yesterday's movements were largely in the nature of discounting the possibilities of trouble. More attention was devoted to the progress of radical legislation in National and State legislative bodies, and to the developments in Socialistic politics, while the resignation of one of Wall Street's most prominent bankers from the Directorate of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, owing, doubtless, to discontent with the policy now being pursued there, attracted wide attention. The weakness in United States Steel shares, in view of reports from steel centres telling of sagging prices and less active business, was also the subject of much comment.

Call money rates were firm throughout the day in spite of the announcement of impending Government deposits, while the demand for time funds at unusually high rates continued. Since the compilation of the last statement the banks have lost $1,059,000 to the Sub-Treasury, a sum practically half that lost in the same period a week ago. The railroads continued to furnish excellent earnings statements for the month of January, that of the Illinois Central showing an increase of $407,000 in net, while the St. Paul reported a gain of $226,000. The markets at London and Paris were lower, although the changes were not important.

COPPERS LED THE BREAK.

270,000 Shares of Amalgamated and 225,000 of Reading Sold.

The Stock Exchange had a very active day yesterday, the total sales of stock amounting to 1,466,390 shares. Prices broke sharply in many parts of the list, the declines being sharpest in Reading, and the Copper stocks, including Amalgamated Copper, which sold down 4 points, and Anaconda, which dropped over 16 points, and United Copper, in the outside market, which declined from 65 to 58. The heaviest trading of the day was in Amalgamated Copper, the sales of which totaled 270,000 shares, Reading being second with sales of about 225,000 shares.

Reading sold off 8 points and closed with a net loss of 6¾ points. One of the chief influences in the day's market was the consideration given to the possibility of a coal strike. Bankers yesterday were giving more serious consideration to the possibility of a strike, the opinion being expressed in some quarters that great difficulty would be encountered in arranging an agreement between the miners and the operators. Point was given to the apprehensions over the coal strike situation by the statement that a conference was to be held to-day between the coal road representatives and those of the miners.

The market recovered slightly in the final trading, but except in the stocks in which the sharpest breaks occurred the recoveries in most cases were not large. Amalgamated, which sold as low as par, closed at 100⅞, with a net loss of 3⅜ points; Reading common, which declined to 126¾, closed at 128⅛, a net loss of 6¾; Anaconda, after selling as low as 24 closed 2 points above that price, showing a net loss of 14¾. American Smelting, which was one of the active stocks, after selling down 4 points to 150⅝, recovered before the close all but 1⅛ points of this loss.

The Steel stocks ended the day only slightly above the low prices of the session, with net losses of 1⅛ points in the common and 1⅜ in the preferred. Union Pacific recovered at the close from 149½ to 150, and showed a net loss of 1½.

ERIE MAY CUT RATES, TOO.

Chicago-New York Through Traffic Likely to Cause War.

Representatives of the Erie Railroad said yesterday that it had not yet been decided whether the road would meet the two dollar reduction in the passenger rate from Chicago to New York, notice of which will probably be filed to-day by the Grand Trunk. The probability, however, is that the Erie will meet any reduction made by the other differential lines.

The expected reduction in the Chicago-New York rate is due to a reopening of the controversy of last Fall between the Grand Trunk and the Michigan Central. The Grand Trunk has taken the position that the Michigan Central was not entitled to the differential rate of $18 from Chicago to New York on business turned over by the Michigan Central to the New York Central, which is not a differential line. The Michigan Central, however, insisted upon its right to sell Chicago-New York tickets via the New York Central at the differential rate, and its persistence in this attitude is responsible for the present renewal of the old-time controversy.

The prediction has been made in railroad circles that the Michigan Central will in turn meet any reduction made by the Grand Trunk, so that the Chicago-New York lines, it is said, are probably facing a rate war on through business from Chicago to New York.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 4½@5¾ per cent., with the last loan at 5 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 5¼ per cent.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 5.—Money was most plentiful and cheaper in the market to-day, owing to Saturday's good arrivals. Discounts consequently were easier.

Operators on the Stock Exchange were principally occupied with arrangements for the settlement, but the tone was cheerful on the monetary outlook. There have been fears of serious trouble in Kaffirs during the forthcoming settlement, but the present indications are that the failures if there are any will be unimportant. Consols eased toward the close.

Americans opened a shade below parity and hardened on local support, but the improvement disappeared in the afternoon on Wall Street advices, and stocks closed weak.

Foreigners were inactive, in sympathy with Paris, but hardened on moderate support, Russians, Japanese, and Mexican rails were steady.

Kaffirs were a fraction harder, but the morning business was narrow, dealers being engaged in arranging the settlement. Prices declined in the afternoon and closed easy.

Japanese imperial sixes of 1904 were quoted at 103⅞.

Bar silver quiet at 29⅞d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 16.62; Lisbon, 4.50.

Money, 2¾@3½ per cent.

Discount rates—Short bills, 3 9-16@3⅝ per cent.; three months' bills, 3½@3 9-16 per cent.

Bullion amounting to £52,000 was taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day.

LONDON CLOSING QUOTATIONS.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, March 5.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were weak and the tone was indecisive, owing to the situation at Algeciras. Toward the close rentes were offered on rumors of Cabinet dissensions. At the close prices were weak.

Russian imperial fours were quoted at 82.40 and Russian bonds of 1904 were quoted at 494.

Three per cent. rentes, 99f 40c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 15c for checks.

BERLIN, March 5.—Trading on the Boerse to-day was dull and disquietude prevailed. Americans were weaker.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 49½ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates—Short bills and three months' bills, 4 per cent.

American Mining Stocks in London.

The following prices for American mining stocks were received from London yesterday:

Financial Notes.

The Baltic Mining Company stockholders have elected J. Henry Brooks and R. T. McKeever to the directorships made vacant by the death of John Stanton and the retirement of Joseph E. Gay. The sale of a portion of the company's property to the Atlantic Mining Company was ratified. The company's office will be transferred from New York to Boston. It is said that William H. Payne probably will be elected President and Frederick Stanwood Secretary and Treasurer.

Joseph E. Gay, who had just retired from the Presidency of the Atlantic Mining Company, has been elected to succeed the late John Stanton as President of the Wolverine, Mohawk, and Michigan Companies.

F. T. Chandler of Chandler Brothers & Co., 111 Broadway, has been elected President of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange.

Swift & Company's sales of fresh beef in New York City for the week ending Saturday, March 3, averaged 7.10 cents per pound.—Adv.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Slump in United Copper to Low Price of the Year.

Heavy Liquidation Puts Heinze's Stock Down to 58—Market Weak and Irregular.

The curb market's feature yesterday was the heavy liquidation in United Copper and a consequent slump in price to the lowest figure it has touched since the Heinze stock went kiting up from 48 to 60 in the middle of December. Opening at 65, 2⅜ below Saturday's close, United Copper began to sell off at once, and before a dozen transactions had been made was down to 60½. It recovered to 62, but sold rapidly down again, touching 58 shortly after noon. During the rest of the session it fluctuated fractionally between that price and 59, which was the close. Sales were 28,200. Copper Securities lost 1 point on sales of 1,000 shares, and Boston Copper sold down ¾. The other mining shares were for the most part irregular and heavy.

The industrials were much neglected. Bethlehem Steel common and preferred each lost 1 point on light selling, the latter closing at 88 and the former at 28, both the low prices of the year.

⁂

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 5.—New York exchange was 20c. discount. Time and call loans, 5@5½ per cent.

In the somewhat easier trend of prices on the local exchange to-day Subway was the chief loser, falling from a firmer position at 46½ to around 44½. Title and Trust at 115, Shipbuilding at 56, Brick at 66, and Biscuit below 67, showed small losses. Match was fairly firm early at 137⅞@138. Swifts held its recent mark very well, selling as high as 107⅝. Bonds were rather active, Boxboard 6s selling as low as 67⅛. Ogden Gas 5s were off about ¾. The list:

*Decrease.

There was considerable selling pressure in evidence in the local copper shares to-day, and prices sold off sharply all around. Bingham and United Copper were features of extreme weakness, declining about 5 points each. Amalgamated declined to 99⅞ on large selling orders, a good part of which apparently emanated from New York. A notable exception to the general weakness was Washington Mining, which advanced to 1½. The closing was irregular.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 5.—Trading to-day for the usually active list showed slight weakness, practical declines being scored by the majority of the issues. As the day advanced, trading became dull and very few price changes were noticed.

Union Trust suffered the heaviest, dropping to 53½, a loss of 1½ points. Houston Oil was the leader for activity at lower figures, opening ¼ off, at 11½, and selling steadily at that price.

Near the close G. B. S. first 3-year 4s eased off ¼, City 4s (1925) advanced ¼ to 107¾.

In the bond list Norfolk Railway and Light 5s declined ¼ to 100¼. Atlantic Coast Line consolidated 4s were ¼ higher, at 99¾. Cotton Duck 5s ran off ¼ to 85¼. Maryland Trust warrants opened off five per cent. to 20 for broken averages, ranging from ⅜ to 16 share lots and toward the close succeeded in weakening balance of the trading list. As the market progressed they went down an additional point to 19. Seaboard new common declined ½.

The close was dull. Sales—Bonds, $64,000; stock, 984 shares.

The Colorado Fuel and Iron Company.
Denver, Colorado, February 27, 1906.

The Colorado Fuel and Iron Company (successor by consolidation of the Colorado Fuel Company) hereby invites proposals in writing to be sent on or before April 5th, 1906, to the Metropolitan Trust Company of the City of New York (successor to Atlantic Trust Company as trustee,) at Number 49 Wall Street, in the City of New York, for the sale to it (for the sinking fund) of forty (40) of the now outstanding bonds of the said Colorado Fuel Company, known as its General Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds. Such sale to take effect and such bonds to be delivered and paid for on May 1st, 1906, at the office of the said Metropolitan Trust Company of the City of New York.

The Colorado Fuel and Iron Company,
By ALBERT A. MILLER, Treasurer.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Basic Pig and Forge Iron Still Weak—Rail Demand Increases.

The demand for foundry, basic pig, and gray forge iron has shown no signs of strength yet, notwithstanding the declines in prices. It seems to be the belief of purchasers that the quotations will go still lower. Trade advices attribute the weakness in basic iron to the record-breaking quantities of scrap iron coming into the market. The larger part of this supply may be traced to the railroads, which are retracking and improving equipment generally to an unprecedented extent.

Steel products continue to hold their strength. Steel rail orders now booked are estimated at 3,000,000 tons, and the demand is on the increase, according to trade authorities. The great number of mills running on rails has made a shortage in billets and bars embarrassing to the sheet plants in the West, which are hard pressed for material. Bridge material orders are still coming in from railroads, though it had been generally believed in the market that most of the users of these shapes had booked their contracts for the rest of the year.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 5.—Trading on the floor of the local Stock Exchange was dull and weak, with the arbitrage railroad shares showing the heaviest losses at the close. Reading, Lehigh Valley, and the United States Steel stocks furnished the bulk of the business, as well as the declines. The purely local issues, such as Philadelphia Electric, Philadelphia Rapid Transit, and Cambria Steel, were also weaker, but liquidation in them was less pronounced, and more evidence of support was noted in the closing hours.

Stockwell & Ensor May Dissolve.

Judge Truax of the Supreme Court has appointed Charles Bensel, Jr., receiver for the assets of the firm of Stockwell & Ensor, manufacturers of gas-heated pressing irons, with headquarters in Baltimore and branches in this city at 305 Mercer Street and in Chicago, in a suit brought by Charles A. Stockwell against William D. Ensor for a dissolution of the partnership on account of a disagreement between them. It is stated that the firm is perfectly solvent, and has assets largely in excess of the liabilities. They have been in business since 1880.

GEORGE A. TREADWELL MINING CO.
27 William Street, New York.
Mayer, Yavapai County, Arizona.
Capital Stock, $3,500,000.
Par Value of shares $10.

This Company has by far the largest property in one of the richest mining districts in the world. Its property is several times as large as that of its near neighbor, the famous United Verde, and seems to be just as rich. It has expended nearly one million dollars in the development and equipment of its property and uncovered ore bodies large enough to last longer than this generation of men can last, and rich enough to pay the most generous dividends.

It has erected and completed its smelting plant of 250 tons daily capacity, and a concentrating plant to go with it is now being installed. The two when fully completed and working together will have a capacity of five hundred tons a day.

There is ore in abundance to supply it and an average of 200% profit on all the ore worked.

Prices for the stock will be quoted on application.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

At the close of yesterday's trading the professional short interest in the market, by every indication, was larger than at any time previously in several months.

⁂

The bear party, reinforced by the cumulative pessimism carried over from the end of last week, resumed offensive operations immediately upon the opening yesterday. The selling movement converged at first upon a few stocks, notably Amalgamated Copper, Reading, and United States Steel. Besides Amalgamated, which was the principal target, all other "coppers" were very weak. United Copper had a bad half hour on the curb, breaking to 58½. Amalgamated Copper declined rather easily under pressure and touched par, the lowest price at which it has sold since the widely advertised "settlement"; Reading suffered a maximum decline of more than 8 points, touching 126⅜, the lowest quotation made since the collapse of the Kessler movement a few weeks ago at 164, and United States Steel common broke through 40 for the first time in many weeks. Last week Steel common appeared to be receiving support just above 40. It sold yesterday at 39⅛. These were the stocks in which the selling yesterday was most effective. Operations for the decline were greatly facilitated by genuine outside liquidation, due to the exhaustion of margins. There is reason to believe that the leaders of the bear movement, while continuing by every expedient within their resources to induce liquidation, took advantage of it to get their profits.

⁂

The active head of one of the largest wire houses in the Street went on record during the forenoon with the following opinion: "There seems to be a good-sized crop of bears in the New York stock market. They talk bad money, labor troubles, legislation, political troubles abroad, &c., and have frightened the average speculative holders out of a great part of their stocks. In addition to this, there is undoubtedly a considerable short interest, which is growing every day. While there is nothing in sight to give us a big sustained advance in the immediate future, stocks look to me to be somewhere near bottom. The average commission house has decreased its loans from one-third to one-half since January. We will probably have a traders' market for the time being, but we would keep off the short side and pick up some of the good stocks on the drives."

⁂

Not only have commission houses reduced their margined lines heavily since the end of the January boom, but their clients are beginning now to trade on the bear side, and, whereas a few weeks ago they hailed reactions with delight and bought stocks whenever they were weak, they now regard each rally as an intervention of Providence and make haste to sell stocks when they are strong. In fact, the superficial kind of trading sentiment which may be encountered in brokers' offices seems in danger of becoming as much biased toward the bear side as it was toward the bull side in the latter part of January.

⁂

The House of Twelve Partners was confidently supposed to be the principal source of bearish inspiration. It was said to be pounding Amalgamated Copper and Reading. About 2 o'clock it was rumored that John W. Gates had turned bullish. The rank and file of bear traders must have been taken greatly by surprise. There was some doubt about it until Mr. Gates, shortly before the close of the market, authorized an expression of opinion with himself, declaring that in his judgment stocks had gone down enough for the time being, and adding that he had detected some very good buying during the day. Traders will doubtless wait to see the market begin to recover before they take it for truth that the Gates crowd has turned again.

⁂

Perhaps the most encouraging feature of the market yesterday from the point of view of a hopeful trader was the support extended to Union Pacific. That stock was the medium of a very pretty contest. It sold again at 149⅛, as it did several times last week, and stopped there because somebody seemed willing to buy the whole capital at that quotation. It rallied in the last hour to 150⅝, and closed at 150. It has been heavily sold by bearish speculators in the last few days, and there is probably a good-sized short interest in it. The buying on a scale down has been much stronger, brokers say, than the selling, and their opinion is confirmed by the actions of the stock under pressure. So far the bear crowd has been unable to make any headway with it below 150. It looks cheap under 150, as a 6 per cent. security behind which are the enormous profits realized from the company's liquidation of its Hill stocks. Efforts to cover short contracts below 150 yesterday invariably caused the price to recover abruptly. After the quotation of 149⅛ it sold immediately at 149½, and whereas in declining it moved always in eighths there were frequently differences on the other side of as much as ⅜ per cent. between transactions, showing the scarcity of stock when anybody began to bid for it.

⁂

Mr. Hill is expected to return some time this week to smooth out the ore deal. Since his abrupt departure from Wall Street at a critical stage of the negotiations there have been exchanges of a more amiable nature than those which marked the temporary shelving of the matter, and it is doubtful if he would have consented to cut short his vacation and return unless assured that the business had been well lubricated in his absence. This last break in the market started on the tidings that the ore deal was off; possibly before the end of the week traders will gather in little groups around the tickers, singing: "On again, off again, on again, Finnigan."

⁂

When rumors of trouble begin to circulate it is often a sign that the bear crowd is getting in its finest strokes. Yesterday's rumors touching certain firms, especially one very prominent speculative house, were undoubtedly false, and those referring to individuals were probably much exaggerated. There is now a well-known operator on the bear side of the market whose activities in that direction are almost invariably accompanied by such rumors. This is doubtless a mere coincidence, but it leads to a certain association of ideas in the minds of Wall Street people.

⁂

The position of the Heinze crowd in Amalgamated Copper is as much a matter of conjecture as it was a week after the culmination of the advance at 118 on the announcement of the "settlement." Mr. Heinze's loyal followers assert that he took profits at higher prices on his speculative line of Amalgamated, and also that he got his crowd out well above 110. There is nobody who can deny this statement of an alleged fact, but it does not agree precisely with information from other sources. Lately the individuals of the Butte contingent have seemed to be trading more or less on their own opinions. Some have been short of Amalgamated. As an aggregation they have presented recently a somewhat chastened mien, but that might as well be due to the declines that have occurred in United Copper and Bingham as to anything that has happened in Amalgamated. From its extreme high point United Copper has suffered even a greater decline than Amalgamated Copper. One has declined 20 points and the other 18. Bingham also, the Boston stock with which the whole Butte crowd loaded up at higher prices, has had a bad fall. But none of this gives any clue to Mr. Heinze's position in Amalgamated. A good deal of yesterday's selling was attributed to him or his immediate circle of henchmen, but that was only a guess. From the way in which the Butte men have been talking on Amalgamated lately it could hardly be supposed that they were still loaded up with it. They have said openly that they were out of it, that Mr. Heinze got them out, and nobody has believed them, possibly because they were telling the truth. There has been a theory in the Street that the old Amalgamated Copper crowd, after having made a "settlement" with Heinze, would dig a pit for him in the stock market. Heinze must have known that the stock market was full of holes, especially for him, and his reputation for shrewdness would suffer if it were ever discovered that he walked into one.

⁂

There was not as much Amalgamated Copper for sale yesterday at 100 as might have been expected. The bear crowd failed to make it sell at 99⅞. It closed at 100⅞. Stop orders were uncovered all the way down from 104, and there probably were a good many more just below par, which made it seem all the more surprising that a vigorous effort was not made to break it through that price.

⁂

A sudden rise of more than 4 points in National Lead in the afternoon, with the other market all weak, was regarded by many traders as a defiance from the Guggenheim crowd. The stock closed at an advance of 3⅝ points. The group of stocks to which National Lead belongs has been under pressure for several days.

⁂

The market closed at an irregular and unconvincing recovery from its lowest prices, and was comparatively dull in the last half hour.

TO SUPPORT MERGER ISSUES.

A Practical Underwriting of Interborough Metropolitan Securities.

Arrangements are being made, it was learned yesterday, to support the new Interborough Metropolitan Securities in a manner which, in Wall Street's estimation, will amount practically to a formal underwriting of the new securities. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and other banking houses, it is learned, have been requested to participate in this plan, but no information could be had from these sources in regard to the details of the matter. At the office of August Belmont & Co., it was learned that no underwriting syndicate for the new traction securities was being formed, which suggests that the plan is being carried out in an informal manner.

There has been much curiosity in the financial district regarding the manner in which the market for these new stocks would finally be established. The first information on the subject following the announcement of the plan for the merger of the several traction companies was that an underwriting syndicate, including August Belmont & Co., J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and other leading houses would be formed to underwrite the new common stock at 60. Following this came the announcement made officially that the plan for forming an underwriting syndicate had been abandoned owing to the willingness of strong interests to purchase large amounts of the new common stock at a price above the quotations prevailing at that time. Now comes the news that at least an informal underwriting has been arranged.

The Belmont interests, it was recalled yesterday, some time ago sent letters to several Wall Street houses outlining the attitude of the controlling interests in the Interborough-Metropolitan Company toward the market for the new securities. It may be that these letters had some reference to the informal underwriting which is now being arranged. The general understanding in the financial district, however, is that the present plan is something entirely new.

At present, the market for the new Interborough Metropolitan securities, quoted when issued, is about 52 for the common, 87½ for the preferred, and 90¼ for the bonds. These prices represent declines of from 8 to 10 points from the figures quoted for the new securities in the first few days of trading. In the interval the amount of new common stock issued for the old securities was increased by 10 per cent. of the original offer.

WOULD SELL STEEL PLANT.

Stockholders of Tide Water Company Think This a Good Time.

Stockholders of the Tide Water Steel Company have received circulars from committees of the common and preferred stock with a view to pooling their holdings and disposing of the plant, which has been idle for two years. Under conditions prevailing in the steel industry before the closing of the plant at Chester, Penn., the concern was operating at a loss, and it was decided to shut down. Like most of the steel plants on the seaboard the Tide Water Steel Company used ores imported from Cuba, and its principal business was the manufacture of steel products for export, on which drawbacks of the duty on the imported ores were allowed.

The past year has been the most prosperous the steel industry has ever known, and the holders of Tide Water Steel Company stock who have organized the pooling committees deem it an advantageous time to do something with the plant. There is a debt of about $200,000 on the property coming due within the next eight months which, as the committee of the common stockholders points out, will wipe out the equity of the common stock if forced by the creditors.

The company is capitalized at $1,500,000 common and $600,000 preferred stock. The committee of common stockholders, composed of Charles T. Schoen, C. E. Stafford, and Alexander J. Hemphill, invites the deposit of stock with the Guaranty Trust Company. Frederick J. Lisman, Sidney H. March, and J. M. Ceballos, acting for the preferred stockholders, have named the Knickerbocker Trust Company as depository.

No Countervailing Duty on Canadian Pulp Wood—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Somerville, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday sustained a claim filed by O. C. Dane of Newport, Vt., regarding the classification of wood pulp exported from the Province of Quebec by the Lake Megantic Pulp Company of Canada. It was decided that pulp wood cut on private lands in the Dominion, as distinguished from Crown lands, is not subject to a countervailing duty of 25 cents a cord. The Government's contention was dismissed and the importer's claim upheld.

Other importers who objected to the countervailing duty on wood pulp, and who filed protests which were sustained, included F. W. Myers & Co., Plattsburg N. Y.; A. S. Beggs & Co., Port Huron, Mich., and the Central Vermont Railway Company, Burlington, Vt.

The board partially sustained a protest filed by Ventuar Blanco of Philadelphia.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, APPELLATE DIVISION, First Department.—In the matter of the application of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners for the City of New York for the appointment of three Commissioners to determine and report whether a rapid transit railway or railways for the conveyance and transportation of persons and property, as determined by the Board, ought to be constructed and operated.—GERARD AVENUE ROUTE.

Public notice is hereby given that pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, the undersigned Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners will apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the First Judicial Department at a term thereof to be held at the Appellate Division Court House, Madison Avenue and 25th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 9th day of March, 1906, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of three Commissioners in the above-entitled matter to determine and report after due hearing whether a railway or railways in the said city for the transportation of persons and property ought to be constructed and operated. The papers upon which the aforesaid application will be made are the petition of the said Board, dated the 28th day of December, 1905, and the affidavits and papers accompanying the same, all of which were filed in the office of the Clerk of said Appellate Division on or about the 9th day of February, 1906, and in addition thereto such other papers as shall be presented to the Court by the said Board.

A description of the route and the general plan of construction of the said railway or railways forms part of the papers filed as aforesaid with the said Clerk of the Appellate Division. The following is a brief and substantial synopsis of the said route in the County of New York: In the Borough of The Bronx: East 138th Street, from Third Avenue to Walton Avenue, and Gerard Avenue, from 138th Street to Jerome Avenue near Clarke Place.

The object of the aforesaid application is to obtain the appointment of Commissioners who shall determine, after public hearing of all parties interested, whether such railway or railways ought to be constructed and operated, and shall report the evidence taken to said Appellate Division, together with a report of their determination, which report, if in favor of the construction and operation of such railway or railways (as this Board will ask that it shall be) shall, when confirmed by said Court, be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners along the line of said railway or railways.

Dated New York, February 15th, 1906.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, APPELLATE DIVISION, First Department.—In the matter of the application of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners for the City of New York for the appointment of three commissioners to determine and report whether a rapid transit railway or railways for the conveyance and transportation of persons and property as determined by the Board ought to be constructed and operated.—Brooklyn & Manhattan Loop Lines, Manhattan Route.

Public notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, the undersigned Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners will apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the First Judicial Department, at a term thereof to be held at the Appellate Division Court House, Madison Avenue and 25th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 9th day of March, 1906, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of three commissioners in the above entitled matter to determine and report after due hearing whether a railway or railways in the said city for the transportation of persons and property ought to be constructed and operated. The papers upon which the aforesaid application will be made are the petition of the said board dated the 8th day of January, 1906, and the affidavits and papers accompanying the same, all of which were filed in the office of the Clerk of said Appellate Division on or about the 9th day of February, 1906, and in addition thereto such other papers as shall be presented to the Court by the said Board.

A description of the route and general plan of construction of the said railway or railways forms part of the papers filed as aforesaid with the said Clerk of the Appellate Division. The following is a brief and substantial synopsis of the said route in the County of New York:

In the Borough of Manhattan: From the Williamsburg Bridge the route passes underground in Delancey Street, near Norfolk, and then runs west under Delancey Street to the Bowery, and under the proposed extension of Delancey Street to the corner of Centre and Grand Streets. The line then continues southerly through Centre Street and William Street.

Provision is made for three tunnels, which may be described as the Old Slip Tunnel, the Maiden Lane Tunnel, and the Beekman Street Tunnel.

The route of the Old Slip Tunnel is under William Street and Old Slip.

The Maiden Lane Tunnel begins at the corner of William Street and Liberty Street, and then passes under Maiden Lane.

The Beekman Street Tunnel passes under Beekman Street.

Each of these three tunnels passes under the East River to the easterly boundary of the County of New York.

There are several spurs forming a part of this route. One spur begins at Grand and Centre Streets in Manhattan, and runs west under Grand Street and Desbrosses Street to the Desbrosses Street ferry. Another spur forms a connection, by means of a line under Canal Street, with the Manhattan end of the Manhattan Bridge. A third connects with the City Hall loop of the present subway by means of a line under Beekman Street.

The object of the aforesaid application is to obtain the appointment of commissioners who shall determine after public hearing of all parties interested whether such railway or railways ought to be constructed and operated, and shall report the evidence taken to said Appellate Division, together with a report of their determination, which report, if in favor of the construction and operation of such railway or railways, (as this Board will ask that it shall be,) shall, when confirmed by said Court, be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners along the line of said railway or railways.

Dated New York, February 15, 1906.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Consumers of copper who have been holding off for a lower market are beginning to make inquiries for their necessities after expiration of present contracts, many of which end this month. Buying has begun on a large scale, and, as was generally expected in the trade, when no considerable falling off in prices occurred in last month's lull, prices have sharply advanced. Should foreign buyers come into the market as heavily as in the early Winter the trade looks for record prices for all grades of the metal.

Prices on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday reflected the new activity of the market, and advances were recorded of from ⅛ to ¼ cent in the bid and of from ⅛ to ½ cent in the asking prices.

Both spot copper and futures rose [illegible]s. 6d. in the London market yesterday over the closing prices of Friday, each gaining 5s. of the advance on the day's trading. Prices at the close were: Spot, £79 15s. and futures £78 5s. The sales were: Spot, 350 tons; futures, 400 tons.

The closing prices of copper and other metals on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of Friday:

	Monday. Bid.	Monday. Asked.	Friday. Bid.	Friday. Asked.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

NOAH FRIEDBERG.—Noah Friedberg, salesman, residing at 128 East Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $8,624 and nominal assets $5,727 in outstanding accounts from sixty customers which Mr. Friedberg thinks are uncollectible. The debts were contracted in 1903 in the jewelry business. The largest creditors are Asher L. Germansky, $3,450, a former partner, and Herman J. Dietz, $1,200.

JEAN B. C. BALME.—Jean Baptist Clement Balme, hairdresser of 349 Eighth Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $4,200 and no assets. He filed the petition to get rid of $450 liability on a lease of rooms formerly occupied by him. He began business five years ago. Joseph A. Balme of Nimes, France, is the largest creditor, $3,600 for money lent.

ELWOOD W. VINE.—Elwood W. Vine, clerk, residing at 407 West 145th Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $1,494 and no assets. The debts were contracted in Albany prior to Jan. 1, 1898, when he was a dealer in sporting goods.

THE ARENA COMPANY.—The Arena Company, restaurant, 39 West Thirty-first Street, against which a creditors' petition in bankruptcy was filed on Nov. 15, has made a settlement with creditors at about 40 cents on the dollar, which composition was confirmed by Judge Holt in the United States District Court yesterday. The terms of the composition are part cash, part in notes, and the balance to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the capital stock of the Arena Company to F. A. Archambault for $50,000, from which is to be deducted $20,000 to Mr. Muschenheim to liquidate his chattel mortgage.

GREENSTEIN & HIRSCH.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Francis F. Griffin receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of Greenstein & Hirsch, builders, of 55 East 117th Street, and fixed his bond at $2,000. They own 16 to 20 East 103d Street, foreclosure suits are pending against them, and a receiver has been appointed in the Supreme Court to collect the rents.

BAUMAN-JOHNSON COMPANY.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court yesterday dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed on Feb. 13 against the Bauman-Johnson Company, which has a department store in Toledo, Ohio. Otto Horwitz, attorney for the company, informed the court that all the creditors would be paid in full.

MORRIS LATZKO.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has denied a discharge from bankruptcy to Morris Latzko, who did business as the National Liquor Supply Company at 1,698 Third Avenue, against whom a creditors' petition in bankruptcy was filed on Jan. 21, 1903. His liabilities were $19,579 and assets $375.

JONES ELECTRIC MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—The Jones Electric Manufacturing Company, manufacturer of electric specialties, of 33 to 37 Bethune Street, made an assignment yesterday to Daniel W. Sloan. The company was incorporated in May, 1904, with a capital stock of $50,000, and Edwin C. Smith is President. The company manufactured telegraph instruments, but has not done much business for some time past.

Out of Town.

FRANKLIN, Penn.—Gen. Charles Miller yesterday filed an application for a receiver for the General Manifold Company, makers of carbons and manifold paper, and also asked for an injunction restraining officers and employes from operating the concern. Judge Criswell will act on the application to-morrow. The plant is capitalized at $4,000,000 and employs 200 men. Gen. Miller claims the plant has never operated at a profit and has an indebtedness of over $900,000, of which $291,000 is due to himself.

Discharges from Bankruptcy.

Judge Holt, in the United States District Court yesterday, granted discharges to these bankrupts:

SULLIVAN & DUNN, wholesale hats, 39 East Twelfth Street; liabilities, $61,752.

GEORGE J. REESSING, 230 West 107th Street, formerly President of the United States Stables; liabilities, $53,773.

ISIDOR MICHELSON, manufacturer jewelry, formerly 41 John Street; liabilities, $52,864.

HENRY S. CATES, 18 West 135th Street; liabilities, $2,870.

WILLIAM A. LATHROP, grocer, City Island; liabilities, $3,408.

HENRY MEALES, clerk, 1,348 Fifth Avenue, formerly paints and wall paper; liabilities, $2,865.

MORRIS ROBINSON, 145 East 111th Street; liabilities, $16,848.

FREDERICK WILLIAMS, liquors, 2,454 Eighth Avenue; liabilities, $11,175.

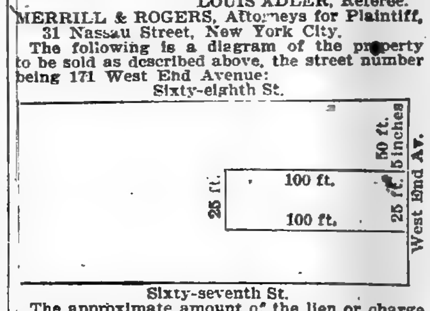
REFEREES' NOTICES.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY of New York.—MARY J. LASALA, plaintiff, against BERNICE D. EMERSON and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the 2d day of February, 1906, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the fourteenth day of March, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Samuel Goldsticker, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the building thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the westerly side of West End Avenue, distant fifty (50) feet five (5) inches southerly from the corner formed by the intersection of the southerly side of Sixty-eighth Street with the westerly side of West End Avenue; thence running westerly, parallel with said Sixty-eighth Street, part of the way through a party wall, one hundred (100) feet; thence southerly, parallel with West End Avenue, twenty-five (25) feet; thence easterly, again parallel with Sixty-eighth Street and part of the way through another party wall, one hundred (100) feet to the westerly side of West End Avenue, and thence northerly along said side of West End Avenue twenty-five (25) feet to the point or place of beginning.—Dated New York, February 17, 1906.
LOUIS ADLER, Referee.
MERRILL & ROGERS, Attorneys for Plaintiff, 31 Nassau Street, New York City.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold as described above, the street number being 171 West End Avenue:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is Twenty-two thousand two hundred nineteen 68-100 dollars, with interest thereon from the 19th day of January, 1906, together with costs and allowance amounting to three hundred and twelve 39-100 dollars, with interest from 5th day of February, 1906, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of taxes, assessments, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee, is four hundred dollars and interest.

Said premises are to be sold subject to a first mortgage of seventeen thousand dollars, on which there remains unpaid the sum of fifteen thousand five hundred dollars, principal, and interest at 5% from the 1st day of December, 1905.—Dated New York, February 17th, 1906.

THROUGH RATES DENIED RIVAL FALL RIVER LINE

Enterprise Company Complains to Commerce Commission.

RAILROADS' EXCUSES HEARD

Say They Have All Business They Can Attend To—Chairman Knapp Overrules Objection to Inquiry.

Trunk lines out of New York have refused to make through freight rate arrangements with the Enterprise Transportation Company, and the company is seeking to compel them to make terms. The Enterprise Line runs to Fall River in competition with the Fall River Line, which is controlled by the New Haven Railroad. David Whitcomb, President and attorney of the Enterprise Company, told the Interstate Commerce Commission about his troubles in the Federal Building yesterday. Commissioners Knapp and Prouty were present.

Nearly all the big railroads had their lawyers there. Edward G. Buckland appeared for the New Haven Road and the Fall River Line, George S. Patterson for the Pennsylvania, C. C. Paulding for the New York Central, Mr. Whiting for the Lackawanna, Vice President George F. Brownell for the Erie, and Frank H. Platt for the Lehigh Valley.

All these lines, and one or two more, have through rates to the West in connection with the Fall River Line. Letters asking them to give the same rates to the Enterprise Company met with refusals, generally, without explanation.

The Enterprise's local rates between New York and Fall River are considerably lower than the Fall River Line's. The company was incorporated last year and began operations in June. The General Manager told the commission yesterday that eighty-five of the ninety-two cotton mills in Fall River were shipping by his boats.

President Whitcomb said he wanted equality of treatment. The New England Navigation Company, the corporate name of the Fall River Line, could get a through rate to the West, he said, from 10 to 13 cents lower than his company.

When the Enterprise officers had testified as to the attempts and failures to get this rate and the lawyers had sparred for a long time, several traffic managers were called by Chairman Knapp. First came Freight Traffic Manager Dixon of the Pennsylvania.

"Why was it that you refused to accede to the request of the Enterprise Transportation Company?" asked Chairman Knapp.

"We don't see how the arrangement would give us enough tonnage to make it worth while," said Mr. Dixon, "and it would be the cause of a great deal of physical inconvenience. Our Jersey City freight terminal is crowded to its utmost capacity now. We have through rate arrangements with no steamship line going to New England except the Fall River and with no Hudson River line except the Murray Line. We declined to make arrangements with others, among them the Metropolitan Steamship Company and the Port Chester."

Fred. L. Pomeroy, Freight Traffic Manager of the New York Central, said: "We didn't want to make the arrangement; we have such a one only with the Fall River and the Savannah lines. We would rather give up these than to make a new one. If it got started there would be nowhere to stop it. We have hardly room enough at our piers now to handle the regular business from our steamship connections."

T. N. Jarvis, Freight Traffic Manager of the Lehigh Valley, said: "We've been getting these applications from different companies for a long time. The proposed arrangements were of no advantage to us and we've paid little attention to them. I haven't thought much about one until I heard of this hearing."

Vice President Brownell of the Erie asked several times what his road was accused of, what section of the Inter-State Commerce act it was accused of violating. Chairman Knapp admitted that there had been no violation of law, but he said it was a proper case for the commission to consider. There will be further evidence before any decision is made.

GOLD MINE IN BROADWAY.

It's Not a Very Rich One, but It's the Real Thing.

There's a miniature gold mine within two blocks of Wall Street. Gold and silver, too, have been got out at 176 Broadway, and some of it may be seen put up in little bottles on the desk of Horace Anderson of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, 146 Broadway.

This company is putting up a skyscraper at No. 176, and is equipping it with a "plunger" elevator. The shaft, on which this is supported, must run as far below the ground as the building extends above it, and a shaft 180 feet deep has been sunk. Among the foremen of the Thompson-Starrett Company, the contractors for the building, is Samuel C. Pyle, whose tastes run to geology. He has for some time collected specimens of the rock on which Manhattan stands and analyzed them in a little laboratory he has set up at his own home.

When the drills reached a depth of about 165 feet they encountered quartz and hornblende. Mr. Pyle had discovered traces of gold already in rock from the East River tunnel, and was at once on the watch. He pulled out a microscope he always has with him and discovered evidences of precious metals.

He took some specimens home and crushed the rock. He obtained gold, silver, and lead, and when he had separated them he found that twenty pounds of rock had assayed about $2.50 of gold and $1 of silver.

"No, we do not intend to go into the gold-mining business," said Mr. Anderson at the Title Guarantee and Trust Company yesterday afternoon, as he handed out the new-found treasure for inspection. "Of course, you can find gold almost anywhere," explained Charles Weller, foreman bricklayer for the contracting firm, "if you only go deep enough. We found copper pyrites before we struck pay rock, and there are mica and garnets in the granite also. The trouble about the gold-bearing strata is that the lode is very much broken. You come across a foot with gold, silver, and lead, and then you get right through it and only find a little color.

"The specimens Mr. Pyle examined were of course picked, and he even says he has found gold in the dust from the tops of buildings in this part of New York. Well, every man should have his hobby, and I reckon we'll go right along building and never worry about the pay rock we are trampling beneath our feet."

BREWERS FIGHT LIQUOR BILL.

Delegation Will Oppose Local Option Measure at Albany.

Arrangements have been made by the New York State Brewers' Association to send a big delegation from all sections of the State to Albany on Thursday to oppose the Tully-Wainwright Local Option bill. Committees of the Senate and Assembly will hold a joint hearing on the measure, which is drawn to permit the residents of any district to declare against saloons in their district, and thus to prevent the selling of liquor there.

William Forster, attorney for the association in this city, will make the chief argument against the measure. Mr. Forster has prepared a memorial which he will file with Gov. Higgins and the committees against the bill. In it he will declare against the evils of some so-called "Raines law hotels," and will pledge the association to use its best efforts to stamp out such places. The memorial states that the brewers have a capital of $140,000,000 invested in the State, and that there are some 600,000 persons dependent on the liquor trade in New York State. These include the employes of the breweries, malting trade, cooperage industry, the saloons, and the makers of wagons and harness for the breweries.

The memorial states that the output of the State breweries is nearly one-fourth of the total output of the breweries of the United States. Last year the breweries of the country produced 49,459,540 barrels of malt liquor, and of that total the New York State breweries produced 11,060,407 barrels. These facts are produced to show that any unfair treatment of the brewing interests by the Legislature would result in great injury to many citizens and to a large industry.

DAMAGED FLATS SHORED UP.

Harlem Tenants, Who Camped Out After Wall's Fall, Go Back.

It was moving day at 122 East 103d Street yesterday and two policemen from the East 104th Street Station stood guard in the marble hall of the building to see that the fleeing tenants did not get their household belongings and their children tangled.

A thirty-foot retaining wall in the rear of the building had crashed into the lower floors on Sunday night and there seemed danger of parts of the flat houses on 102d Street coming down upon the 103d Street buildings.

The families rushed from the house and spent the night in a vacant residence across the street or with friends in the neighborhood. More than 75 persons camped out in this way and many of the menfolk had no sleep at all as they feared thieves would get into their partly wrecked flats. Two men, John Boyce of 79 East 109th Street and George Harris of 132 East Ninety-sixth Street, were arrested yesterday while trying to enter one of the apartments on the plea that they had been ordered to put up a clothes line. Each was sentenced to three months in jail on suspicion of being a sneak thief.

Last night the building had been shored up and the tenants who wished to were permitted to sleep therein. As the fire escapes in the rear had been partly destroyed some difficulty was experienced in getting this permission.

SUNDAY LAW HIS DEFENSE.

Dog Trainer Pleads It When Sued for Violation of His Contract.

Hurtig & Seamon, theatrical managers, have begun a suit in the Supreme Court to recover $1,000 from Edgar Merian, which they allege he forfeited by failing to keep his contract with them to have his troupe of trained dogs appear at their theatre in 125th Street. They allege that he was to appear with his dogs in the week beginning Sept. 11, 1905, and that he was to receive $500. They declare that the dogs did not appear at this theatre on that date, but did appear at the Colonial Music Hall, when their owner had agreed not to exhibit above Fifty-ninth Street except at Hurtig & Seamon's.

Merian sets up as a defense that the contract was null and void for the reason that if the dogs had appeared on the date mentioned in it the Sunday law would have been violated.

TO DISCUSS PRIMARY LAWS.

National Conference Assembles To-day —Oscar S. Straus to Speak.

The second National conference to discuss the reform of the primary election laws, under the auspices of the National Civic Federation, will begin its sessions this morning at 10 o'clock in the rooms of the Board of Trade and Transportation, at 203 Broadway.

The sessions will be opened with an address by Oscar S. Straus, and during the two days of the meeting the subjects discussed will include the primary laws, the election laws, with special reference to the form of the ballot, and the Corrupt Practices act, as now in force in the various States, with proposed modifications. A number of papers will be read by members of Congress and representatives of political and civic organizations throughout the country.

SAY ICE CROP IS AMPLE DESPITE GLOOMY TALK

Outside Observers Contradict President Oler of the Trust.

RISE IN PRICE THE OBJECT

President Oler Himself Says It Is Just Possible That Maine May Save the Day.

Notwithstanding detailed reports from along the Upper Hudson that the ice crop there this Winter is almost normal, officers of the American Ice Company in New York maintain that the supply next Summer will be short and that higher prices will be demanded.

Statements which reached New York yesterday from Albany and various points in Maine told that various ice houses along the Hudson held almost the usual crop, or approximately 3,000,000 tons of ice, 900,000 of which were left over from last year; that there was plenty of ice to be had in Maine for from 75 cents to $1.25, and added that the American Ice Company was intentionally keeping many of its ice houses empty in order to account for a raise in price in the cities on the ground of a shortage in the crop.

Skippers of sailing vessels in yesterday said that Maine had gathered only two-thirds of her crop thus far and that the ice was of better quality than it had been in many years. One sailor from Maine said he recently saw enough ice in Green Lake alone to supply New York and two or three other States. A report from up the Hudson said that on an eight-mile stretch of the river from Four Mile Point just south of Coxsackie to Catskill, called Eithon's Reach, a dozen ice houses, some of them owned by the American Ice Company, contained 250,000 tons of ice. The report estimated that the total crop would fall but little short of the usual harvest on the river.

President Wesley M. Oler of the American Ice Company said yesterday that these reports were unreliable.

"I have our company's report here, just submitted, which shows that the ice crop harvested on the Hudson up to February 1 will aggregate 572,527 tons. The usual crop is approximately 4,000,000 tons. Judging from present conditions we'll not be able to get any more from the Hudson. The big rain of Saturday settled the question for this Winter. What little chance there was of getting more from the Hudson was destroyed by that rainfall.

"Of course," continued Mr. Oler, "Maine may yet save the situation. We are looking to her for relief but can't see much of it in sight thus far. It is not impossible that the conditions may yet be made normal, though it is not at all probable.

"Reports like these from the Hudson are made by persons who don't know what they're talking about. Our company's men there know as much about the situation as anybody, and when they report that the crop is short their word can be relied on as conclusive."

"Is the price of ice next Summer to be much higher than it was last year in New York?" was asked.

"It looks that way, doesn't it? That would certainly be the natural outcome, for with a small supply on hand and the usually great demand prices are almost sure to rise. Ice was 30 cents a hundred to the family trade in New York last Summer. That was a comparatively small figure. In Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other cities it was about 40 cents a hundred, and the records will show that New York almost every Summer gets her ice at a figure smaller than that paid in other cities.

"In former years, when there has been a shortage of the crop, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington have been obliged to pay as high as $1 a hundred for the family trade. But of course we can't predict now just what prices will be next Summer, for, as I have stated, Maine may yet come to the relief of the situation and fill in the deficiency.

"The company will do its best for New York. Some of the newspapers have attacked us, and I have sent word to the proprietor of one that the company will gladly furnish, free of charge, a fully equipped ice wharf on the East River from which ice can be served to the people in that section if he will accept it. I defy any man to accept such a proposition and succeed in furnishing ice at a price lower than that which will be asked by the American Ice Company."

19-STORY SKYSCRAPER SOLD.

Purchaser of $3,500,000 Lord's Court Building Withholds His Name.

The Lord's Court Building, a nineteen-story structure at the southwest corner of William Street and Exchange Place, has been sold by John T. Williams to a client of Broker Herbert A. Sherman. Mr. Sherman declined yesterday to disclose the name of the buyer of the property.

The building has been held at $3,500,000, and the present selling price is said to be close to that figure. On the tax assessment rolls the property is down at $2,400,000. It rents for nearly $300,000 a year.

Mr. Williams put up the structure about ten years ago, and subsequently increased its height to nineteen stories. On its Exchange Place side it adjoins the Broad Exchange Building, while the other three corners at William Street and Exchange Place are occupied by the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company's building, the old Custom House, and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad.

Lord's Court, from which the building takes its name, was originally an open space in the middle of the block, which, with some of the adjoining property, was owned by the Lord family early in the last century.

BUY FIFTH AVENUE HOUSES.

Tobacco Capitalists Make Purchases Near the Carnegie Mansion.

Williamson W. Fuller and Robert B. Dula, Directors in various tobacco companies, have bought from Builder John C. Umberfield the two six-story American basement dwellings 1,072 and 1,073 Fifth Avenue, between Eighty-eighth and Eighty-ninth Streets. L. J. Phillips & Co. negotiated the deal.

The properties were conveyed yesterday to Messrs. Fuller and Dula for nominal considerations, but it is understood that the houses have been held at about $300,000 each. The new owners will occupy them. Mr. Fuller is the buyer of No. 1,072 and Mr. Dula of No. 1,073.

The dwellings are two blocks south of the Carnegie mansion, and adjoining them to the north is a large plot at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighty-ninth Street, owned by William B. Leeds, upon which he is about to erect a handsome residence.

MRS. BRADY SUES AGAIN.

This Is the Third Trial of Her Suit for Divorce.

The third suit for divorce instituted within a year by Mrs. Sadie V. Brady, granddaughter of Isaac N. Singer, the sewing machine man, against Daniel M. Brady, President of the Brady Brass Goods Manufacturing Company, began before Justice Blanchard in Trial Term, Part II., of the Supreme Court, yesterday afternoon. In the other trials, heard in February and April, 1905, the juries disagreed. Miss Gertrude Mackenzie, an actress, was named in all three suits as the corespondent. Mrs. Brady did not appear yesterday.

Ex-Assistant District Attorney Rand appeared for Mrs. Brady, while the defendant was represented by John J. Adams and Martin W. Littleton. Three young men who had worked at Reisenweber's Circle Hotel testified that Brady had frequently called upon Miss Mackenzie there in 1904. They knew Brady as Mr. Burns, they declared.

John Heitman, who was the hotel detective at the Victoria in 1904, testified that the defendant had called upon the corespondent there, and that he also knew Brady as Burns.

The trial will be continued to-day. Thomas P. Wickes, who is now serving a term in the penitentiary for writing the "Lewis Jarvis" letters, represented Mrs. Brady at the two previous trials.

COLBY AS GRAFT PROBER.

Republican Leader Likely to be Counsel in Street Cleaning Inquiry.

Bainbridge Colby, who used to be counsel for the Equitable Life Assurance Society and for the Mercantile Trust Company, is likely to be the counsel for the Aldermanic Committee on Street Cleaning in its investigation of the Department of Street Cleaning under the Woodbury administration.

The committee met at the City Hall yesterday and discussed the names of five men for counsel, including Mr. Colby, ex-District Attorney William M. K. Olcott, Alexander V. Campbell, Job E. Hedges, and George W. Schurman, a partner of Charles E. Hughes. Mr. Colby was the choice of the majority. Alderman Brown talked with him, and a definite answer will be received from him this morning. The committee expects it to be favorable.

As soon as the question of counsel is definitely settled the committee will adjourn until March 14, to give the counsel time to go over the charges of graft in the department. On March 14 the taking of testimony will begin.

Mr. Colby is the Republican leader of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District, having succeeded Senator Elsberg. He is an anti-Odell man and a strong supporter of President Parsons of the County Committee.

SCHOOL BOARD CHANGES.

President Winthrop Names Mr. Wingate on the Examinations Committee.

President Winthrop of the Board of Education appointed Gen. George Wingate yesterday to the special Committee on Examinations, from which Mr. Winthrop resigned when he became the board's executive. This committee has submitted two reports exposing irregularities that have grown into the examination system.

City Superintendent Maxwell and its Chairman, Commissioner Man, have had several bitter disputes on the floor, and the work is by no means finished. It is expected that in the near future it will report many more extravagances in the system.

President Winthrop has appointed to special Committee on Supply Depository Commissioners Barry, Chairman; Aldcrofft, Barrett, Greene, Jonas, Renwick, and Wilbur.

Boys are so anxious to get off winter clothes, that their mothers are apt to get anxious.
So while we're ready now for boys who want Spring suits and mothers who just want to see Spring styles in boys' suits, we want to emphasize boys' Spring overcoats.
The most useful sort for boys, and so the most popular, is the tan covert coat.

CHARGES THE UNION WITH DYNAMITING

Man Who Had the Explosive Tells of a Plot.

HE PRETENDED TO HELP IT

But Was Acting for the Police—Ironworkers Say It's a Job to Discredit Them.

Assistant District Attorney Nott made known last night that the arrest of John Guthrie, Charles Moran, and Thomas Weir, ironmolders, on the night of Feb. 24 as they were about to dynamite the partly constructed Bliss building, at 304 East Twenty-third Street, came about through the revelation by Guthrie of a plot originating within the Housesmiths' Union to blow up the building.

Guthrie, Mr. Nott says, learned of the plot, informed the police and the contractors, and on their advice wormed himself into the confidence of the ironworkers' union to such an extent that he was delegated to help wreck the building. Through Guthrie, Mr. Nott says, the police learned the exact time at which the attempt was to be made and were thus able to catch the ironworkers with the dynamite on them.

The officers of the Housesmiths' Union deny Guthrie's charges and say that they are part of a conspiracy on the part of Post & McCord to damage the union. Post & McCord, the contractors who are erecting the Bliss Building, have had a series of troubles with the Housesmiths' Union, which has declared a strike against the contractors.

In consequence of Guthrie's statement Charles Moran of 62 Nelson Street, Jersey City, and Thomas Wier of 405 East Twenty-fourth Street, the men who were captured with him on the night of Feb. 24, were rearrested yesterday, having been indicted on charges of attempting to explode dynamite in a place where human life was endangered. Both men were held in $1,500 bail for trial by Judge O'Sullivan in the Court of General Sessions.

Joined the "Inner Circle."

Guthrie told the Grand Jury that when he learned of the plan of the iron workers to dynamite the Bliss Building he went to Post & McCord and told them what he had learned, and at the firm's advice, and at its expense, joined the Housesmiths' Union and became a member of the "inner circle."

After he had been a member of the union "for several weeks," he says, he was designated one of a committee of three, to consist of Moran, Wier, and himself, to dynamite the building in course of erection at 304 East Twenty-third Street.

When the details of the plot were settled Guthrie says he warned Post & McCord, and also the District Attorney. Inspector McLaughlin was notified at Police Headquarters late in the afternoon of Feb. 24 that the ironworkers were planning the explosion for that night. He laid his plans accordingly, and that night Detective Sergeant Dunn, with nine other Central Office men, went in disguise to Third Avenue and Twenty-third Street, where they saw the meeting of the ironworkers.

One of the three came out of a house at 405 East Twenty-fourth Street, carrying a satchel, and at Third Avenue and Twenty-third Street he was joined by two others. The three men walked east through Twenty-third Street to the ferry. In a sand pile midway between the recreation pier and the ferryhouse they buried a satchel after taking a package from it.

One of the men quickly placed the package under his coat, and walked briskly to Second Avenue, followed by his two companions. Wier, who had charge of the dynamite, the police say, retraced his steps until he came to the Post & McCord building. There he stood on watch.

Took the Dynamite.

Moran entered the yard back of the tenement house at 394 Second Avenue, which faces on the rear of the building, while Guthrie walked into the Bliss Building to see that the coast was clear. When Guthrie came out of the building the detectives saw him take a package from Weir. Then he re-entered the building.

The police say that Moran, who was in the yard in the rear of the Second Avenue tenement house, was about to give the signal to Guthrie that everything was all right, when two detectives fell on Moran and fought him into submission. Moran drew a blackjack and tried to fight the detectives, but he surrendered at the point of a revolver.

At about the same instant Guthrie and Weir were grabbed by the detectives. Both fought, but were quickly subdued. All three were landed safely in cells at Police Headquarters. A package containing twenty pounds of dynamite was found on Guthrie. There was a long fuse attached to the dynamite. The explosive was sent to the Bureau of Combustibles at Fire Headquarters. Fifteen pounds of dynamite were found in the sand pile where the satchel had been buried. This dynamite also had a fuse attached to it.

The detectives at Police Headquarters say that if the twenty pounds of dynamite had been exploded great havoc and possible loss of life would have resulted. On the block are several high tenement houses, the Columbia lodging house, and the Olive Tree Inn, while in the rear are several three-story private dwellings.

It was originally stated that the in-

FOR NON-PARTISAN JUDGES.

Plan for Lawyers to Choose Candidates Irrespective of Party.

A movement is to be launched next week among the lawyers of the city to take the nomination of judges out of politics, and to put forward for judicial offices next year men selected and indorsed by the legal fraternity without regard to the wishes of any political organization.

Ten eminent members of the bar of this city are to attend a dinner to be held next week. At this the condition of the judiciary will be considered and the best means of strengthening it will be canvassed from every point of view. In all probability a committee of twenty-five members of the Bar Association will be nominated at the dinner, and to these will be handed over further action in the matter.

Candidates are to be nominated for all the vacant Judgeships, and it is intended that the legal profession shall head a campaign in their favor as independent of all organization support as that which carried Mr. Jerome to victory last year.

It is probable that among those asked to the proposed dinner will be William G. Choate, William B. Hornblower, Austen G. Fox, Francis Lynde Stetson, Paul D. Cravath, and District Attorney Jerome.

Next November gives the legal profession an exceptional chance of nominating Supreme Court Justices after its own heart. The term of Justice Giegerich expires, and an appointment must be made to the place from which Justice Barrett recently retired, and to which Justice Clinch was temporarily named by Gov. Higgins, and there are six new Judgeships in the First Division created by the constitutional amendment of last Fall to be filled. In addition the term of Judge Cowing expires this year.

The feeling among lawyers that some action on their part is necessary has been growing for many years, but it was brought to a head by the incidents of the political campaign of last Fall. Justice Ingraham of the Appellate Division sought re-election, and his past record made him among lawyers an exceedingly popular candidate. He was, however, a Republican, and for a time it seemed that he would have no chance in the demoralized condition of his party. His friends, however, worked for him, the Bar Association passed strong resolutions about the matter, and in the end he received the nomination on both Republican and Democratic tickets.

It is likely that the Hearst men will also make judicial nominations next Fall. One of the candidates they have chosen already is Edward B. Whitney, who was an Assistant Attorney General under Mr. Cleveland's second administration.

MURDER AFTER HORSE DEAL.

James Sullivan Shoots Benjamin Weill Dead in His Williamsburg Office.

Benjamin Weill, a horse dealer, living at 278 Penn Street, Williamsburg, was shot and instantly killed last evening in his stables, at 247 North Seventh Street, by James Sullivan, of 831 Eleventh Avenue, Manhattan. Sullivan's wife saw the shooting.

The murder followed an argument about four horses which Sullivan had bought of Weill three weeks ago. One of the animals cost him $300, and soon afterward it was found to be afflicted with glanders. Sullivan went to the stables, in North Seventh Street, and demanded the money he had paid for the horse. Weill refused to reimburse him. The Department of Health learned of the condition of the horse and the animal was shot.

Last evening Sullivan, accompanied by his wife, went to the stables and met Weill in his office. With Weill was his bookkeeper, Benjamin Levy. Sullivan argued that it was only fair that he should be reimbursed. Then Mrs. Sullivan made a few remarks and Weill is alleged to have made a reply that Sullivan regarded as grossly insulting.

At any rate, Sullivan whipped out a 38-calibre revolver and, as Weill started to run, fired three shots. One of them struck Weill behind the right ear, and he fell on his face dead. Sullivan made no attempt to escape, but his wife became frightened and disappeared. Levy ran to the street and got Policeman Lloyd of the Bedford Avenue Station, who found Sullivan in the office with the revolver still in his hand.

Sullivan was taken to the Bedford Avenue Station, where he admitted the shooting. Capt. Pinkerton says he declared that he had come over from Manhattan expressly to kill Weill unless he was reimbursed for the loss of the horse.

"I bought the revolver in Eighth Avenue, near Fourteenth Street to-day, and came over here to kill Weill. He done me dirty, although I had paid him thousands of dollars for horses," said Sullivan. "He sold me a horse that had glanders and he knew it. I'm glad I killed him. He also insulted my wife. That was more than I could stand."

The prisoner has three children ranging in age from 4 to 12. Weill leaves a widow and one young child.

Mrs. Sullivan was arrested by detectives of the Bedford Avenue Station last night at her home in Manhattan. She said that she and her husband had got the worst of their dealings with Weill, whom they had paid $4,500 for horses and trucks. They owed him $450 on a note, which he pressed and they could not pay, even after they had sold their horses and trucks at public auction.

She had mortgaged her property to save her husband. When she told him this he became infuriated and said that he would get even with Weill. She begged him, she said, not to do any violence. The woman is held as a witness.

18,000-TON WARSHIPS.

The Example of England Is About to be Followed by Germany.

BERLIN, March 6.—The Appropriations Committee of the Reichstag, on which all the Parliamentary groups are represented, to-day approved, with a few dissenting Socialist votes, the Government's measure providing for the construction of six additional armored cruisers.

The committee also authorized an increase in the displacement of two battleships which are about to be laid down to 18,000 tons.

Admiralty Secretary von Tirpitz took part in the discussion, affirming that German shipping was in a dangerous situation, and that its protection in case of war should be increased.

Alluding to the launching of the British battleship Dreadnought, Admiral von Tirpitz said Germany was obliged to follow the lead of other powers in increasing the displacement of warships.

PARKER AND ANDREWS AS BANK INQUISITORS

Senate Committee Reports Bill Creating Them a Commission.

SURPRISE TO THE GOVERNOR

New Measure, Regarded as Attempt to Sidetrack the Investigation, Opposed by Stevens.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—What is declared to be an attempt to sidetrack the investigation into the conduct of the Banking Department and the official actions of Supt. Kilburn was made to-day in the Senate Committee on Finance, when, instead of reporting out any of the resolutions which it has held up since the beginning of the session, including the resolution adopted by the Assembly, it reported a bill taking the investigation of the department out of the hands of the Legislature and creating ex-Chief Judge Andrews and ex-Chief Judge Alton B. Parker of the Court of Appeals a commission to inquire into the operations of the banking law and do all those things which it has been sought to do by resolutions and through a joint committee of the Legislature.

The idea of the bill instead of the resolution originated with Senator Raines, and he rallied to his support six other members of the Finance Committee, including Senator Grady, the only Democrat who voted for it. Five members of the committee voted in the negative. These were Senators Hill, Stevens, Chairman Armstrong, Foley, and Keenan. Malby was absent. The action of Tammany Senator Grady in voting to put Judge Parker on the commission, after the opposition of Tammany Hall to Judge Parker's nomination, cast an interesting sidelight on the procedure.

When the measure comes out of committee to-morrow on the floor of the Senate the debate on it can be strung out to an interminable length. Then will follow amendments and further references back to the committee before the measure gets to the Assembly, in which body it is generally conceded that it has not the slightest chance of passage. But even under those circumstances it must go to the Assembly committee, and with proper steering there can be a lot more amendments and recommittals, so that if the session were prolonged far into the Summer the bill would still be under discussion.

It was evident to-day that the reporting of the bill came as a surprise to the Governor.

"A bill?" he asked, when told of the action of the committee. "If that is the case it gives me a chance to have something to say in the matter, doesn't it?"

When Senator Raines was asked if the bill embodied his ideas or was a reflection of the wishes of the Governor, he smiled and refused to make any statement.

That the bill will give rise to a heated debate in the Senate to-morrow there is no doubt. Senator Stevens, who, with Armstrong and Raines, is the big man of the Finance Committee, is violently opposed to it, and his effort to have reported out his resolution calling for a similar investigation was voted down by the same vote as that by which the bill was accepted instead. When asked his views on the measure, Senator Stevens said:

"The Superintendent of Banks has asked for an investigation, and the resolution of the Assembly was broad enough to accomplish the purpose for which it was intended. The Finance Committee, however, has suppressed this and my resolution for an investigation.

"I believe the Legislature should do its own investigating, and not get outsiders to do the work. I also doubt if the Legislature has authority to delegate its powers, and whether the newly named commission has any power to summon witnesses and compel their attendance. Anyway, it won't be a satisfactory investigation. What we want is one that will be unhampered by any limitations."

Following is the text of the bill:

"An Act to provide for a commission to inquire into the operation of the banking law of the State, the administration thereof by the State Banking Department, and the expediency of revising or amending such law and making an appropriation for the purpose of said commission.

"Section 1—Charles Andrews and Alton B. Parker are hereby created a commission whose duty it shall be to inquire into the operation of the banking law, the administration thereof by the State Banking Department, and the manner in which State inspection and supervision have been conducted of banks, trust companies, and other institutions and individuals subject to such inspection and supervision, and also to consider the practicability of revising or amending the banking law so as to better protect depositors and stockholders from loss. Said commission shall in addition have power to take the evidence and proofs in any case of charges or complaints against the Superintendent of Banks or the Banking Department which the Governor may refer to it, and shall report with its findings to the Governor with all convenient speed. Said commission shall from time to time, and at the earliest moment practicable, report to the Legislature the result of its investigaions, together with bills to carry out the recommendations of the commission in regard to the revision or amendments of the banking law of the State. Any vacancy in said commission may be filled by the Governor.

"Section 2—Said commission is hereby authorized and empowered to require and enforce the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ such assistants as may be necessary for the purpose of its investigation and report.

"Section 3—The members of said commission shall not receive a salary, but each shall be entitled to his actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of his duties under the provision of this act, and to a reasonable compensation therefor to be approved by the Governor.

"Section 4—The sum of $10,000 or as much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid by the State Treasurer on the audit and warrant of the Controller, to carry out the purposes of this act.

"Section 5—This act shall take effect immediately."

Senator Stevens to-night announced his intention to bring in a minority report which will be a modified form of the Assembly resolution. As it passed the Assembly the resolution for a banking investigation provided for the appointment of a select committee from the membership of the Senate and Assembly Committees on Banks. The minority report will provide that the select committee shall be taken from the membership of the Assembly and Senate at large. As Chairman of the Committee on Banks of the Senate Mr. Stevens does not desire that there shall be any impression that he seeks a place on any investigating committee.

Senator Foley announced that he would support such minority report, and he will thus take issue with the minority leader, Mr. Grady, who favored the committee bill.

STRIKING TENANTS TRIUMPH.

They Hang Out Flags of Victory When Dispossess Suits Fail.

Tenants from the row of apartment houses at 90 to 100 Cook Street, who resisted their landlords when they raised rents, were brought before Magistrate Walsh in dispossess proceedings in the Fourth Municipal Court, Williamsburg, yesterday. They had assembled in front of their homes and marched to the Court House. When the Magistrate dismissed the cases on the ground that the papers were defective some of the tenants made a demonstration. As the tenants left the courtroom they picked up their attorney, Harry Howard Dale, and carried him out of the building.

The tenants marched back to the flats, which they decorated with flags and put out signs reading "Victory Is Ours."

It was said last night that the new owners of the houses would resort to other legal means to-day to evict the tenants.

INTRUDER STABS GIRL.

Miss Cahill Strangely Attacked for the Second Time in a Month.

The police of the Bronx are looking for a stranger who twice within three weeks has attacked seventeen-year-old Margaret Cahill in her home at 1,401 Webster Avenue. The second attack was made yesterday, and as a result of it Miss Cahill is suffering from a severe wound in her left shoulder.

She entered the dining room in their apartments on the first floor of the Webster Avenue house to find a man sitting in the window. He jumped to the floor and stabbed the girl's shoulder with a stick, on the end of which was fastened a sharp nail or a knife blade. Then the man leaped through the window and disappeared.

A man who ran into the house with the crowd that gathered when the girl shouted said he was a policeman. He was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct and intoxication. He said he was Edward J. Stanley of 201 East Fifty-seventh Street.

On Feb. 15 last Miss Cahill was stabbed in the back with a weapon like the one used yesterday. The man was dressed exactly like her assailant of yesterday, and jabbed at her with the weapon from the window through which he leaped yesterday. Then he ran off. The police were notified, and the next day an unsigned note, written in a scrawling hand, was shoved uder the Cahill door. It read:

"We know you have told the police, for we saw them leaving your house yesterday. Don't do it again, or it will be death for you next time."

CANNON TO FIGHT SENATE.

Would Prefer No Statehood Bill to an Amended One.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Speaker Cannon has declined to listen to those who urge House concessions on Statehood legislation. He has been informed that the Senate would, by a substantial majority, incorporate in the Statehood bill the Foraker referendum proposition permitting New Mexico and Arizona to vote separately upon their admission and requiring a majority of votes in each Territory to ratify the result.

The Speaker prefers to fight it out with the Senate, and if he can accomplish it, will defeat all action on Statehood rather than yield to the demands of the upper house.

Supporters of Oklahoma and Indian Territory believe that the Speaker will be compelled to yield. As soon as the Senate has voted the very Senators who have opposed the Foraker amendment will begin to bring pressure to bear to have the House yield, at least for so much of the bill as applies to Oklahoma and Indian Territory.

After the Foraker referendum proposition has been carried in the Senate, a separate vote will be taken upon the second Foraker proposition, to divide the bill. It is said that a clear majority of the Senate favors the separation.

If the Hamilton bill should be returned to the House divided into two separate measures, an effort will be made to have the House concur in admitting Oklahoma and Indian Territory, and then send the New Mexico and Arizona bill to committee to be smothered.

PLOT TO BLOW UP PRISON.

Police Catch Nine Men in an Atlanta House.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 6.—The police of Atlanta arrested last night in a house near the Federal prison nine men who, it is alleged by the police, were preparing to carry out a plot to dynamite the penitentiary in an effort to release certain criminals undergoing long sentences.

A quantity of dynamite was found in possession of the men arrested, the prisoners all giving names which were plainly fictitious. One of them has been identified by the Warden of the pen as a desperate Western outlaw, who has a pal in the prison doing time for train robbery.

Warden Moyer says he had information some days ago that there was a plot to attack the prison, and since then guards have been kept. Warden Moyer says the men under arrest are nearly all from Oklahoma and Indian Territory. It is alleged that evidence was found to show that they had begun to dig a tunnel under the pen.

NO ACTION ON TRANSIT BILL.

Cities Committee Again Disappoints Senator Elsberg.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—Failing to receive sufficient votes in the Senate Cities Committee to-night, the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill will not be reported to the Senate to-morrow, and legislation on the matter probably will be tied up for a week longer.

Senator Elsberg had expressed confidence that favorable action would be taken to-night. The impression was more or less general, however, that if any Rapid Transit bill came out to-night, it would be the Page Rapid Transit bill, which is the embodiment of most of the views of the City Club. Because of this feeling, Senator Page amended his bill so as to embrace most of the features of the Elsberg bill to which there was no objection.

GERMAN SURRENDER TO FRANCE REPORTED

Russia's Proposal at Algeciras Said to Have Been Accepted.

MOROCCO MAY BE OBSTINATE

Officials Say They Will Not Agree to Any Measures They Disapprove—German Pressure on Italy.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 6.—A dispatch from Algeciras to-day says that Germany has accepted, as the basis for an agreement, the Russian proposition that the control of the force for the policing of Morocco be intrusted to France and Spain jointly.

Special Cables. Copyright, 1906.

TANGIER, March 6.—The Maghazen officials state that they are indifferent as to the conclusions the Algeciras conference may reach, as they have no intention of accepting any clauses which they disapprove.

BERLIN, March 6.—The situation at Algeciras has created some depression in Berlin. On the Boerse to-day Imperial 3 per cents touched 88.50, the lowest figure, I believe, for many years.

Semi-official writers still endeavor to minimize the importance of the vote recorded by the great majority of the powers on the ground that it merely concerned the order of procedure at the conference, but it is pointed out that the question of procedure is fundamental and that the powers are determined not to allow the bank question to be treated as a subject of compromise and concession apart from the question of the police.

There are some indications that the German Government is now inclined to accede to the wishes of the powers in this respect.

PARIS, March 6.—The chances of an agreement between France and Germany at Algeciras are believed to be as remote as ever. Yesterday's sitting clearly established the fact that England, France, Russia, Spain, and Portugal hold firmly together, and there is nothing to show that America and the minor States which voted with them on the State Bank question will not stand by them in regard to the police.

Italy is in a delicate position, but there is good reason to believe that the French Government has no grounds to suspect that her disposition is other than friendly. Since the beginning of the conference Italy has never concealed her preference for the French standpoint.

It is no secret that after the attitude of the Italian delegates on the State Bank question became evident energetic remonstrances were made by Germany at Algeciras and Rome, of which yesterday's reserve on the part of the Italian representatives was manifestly a consequence.

ALGECIRAS, March 6.—Reports are in circulation to-night of further developments in regard to the police question. Austria, it is understood, has prepared a proposition favoring the German view. It is, however, possible that it will not be presented to the conference, the German delegates expressing the opinion that it does not sufficiently support their contention.

There is considerable speculation concerning the attitude of the United States. Both the British and the French delegates are inclined to the belief that America will soon break her present silence. The French delegates even suggest that the United States should instruct its delegates to declare openly in favor of the French proposals if they are satisfied that these proposals offer the proper guarantees for the maintenance of the equality of commercial rights in Morocco. Such an event, following the action of the Mediterranean powers yesterday, might, the Frenchmen argue, mean the difference between the failure or success of the conference.

The text of the speech of Herr von Radowitz, head of the German delegation, at yesterday's session of the conference, as given out, concludes as follows:

"The powers being equally interested in the police organization, they should equally participate in it."

France specifically declines equality in the organization of the police, asserting that the plan is a mere ruse to undermine France's legitimate special position in Morocco. The text of the speech of M. Revoil, chief of the French Mission, reads:

"The internationalization of the police would give no guarantee of order and presents grave difficulties. We ask for recognition of the legitimate interests of France as a Mussulman power in North Africa and our special interests in the maintenance of order in Morocco."

The positions of France and Germany are so diametrically opposed that the delegates see little hope of reconciling them unless Emperor William personally intervenes.

PARIS, March 6.—M. Lockroy, ex-Minister of Marine, took advantage of the discussion of the naval budget in the Chamber of Deputies to-day to make a powerful appeal for the strengthening of the navy, which aroused the enthusiasm of the whole house.

Comparing the French and German navies, M. Lockroy pointed out that if the present programme of France were not augmented Germany would soon outstrip France. Should war between France and Germany break out it would begin with a naval battle, and a doubly powerful French fleet was necessary owing to the need of France to defend herself both in the North Sea and in the Mediterranean.

M. Doumer, President of the Chamber, on behalf of the Chamber thanked M. Lockroy for his patriotic declaration, and regretted the insufficiency of the budget. Admitting the weakness of the navy, he strongly seconded M. Lockroy, contending that the army needed the support of a powerful navy.

NOT BOUGHT BY MORGAN.

Report Regarding Lord Rosebery's Burns Manuscripts Is Denied.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 6.—The report from New York that J. Pierpont Morgan has purchased Lord Rosebery's collection of Burns manuscripts has been promptly, and, it is stated, authoritatively denied.

MAY STRIKE ON LACKAWANNA.

Conference Between Officials and Men Brings No Agreement.

SCRANTON, Penn., March 6.—After four weeks of conference the joint grievance committee of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western conductors and trainmen to-day concluded that they cannot reach an amicable agreement with General Superintendent T. E. Clarke.

They will ask to-morrow for his best terms, to be reported to the local lodges, which will vote on the proposal to strike.

The grievances are mostly about wages. The action of the joint committee has been approved by the grand officers of both organizations.

CUT RATES TO NEW YORK.

Grand Trunk Makes the Fare $15 Second Class from Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 6.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission was notified at noon to-day of the Grand Trunk's intention to reduce rates to New York and Boston on March 10, the new tariff being filed by telegraph.

The rates quoted by the Grand Trunk are $16 first class and $15 second class to New York and Boston. That is $2 and $3, respectively, below the normal differential rates, and $4 and $6 below the regular standard fare. These rates apply over all routes East except in connection with the New York Central and the Boston & Albany, where the regular standard fares will apply, except for basing purposes.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB ILL.

Begins Trip East, Though Reaching Train with Difficulty.

LOS ANGELES, March 6.—Charles M. Schwab, ex-President of the United States Steel Corporation, who arrived here Saturday night, started East last night.

Far from well when he reached Los Angeles, he was unable to leave his bed yesterday, and only with difficulty was he able to go to his private car from the Jonathan Club rooms, where he was a guest after his arrival.

The party consisted of Mr. Schwab, Dr. M. R. Ward, C. D. Gouldin, John Gleason, Donald Sillis, John McKane, E. A. Mamer, W. R. Wharton, James Montgomery, and C. D. Whittemore.

MANY FAMILIES ROBBED.

The Victims All Live in One Harlem Apartment House.

B. M. Morris of 20 East 116th Street reported to the police last night that he had been robbed of some clothes and household effects in his absence from his apartment.

"There are sixteen families in the building," he told the police, "and all but two or three families have been robbed in the same way in the last few weeks."

The tenants have made all sorts of efforts to catch the thieves, but none has been successful. One man kept a bear trap to land one of them, but the burglar has not stepped into it yet.

DIPHTHERIA IN BELLEVUE.

A Case Discovered in Ward 7—The Others Were in Another Ward.

A new case of diphtheria was discovered at Bellevue yesterday in Ward 7, in which there are twenty-seven patients. The victim is eight-year-old Walter Murray of 107 East 115th Street, who was taken to the ward with a fractured jaw. He was attended by Dr. M. E. Lewis, who several days ago developed a form of diphtheria. Extra precautions have been taken to prevent contagion among the other patients in Ward 7. The other cases were in Ward 31.

BRITAIN WANTS RECIPROCITY.

Thinks We Should Give Her the Same Privileges as Other Nations.

LONDON, March 6.—Communications have passed between Great Britain and the United States respecting England's contention that she should participate in the privileges granted to other nations under the Dingley act in return for concessions similar to those which Great Britain has made to other countries granting the most-favored-nation treatment.

Great Biritain also takes the ground that, having no tariff, she of all countries should be favorably treated commercially.

It was stated in the House of Commons to-day that negotiations on this subject had been opened with America. This is incorrect. Thus far only communications have passed.

EARTHQUAKES EVERY DAY.

Shocks in St. Lucia Continue—Slight Disturbances in St. Vincent.

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent, Saturday, March 3.—Earthquake shocks of varying severity have been continuing daily at irregular intervals on the Island of St. Lucia since Feb. 16.

Some slight shocks have been felt here. The inhabitants of St. Vincent are gravely concerned regarding the disturbances.

The Soufrière volcano on this island is quiet.

Ten-Story Bristol Apartments Afire.

A fire in the apartments of Butler Case, on the fourth floor of the Bristol, a ten-story apartment house at 122 West Forty-ninth Street, just before midnight last night turned out the occupants in a hurry. The damage, confined to Mr. [illegible]'s apartments, was about $2,000.

HAMILTON RETURNS TO FACE THE MUSIC

The "Judge" Says So and Talks of the Peril of Glass Houses.

NEW YORK LIFE MEN SURPRISED

Few, if Any, of Them Knew He Had Left Paris—McCall's Friends Are Saying Nothing.

"Judge" Andrew Hamilton is back. The legislative generalissimo of the New York Life Insurance Company came on the liner Deutschland yesterday as "H. A. Milton," said good-bye at the pier to two New York Life agents who had been his companions on the voyage, and then disappeared. Last night he was at his home, in Albany, but until this information came in there were few connected with the New York Life Insurance Company who would believe that he had even left Paris.

Here in New York, however, a limited number were quite aware that Hamilton was coming, although the fact had been kept so closely guarded a secret that some of his most intimate friends were as much surprised as the officers and Trustees of the New York Life. From a source that may be considered authoritative it was learned late last night that Hamilton, when the proper time arrives, is going to tell what he knows about the way in which the funds were drawn for the purposes of his legislative bureau. Friends of the late John A. McCall are disposed to believe that this will broaden materially the responsibility for these payments which, in the report of the Fowler Investigating Committee, was placed entirely upon the shoulders of Mr. McCall and Hamilton, with a suggestion that a limited number of Trustees might know something more about the political expenditures of the company than had heretofore appeared.

From a member of the Fowler Committee it was learned last night that Hamilton would have at an early date an opportunity to appear before the committee and tell what he knows. The counsel for the committee are out of town just now, so the matter will probably not be taken up until the first of next week at the earliest. At all events, Hamilton's account of things will be sought before the committee decides definitely to whom it is going to look for the $1,074,774 of the money which Hamilton spent and for which it holds no satisfactory accounting has been made.

Editor Came with the Judge.

A member of the editorial staff of The Brooklyn Eagle was the means of letting the town know of Hamilton's return. He happened to be on the steamer and had various talks with the famous passenger. Of these talks the following comes down as the authorized version:

"I have something to say," Hamilton is quoted as saying, "but not much at this time. I know practically nothing of the nature of the Fowler Committee's report, and it will be time enough for me to talk about it when I am informed of its contents.

"I have heard something about possible criminal proceedings, and here I am. That's all, and you can interpret what it means, and so can the public. It signifies that although my health is far from re-established I'm ready to accept any challenge implied by such proceedings.

"As to my health, let me add that there is no necessity to resort to fiction. I'm fortunate to be alive after all that has happened, but I'm not so fortunate otherwise. I am especially unfortunate in the death of Mr. McCall, and I might say as much about the death of Lyman Short, lately counsel for the Mutual Life, to say nothing of the incapacitating of Mr. Alexander of the Equitable.

"To some who have gone I could have looked with no misgivings as to what they might say or do. As to what others have said or done in my absence—and I might allude to those who live in glass houses—I will say nothing."

"So all there is to it is that you have come back to face the music?" Hamilton was asked.

Here to Face the Music.

"Yes, discordant or otherwise," was his reply. "You can begin there and end there."

To say that Hamilton's return created a sensation among officials and Trustees of the New York Life is putting things mildly. One high officer of the company when he heard of it in the middle of the afternoon jumped for a telephone and spent fifteen lively minutes trying to find out whether any of his fellow-officers had any definite information on the subject. When he found that they did not, he was disposed to doubt that Hamilton had ever left Paris, where he has made his headquarters for the last six months.

President Orr hadn't heard anything about it, nor had Vice President Kingsley, who married John A. McCall's daughter, nor had Superintendent of Agencies Perkins, nor had Treasurer Randolph. As for Secretary John C. McCall, it was said that he was out of town, but this turned out to be a mistake, for Mr. McCall arrived at the offices of the company with his uncle, Justice Edward E. McCall, late in the afternoon and had a two-hour conference with the Justice. They left the executive offices by a private elevator, and a rumor got around, that Hamilton had participated in the conference.

Last night, after reporters from several newspapers had waited outside John C. McCall's house for an hour or more, he appeared and told them he was sorry that they had been kept out in the cold for so long. He added, however:

"I must decline to answer any questions about Mr. Andrew Hamilton."

Justice McCall denied himself to reporters last night.

Came as "H. A. Milton."

Passengers on the Deutschland say "Judge" Hamilton cabled from Nice before he started to a couple of his close personal friends here saying that he was on his way over. According to this same story, Hamilton boarded the Deutschland at Genoa but remained unknown to the rest of the passengers for a day or two. Then as "Mr. H. A. Milton" he gradually got acquainted with his fellow shipmates, a few of whom, including the two New York Life agents, eventually discovered that when at home he spelled his name without punctuation. The two agents left the ship as quietly as Hamilton did and lost no time reaching the office of Superintendent of Agencies Perkins. Mr. Perkins remained invisible.

"Judge" Hamilton, it is understood, is far from a well man at present. He has been in the hands of some eminent European specialists, and his treatment has ranged all the way from dry heat at 200 degrees to shower baths with ice water from a hose, the change being quick. Electricity has also been used to cure his ailment.

The report of the Fowler Committee to the Trustees of the company on Feb. 8 figured up that $1,347,382 of the company's money had gone to Hamilton since his earliest connection with the company in 1892. Of this vast sum they held that $1,074,774 had never been satisfactorily accounted for, and they recommended that suits be begun to recover $795,964 from Hamilton personally, $219,500 from Hamilton and John A. McCall, and $59,310 from John A. McCall and George W. Perkins. The balance of the gross amount Hamilton received was made up of the $235,000 that Mr. McCall paid in as the sum unaccounted for of the money Hamilton received in 1903 and 1904 and $37,601 which Hamilton got in fees and expenses between 1892, when he first was employed by the New York Life, and 1896, when he took up regularly the conduct of its bureau of taxation and legislation.

Hamilton, the Mysterious.

Hamilton early became one of the mysteries of the insurance investigation. Almost at the outset of the hearings payments to him aggregating $100,000, which later went to make up a part of the $235,000 which John A. McCall paid back, were traced through the "Home Office Annex" account. This account had to do primarily with real estate operations incident to the acquisition of the Home Office Annex property in the rear of the main building at 346 Broadway. From it the payments were traced into the accounts of the Hanover Bank Building office of the company.

John A. McCall's original explanation of these payments was that they were made by his executive order for the acquisition of real estate. THE TIMES declared, however, on Sept. 19, the day after the discovery of them was made that they would prove but a beginning in disclosures of a much more extensive order, and that Hamilton's relations with insurance companies generally were much more far-reaching than any one supposed who knew him merely through his connection with the New York Life. As the hearings progressed, the amount chargeable to Hamilton, for which he had never accounted more than by giving blanket vouchers, grew and grew until by the time the Armstrong Committee adjourned upward of a million of dollars had been traced to him as presumptive spending agent.

When the total of Hamilton payments had reached several hundred thousand dollars, and it had appeared that when he went away he had not accounted for some $235,000 of the money he got in 1903 and 1904, John A. McCall made to the Trustees of the New York Life his pledge that if Hamilton did not by Dec. 15 render a satisfactory accounting of this money, he would himself refund it. In this shape things stood until Nov. 17, when John C. McCall appeared before the Armstrong Committee and announced that he was going to Europe to persuade Hamilton to return, or, failing in that, was going to obtain an accounting from him.

Services Were Confidential.

Hamilton did not come back, and when young Mr. McCall brought over the "accounting" it proved to be a very long discussion of the purposes of the legislative bureau, in which it was admitted that he had spent in its service $720,550 and asserted that this had resulted in various ways in a net saving of $2,479,450 to policy holders. Hamilton explicitly said that he did not propose to tell to whom he paid the money, as the services of persons whom he hired for his work were necessarily confidential. The Fowler Committee of New York Life Trustees, which was at work, declined to accept the accounting as satisfactory.

A few days later, on Jan. 3, when John A. McCall resigned, he turned over $85,000 in cash and a note for $150,000, backed by mortgages on his country house at Long Branch. To satisfy these and other mortgages the country home was sacrificed soon after, and after Mr. McCall died it became known that he had cashed in his $400,000 of life insurance to raise the $85,000 that comprised the cash payment. But before Mr. McCall's death the Fowler Committee had rendered its report on the Hamilton case. The committee went beyond the figures and said it was its opinion that a large part of the money had been used by Hamilton for his own purposes, and utterly repudiated the explanations made by Mr. McCall on the stand before the Armstrong Committee as to why most of the payments had been made. From this time on Mr. McCall's health failed until he died—as his friends said, of a broken heart.

Since Mr. McCall's death there has been considerable discussion about the treatment that Mr. McCall got at the hands of his Trustees in the matter of the Hamilton payments, and it has been generally understood that before Mr. McCall paid in the $235,000 he had an implied agreement with certain members of the board that this would end his responsibility. It was said that these same Trustees were among those who had known more or less about the political and other payments made through Hamilton at the time of their making. This comment, together with the fact, which THE TIMES published yesterday, that the Fowler investigators had discovered several speculative accounts that Hamilton had maintained, serves to lend additional interest to his homecoming at this particular time.

HAMILTON GOES TO ALBANY.

With His Family in His Fine Residence—Nothing to Say.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—"Judge" Hamilton is in his beautiful residence on Thurlow Terrace, overlooking Washington Park Lake. He has refused to be seen by anybody except members of his family and close relatives. He arrived with his son-in-law, James C. Brady, the son of Anthony N. Brady, early to-night and was driven at once to his residence.

His family has known for some time that he was on his way home from Europe. The Hamilton residence was brilliantly lighted after the return of the head of the house. At first it was denied that the "Judge" had returned, but after a relative went to the Hamilton residence and talked with "Judge" Hamilton, this statement was given out:

"Mr. Hamilton arrived home to-night with his son-in-law. He desires to pass this evening with his family and will not make any statement for publication to-night."

ITALIAN BANKER'S BOY IS HELD FOR RANSOM

The Kidnappers Send a Letter Demanding $20,000.

BOY WRITES HE'S SUFFERING

Tony Bozzuffi Disappeared Sunday After Being Sent for Postage Stamps—Father Says He Won't Pay.

John Bozzuffi, who does an Italian banking and steamship ticket business at 1,149 First Avenue, handed a ten-dollar bill to his 14-year-old son Antonio Sunday afternoon.

"Tony," he directed, "go to the Post Office and get $10 worth of stamps, and hurry back, for I have several other things for you to do." Tony, who has but recently returned from a three years' course of study at the College of San Marco, Bedonia, Italy, and is now a student at St. Ann's Academy, Seventy-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue, took his hat and started for the sub-station at Sixty-fifth Street and Third Avenue.

"I'll be back in a moment," he said. "I want to get away early this afternoon to play with some of the boys."

Bozzuffi was busy and didn't note the fact that his boy hadn't returned till almost dark, when he became alarmed. He notified his brother, Dominick Bozzuffi, and the two started in search of the lad. First they went to the home of Tony's aunt, Julia Merini, in Fifty-ninth Street, between Second and Third Avenues. She told them that earlier in the evening she had met Tony walking along Second Avenue, near Fifty-ninth Street, with a strange man and asked where he was going.

"I'm just going over to the Post Office," he replied, "and then right to the bank." The strange man, she said, kept his back turned toward her. She thought nothing of it and went her way.

The two Bozzuffis hunted for the boy until late at night, but were unable to find him, and going back to their home at 339 East Sixty-second Street, they found that he hadn't returned.

Early Monday morning Dominick Bozzuffi went to the front door of the house and found a letter in the vestibule. It said, in effect:

"We have kidnapped your boy, and unless you give us $20,000 before March 8 for his safe return you will regret it. Pay the money to a man who will walk north on First Avenue and say to you: 'Brooklyn Bridge.'"

There was no signature to the letter, and Dominick decided that the police ought to be notified. John Bozzuffi, according to what he said last night, asked Police Headquarters for help, and renewed the search for the boy. Mrs. Merini said the lad's companion on Sunday was a stockily built Italian with shabby clothing and long hair. She said that the boy while with the stranger was not being restrained, and seemed to be acquainted with his companion. The description gave little clue, and the case seemed still stranger when a letter came to the bank Monday evening written in Tony's hand saying that he was suffering and that his father had better pay the money demanded. There was no signature to the letter.

Yesterday a third letter, which had been registered, was received at the Bozzuffi bank, saying that the date of March 8 could be eliminated from the transaction, and that the boy would be released whenever his father got ready to pay the ransom. Its effect was: "We put it up to you to pay." The name signed by the man who registered the letter was Rotino, meaning "scissors-grinder."

The Bozzuffis say that they continued to search until last night, when they decided that further pursuit would be fruitless. The father and uncle then went to the East Sixty-seventh Street Police Station and notified Capt. Langon, who said he would investigate.

John Bozzuffi said last night that he thought that his boy is either in the hands of a band of kidnappers or that some business rival has caused his detention in the hope of driving the Bozzuffi bank out of the neighborhood. The Bozzuffis recall the case of an explosion in front of a barber's shop in First Avenue a few months ago, engineered for the purpose of frightening the barber out of that locality.

"Antonio would certainly not have gone with any man with whom he was not acquainted," said his father last night. "He could never have been induced to follow a stranger, and I feel that whoever has him is an old acquaintance of his. I think he's detained within half a dozen blocks of us, and I'm sure of getting him back without paying a cent of ransom. I won't give up a penny, and, if the kidnappers think I will, I serve notice on them now that I have seven more children they can steal before I'll pay one cent of blackmail."

PRINTERS' STRIKE OVER.

So Says Typothetae—Reward Offered for Proof of Butterick Advances.

At a largely attended meeting held last night by the Typothetae at their rooms, 320 Broadway, reports were received from all the firms belonging to the organization stating that normal conditions had been resumed and that with the exception of union pickets at some points there were no indications that a strike was on. The electrotype situation, it was declared, is improving, and fourteen open shops are now established.

A statement given out by the Secretary said that the boarding house for non-union men had been discontinued. As to the Butterick Company's alleged seeking of a conference with a view to unionizing its shops, said the statement, "The company will present $5,000 to the Compositors' Home or to any other charity if the Typographical Union can prove any conferences or overtures of any kind from that firm since the strike began. The firm has absolutely refused to enter into any negotiations to unionize its people."

ASTOR GETTING A REPORT.

Lawyer Not Connected with Insurance Looking Up the Mutual for Him.

New interest was added to the Mutual Life situation yesterday through a report which was credibly received in banking houses that William Waldorf Astor, whose American representative is President Charles A. Peabody of the Mutual Life, had retained a lawyer of this city having no connection whatever with life insurance matters to look into the Mutual situation closely and report to him. Last week from similar sources came a report that Mr. Astor had communicated to Mr. Peabody his belief that the interests of the Astor estate would not be served by having it mixed up in the controversy now in progress in the Mutual or the fight that is being made against Stuyvesant Fish in the Illinois Central Railroad.

Henry E. Duncan, Jr., Superintendent of foreign agencies for the Mutual, sailed yesterday to see some of the Mutual's general agents in Great Britain, Germany, and France. In Great Britain, according to reports that come to this side, many of the general agents are openly co-operating with the Policy Holders' Committee, of which Lord Northcliffe is Chairman.

Another important conference of insurance company officials was held in the Mutual Life offices yesterday afternoon to complete the programme for the appearance at Albany on Friday, when the Armstrong insurance bills will be discussed. The Prudential Life of New Jersey will be represented there by Richard B. Lindabury, counsel for the company.

As now arranged, the Presidents and actuaries of each of the three big companies will speak, together with the committee representing the smaller companies. Mr. Lindaburry and two or three prominent lawyers, among whom may be William B. Hornblower and Joseph H. Choate, will also speak.

Twelve or fifteen hundred agents, headed by William C. Johnson, will go to Albany Friday morning.

THEY DO GIVE VOTING RIGHTS.

A Misapprehension About the Insurance Bills Explained.

Attention was called in THE TIMES yesterday to the assertion of lawyers interested in the insurance situation that the bills which have been reported by the Armstrong Investigating Committee contained no provision carrying out the committee's recommendation that the Directors of insurance companies formed on a stock basis be empowered by law to grant, with the consent of the stock, the right to a vote to policy holders.

It now appears that the committee, in Section 13 of its general act to amend the insurance law, proposed that Section 52 of the insurance law, as amended by various subsequent acts, be so amended as to allow Directors to confer the right to vote on policy holders of stock insurance corporations with the consent of a majority of the stock.

It is understood that the committee took the position that there would be a small chance of the Directors of any stock corporation giving the policy holders the right to vote if the stock did not consent, and that there would be a better chance of getting a law passed clearly providing a way in which this form of mutualization might be accomplished, if this right of the stock were recognized.

ROW IN EIGHTH REGIMENT.

The Command Split Into Factions—Col. Jarvis Storm Centre.

There is friction in the Eighth Regiment over the election of a Lieutenant Colonel to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of H. G. Ridabock. There is also a demand from some of the officers of the command for the retirement of Col. James M. Jarvis, who has, it is declared by his opponents, been carrying things with a high hand. The feeling against the Colonel is particularly bitter among the field officers.

Trouble has been brewing for some time between the Jarvis and anti-Jarvis factions, and it came to a head last Friday night when the nomination of a man to fill the Ridabock vacancy was under discussion. Col. Jarvis, it is said, openly favored the nomination of Capt. John J. Cowdrey over the heads of Major John E. Kerby and Major Robert Edwards, Jr. Both of these men served in the Spanish war, while Capt. Cowdrey, so those who lined up against him declared, stayed at home.

A proposition to appoint a nominating committee of three, which came from the Jarvis forces, was bitterly opposed, the advocates of the two Major's demanding that nominations be made in open meeting. Col. Jarvis left the armory while the fight was raging. Major Edwards nominated Major Kerby to succeed Lieut. Col. Ridabock, and an election was requested for next Friday night. Capt. Cowdrey's name was also placed in nomination.

"The regiment is in a bad way," said one of its officers yesterday. "What we need is a young and active man at its head. There has been constant friction between Col. Jarvis, who is personally a very fine man, but who is behind the times, and his field officers. We are suffering from dry rot, as was fearlessly stated at the last annual dinner by several speakers."

Friends of Col. Jarvis say that he is a most capable commander, but that he is not receiving the support to which he is entitled. "There are a lot of soreheads," a Jarvis man said, "who want to get him out that they may secure an advance in rank for themselves. There is not a man in the regiment competent to fill his place. If the officers would all pull together there would be no trouble."

DISOBEYED THE BURGLAR.

Cook Screamed Although He Forbade It, and Thieves Fled.

Two burglars who entered the home of John E. Dillon at 268 West 139th Street on Sunday night received a painful surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Dillon were away but Chauncey, their son, and Claire and Lillian, their daughters, were entertaining company in the reception room on the second floor. Fredericka Carter, the colored cook, was in the kitchen.

One of the burglars slipped into the kitchen with a revolver in his hand to subdue the cook, while the other hurried into the dining room to collect the family plate.

"Scream," said the burglar harshly to Fredericka, "and off goes your head!"

She gave a scream that brought immediate results. Chauncey Dillon dashed downstairs and into the dining room. Beholding a burglar there, he reached for the nearest weapon, which happened to be a seltzer siphon.

"Skiz-z-z-z-z!" hissed the siphon and then Mr. Dillon hurled the heavy bottle at the burglar's head.

The cook continued her screams. The burglar with the pistol went back over the fence, with his pal close behind him. Mr. Dillon grabbed a leg, but both men escaped.

TWO LITTLE GIRLS GONE.

Leave the Laura Franklin Home in Harlem—One a New Arrival.

A general alarm has been sent out from the East 104th Street Police Station for two little girls who have disappeared from the Laura Franklin Hospital and Home at 17 East 111th Street. The girls are Mary Kent, 13 years old, and Edna Wynans, 10.

The younger of the two children only recently came to the home. It is believed that the older took a fancy to her and when she decided to run away took Edna with her.

GREAT ORGAN ORDERED FOR NEW CATHEDRAL

Will Be Among World's Most Powerful Instruments.

IT IS TO COST $50,000

Hope-Jones System of Tone-Producing Will Be Used—Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Morton.

An organ which is designed to be one of the most powerful in the world has been ordered by the authorities of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. It is to cost $50,000, and is to be constructed with funds contributed by Mr. and Mrs. Levi P. Morton.

The instrument is to be built jointly by Robert Hope-Jones, who constructed the organ in Worcester Cathedral in England, now known as the most powerful in the world, and Ernest M. Skinner, builder of the organs in Grace Church, New York, and Plymouth Church, Brooklyn. Mr. Hope-Jones came to America about a year ago, and has since entered into a corporation, of which Mr. Skinner is the head. They have built a factory in Boston, and there the big cathedral organ will be constructed.

No plans have been drawn for the instrument. The authorities of the cathedral chose the builders they thought could serve them best, and told them to construct the finest instrument they could turn out.

In building this organ Mr. Hope-Jones will use for the first time in this country the method for producing tones which he first employed in the Worcester Cathedral and since in the organs in Edinburgh Town Hall and Llandaff Cathedral. This method has been a subject of controversy in Great Britain for years, and probably will cause much discussion in America.

Mr. Hope-Jones discards reed pipes, which depend for their tones upon the vibration under air pressure of a metal tongue against an opening in the pipe. He was formerly an electrical engineer, and employed his knowledge of mechanics in producing sounds. He uses springs, valves, and cylinders and operates the organ by electricity.

He procures the puffing, or beating of the air current into his resonators, by means of a device that reminds one of the piston of an engine. With an electric blower as a propelling power for the traveling rod and mechanical devices to insure its quick return, this piston works up and down, alternately admitting and excluding the air, and thus causing vibrations that sound the required notes in the air chambers. The builder declares that he can get more uniform tones than are possible with reeds, because he can govern with certainty his air current.

His device had a trial last Spring in St. Patrick's Cathedral, when Mr. Hope-Jones put up a dozen resonators and gave an opportunity for a comparison of his organ with reeds. The result of this trial has been the order by the authorities of the Cathedral of St. John.

A special electrical plant for this organ will be installed and huge blowers will be put in to furnish the air. It is probable that some of the resonators will be remarkable in themselves. Some of those used in the Worcester Cathedral extend far underneath the floor and the tone produced by some of them fairly shakes the building. Mr. Hope-Jones uses cubes, oblongs, spheres, and other shapes for his resonators and for the basic tone a great air space is necessary.

FRANKLIN RELICS ON VIEW.

Large Collection in Masonic Temple, Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—In the library of the Masonic Temple of this city there has just been assembled the most notable collection of paintings, prints, and relics of Benjamin Franklin ever placed on public exhibition. It includes the instruments used by Franklin in his experiments by which he proved that lightning and electricity were the same. This exhibition is in connection with the two-hundredth anniversary of Franklin's birth, which will soon be held by the American Philosophical Society.

Franklin was twice Grand Master of the Masons of Pennsylvania, and among the relics is the golden trowel with an ivory handle which he used in Masonic ceremonies. This is now the property of the Grand Lodge of New York. Other relics among the 900 on exhibition are a queer high-backed combination chair and step ladder which Franklin used in his library, and the desk upon which the Declaration of Independence was signed. On the desk are the ink well and sand shakers used on that occasion. The exhibition will be open until April 23.

PLEAD FOR THE NAVY YARD.

Labor Men Urge That a Battleship Be Built in Brooklyn.

Urging that unless their plea is heeded, fully 2,000 men will be thrown out of employment at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, a committee representing the various labor bodies in the provisional organization called the Allied Navy Yards Trades adopted an address at a meeting yesterday to be submitted to President Roosevelt, Secretary Bonaparte, and the New York Senators and Representatives, asking that one of the two new battleships authorized during the last Congress be constructed there.

The meeting was held yesterday afternoon at 67 St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn, with John B. Wilson of the Machinists' Union presiding, and was attended by representative workmen of every branch of the navy yard. The address cites that the battleship Connecticut, which has been building at the Brooklyn Navy Yard for three years, will be completed in two months, and that since Jan. 1 1,200 men employed upon her have been discharged or will be after the repairs to the fleet soon due at the yard are completed.

"This means," said the circular, "that over 2,000 men will be forced to look for work elsewhere, and this despite the fact that the plant and equipment at the Brooklyn Navy Yard is one of the finest in the country."

WANTS EMPTY PLATFORMS.

But Car Conductors Can't Always Enforce Magistrate Pool's Idea.

As the result of his experience on a Grand Street trolley car on Monday morning Magistrate Pool has sent this letter to President Vreeland of the New York City Railroad Company:

> I beg to call your attention to a matter which I supposed and thought would certainly be remedied after you had got your trolley cars, in place of the teetering cars that were for so many years bobbing up and down on Grand Street.
>
> This morning as I came on the car the back platform was filled with men, half a dozen at least. It was impossible to get on and off without difficulty, and a person trying to get off was likely to have his pocket picked.
>
> There was plenty of room inside the car, and I said to the conductor, "These gentlemen (if they be so) should take seats inside where there is room." The conductor immediately informed me he had no authority to require them to go inside.
>
> I was of the impression there was a rule of your company, as well as all the railroad companies, that men should not stand upon the platform when there were seats inside.

Inspectors and conductors of the road said last night that there was a rule requiring the clearing of the platforms when there was room inside the car, but that it was often impossible of enforcement.

"All we can do," said a conductor, "is to request passengers to move inside. If they refuse to do so we are not supposed to try to use force."

LEMON GAME COST HIM $16.

When McGrath Won $100—on Credit—He Told Police.

"Handing the lemon" is a figure of speech of Mr. Devery's. John McGrath of 120 West Sixty-third Street now knows its significance. He went into the "pool parlor" at 103 West Twenty-eighth Street yesterday afternoon. He soon took part in a pool game, and a little later he was in the Tenderloin Station telling this story:

"I lost $16. Then I suddenly won $100—on credit. Those who were playing with me said they didn't believe I had $100, and they weren't going to pay up unless I showed that amount or more in cash. I remembered then reading about what happens usually to persons who go out and get the $100 or more. They lose that, too. If I recollect aright, this is the lemon game."

Tenderloin detectives arrested on the charge of keeping and maintaining a gambling house a man who said he was Frank Ross of 218 West Forty-first Street. They locked up Charles Miller of 110 West Forty-third Street, the bartender, on the charge of aiding and abetting in the operation of a gambling room. Four other men in the place were locked up as suspicious persons. One of the number said he was John Warren of 233 East Sixty-ninth Street.

Sergt. Corbett said that that was not his right name, and that he was one of the most expert pool players in the country.

WALSH DENIES ANY GUILT.

Chicago Banker Declares He Was Arrested on False Charges.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 6.—John R. Walsh, the banker who was recently arrested here, to-day issued a statement to financiers and the public, in which he says:

"I want to reiterate my statement that the proceeding instituted against me on March 2 on the charge that I signed a false report to the Controller, thereby violating a Federal statute, is unfounded, as will be proved if the case every comes to trial.

"The point in the complaint is that the statement did not show the full liability of Directors of the bank. This is a mere technicality, in that it is based on a claim that the Directors are liable on paper which they neither signed nor indorsed, and on this the whole case rests.

"The charge of misapplication of funds, made in the complaint, is based upon the fact that the bank made loans on bonds of companies in which I was interested. The loans are good, and probably will be paid this month. Any intimation that a single dollar was misappropriated by me or any one else connected with the bank is absolutely false."

STRANGE CAGE MATES ARRIVE.

The Friendship of the Lion and Lamb Is Explained.

When the Minneapolis of the Atlantic Transport Line docked last night Tody Hamilton was on hand to greet Georgia, the big lion whose side partner is a Yorkshire ram. The animals occupy the same cage, and when the lion roars the lamb bleats.

The only explanation for the devotion of the two beasts offered by the Nestor of press agents is that they were reared together. They were fed together—the lion with raw meat and the lamb with grass. The claws and teeth of the lion grew long and sharp; at the same time the horns of the ram grew round and hard, and there was an encounter about a year ago. The two were sleeping side by side, when a horse fly bit the ear of the ram. The lion licked the wound, tasted blood, and was about to feast upon his friend, when the ram butted him in the nose. Since then there has been absolute peace.

PROTECTS RAILWAY HANDS.

Bill Relating to Liability for Injuries May Pass at Last.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—There is a strong likelihood that a bill which has had many vicissitudes in the Legislature in years past may become law at this session. It was introduced into the Senate by Senator Barnes, and is to amend the railroad law in relation to liability for injuries of employes. The Senate to-day advanced it to third reading, and in the course of the argument upon it Senator Quinn made a stirring address in its favor.

"The employe," he said, "is a supplicant. He will sign anything to get the position he craves and needs, but we should not allow him to sign away the interest his wife and children have in his life, and take from them the pittance that may come to them if he is killed through the negligence of a fellow-employe."

$250,000 TO INSTITUTIONS.

Edwin Gilbert Left $60,000 to Maintain a Model Farm.

GEORGETOWN, Conn., March 6.—Announcement was made here to-night of public bequests totaling over $250,000 provided for in the will of Edwin Gilbert, President of the Gilbert & Bennett Manufacturing Company, who died last week in Crescent City, Fla.

The "model farm," given to the Connecticut Agricultural College, is to get $60,000; Northfield Seminary, Northfield, Mass., $25,000; Mount Hermon School, Mount Hermon, Mass., $25,000; Georgetown Public Schools, $15,000; Life's Farm, at Branchville, $15,000, and Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., $10,000.

H. V. BEMIS A SUICIDE.

Hotel Man Shoots Himself—Due to Money Troubles and Bad Health.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Henry V. Bemis, one of the best known hotel men in the country and a member of the Chicago Board of Trade since 1859, killed himself to-night at his residence in Indiana Avenue.

Mr. Bemis shot himself behind the right ear, causing instant death, after four unsuccessful attempts to pierce his heart with a paper knife.

For more than two years Bemis had been in poor health, and this, coupled with the loss of considerable money in a business venture, is assigned by his friends as responsible for his suicide. He was for many years proprietor of the famous hotel Richelieu on Michigan Avenue.

W. Q. Gresham's Mother Dead.

CORYDON, Ind., March 6.—Mrs. Sarah Rumbly, mother of the late Judge Walter Q. Gresham, and former Secretary of State died to-day at her home near Lanesville. She was 98 years of age, had been married twice, and was the mother of eight children.

Brooklyn Mail Carrier Park Suicide.

Despondent because of continued ill-health, Charles H. Bowles of 281 Twenty-first Street, Brooklyn, a letter carrier, shot and killed himself yesterday in a boathouse on the shore of the lake in Prospect Park. He had been employed by the Brooklyn Post Office for twelve years.

formation on which the arrests were made, was contributed by a Mrs. Betts, who lived near the Bliss building, but this appears to have been a blind to keep the iron workers from suspecting Guthrie.

Andrew J. Post of Post & McCord was asked last night regarding the statement of Guthrie. He said he would rather not discuss it.

"I know something about it," he acknowledged, "but I am not conversant sufficiently with the details to discuss it."

"Is it true," he was asked, "that Guthrie went to your firm and told you of the plot, and was advised to join the union?" He declined to make any further statement.

Patrick J. Farrell, Secretary of the New York District Council of the Housesmiths' Union, said last night:

"The whole thing is a put-up job to bring the union into disrepute. Guthrie was a non-union man employed by Post & McCord in Jersey City, and our business agent took him off the job. We clothed him and cared for him, but he sneaked back to work for Post & McCord. The union has had nothing to do with the matter, and Moran and Wier were never members."

The Post & McCord Troubles.

The strike against Post & McCord went into full effect on Nov. 6. It tied up the work on fifty large buildings and threw more than 1,000 men out of work. It was ordered in sympathy with the strike against the American Bridge Company, in which the union insists that Post & McCord are influential. The firm has denied this.

On Nov. 29 the guy ropes were cut on a seventy-foot, ten-top derrick used on an extension of the American Can Company's building, at Fourteenth Street and Tenth Avenue. The derrick was discovered in the morning lying among a pile of splintered beams and twisted iron pillars. The apparent intention had been to bring down a string of three derricks, which, if they had fallen, would have wrecked the greater part of the extension.

On Dec. 2 an attack was made on Charles H. Scott, a special policeman employed on this building. He received a severe stab wound and three shots from a revolver were fired at him. Edward Lynch, David Marks, and Edward McShea were arrested for the assault.

The Allied Iron Trades, to which Post & McCord belong, had a bomb thrown into its employment agency at 7 East Fourteenth Street, soon afterward. Nobody was in the room at the time, and the only damage was that done to the furniture. Not long afterward the hoisting engines at the new Altman building, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, had small but important parts removed from them, but this was discovered before any damage was done.

On Jan. 8 three sticks of dynamite were thrown into the lot near Twenty-third Street and Second Avenue, where one story of the steel structure of a new building had been erected.

FOUNDRY WAS DYNAMITED.

If It Wasn't, Police Can't Figure How Ravitch Plant Was Wrecked.

The destructive explosion which occurred early yesterday morning in the structural iron works plant in Harlem of Ravitch Brothers, who have had trouble with the Housesmiths' Union, was still being carefully investigated last night by the Fire Department and the police. If dynamite was not used to wreck the place the investigators do not know what could have torn the foundry.

The explosion occurred in the most valuable machinery of the plant, a large compressed air machine. This was torn to pieces with the exception of the air tank itself, which stands unharmed. Had the explosion been caused by any defect in this apparatus, it would have come from the overcharging of the reservoir, it is believed, and this would have been blown to pieces.

As far as could be ascertained yesterday the fire that followed the explosion, as described in yesterday's TIMES, did not cause the explosion, nor did the explosion cause the fire. Battalion Chief Larkin said that the explosion occurred immediately after the alarm had been sent in and before the engines arrived. When he reached the plant he found the fire blazing in the woodwork and roof on the 136th Street side of the building, near the entrance, while the destroyed machinery was on the 137th Street side, in the corner toward Madison Avenue, the wreckage at that time not having been reached by the flames.

The machinery, which supplies the pneumatic pipes used in riveting construction material put together in the plant, is bulky and intricate. A huge fly wheel, which was not in use at the time, was blown apart, the heavy rim falling unbroken from its shattered iron spokes. Other parts of the machinery were blown through a sixteen-inch wall of brick and through the roof, making two huge holes where the flying iron passed. If dynamite was used, a large quantity was set off, judging by the damage done and particularly by the great gap in the stout wall.

The plant is of brick and steel, the only woodwork in it being the roof, and a platform with a tiny office built between the roof and the ground. Chief Larkin says that the fire evidently started in the little office and spread to the roof.

The story told by the night watchman, Charles Schroeder, that he was called to the telephone after midnight and told that his home was afire and his people in danger and that he hastened to his home, is substantiated by the owner of the house at 134 East Fortieth Street where Schroeder does janitor's work and where he lives with his mother.

The owner said that Schroeder rushed into the house toward morning and told of this message, and when he realized that it was a false call and that his mother, who lives in the house with him, was not hurt, he returned to the plant in Harlem, to find it in ruins.

David Gravitch, the head of the foundry firm, was almost in tears over his troubles since the first of the year, when he talked to a TIMES reporter yesterday.

"On Jan. 1," he said, "all my outside men walked out of their jobs without giving me a word of warning. I had them at work on Public School No. 81. I hired only good American freemen, and didn't care whether they belonged to the union or not. I believe in unions, but am not content to pay a man who can only do a dollar's worth of work a day what I have to pay the better class of men.

"After the strike of the outside men of the Housesmiths' Union I employed others. The strikers tried to assault my hoisting engineer and warned him to give up his job. Then, on Washington's Birthday they blew up my derricks with dynamite, and the fuses were found, but none of the dynamiters. I don't know if dynamite has been used here. I can't say that because I'm not an expert.

"It is a shame that such things can happen in a free country where the people are educated. You would look for it in Russia, where they are oppressed and ignorant. Here they won't work, they won't let others work, and then they blow us up. All my inside men are now out of work."

Mr. Gravitch's automobile was wrecked in the fire.

IRONWORKER STRUCK DOWN.

Knocked Unconscious on Elevated Platform—Assailant Not Seen.

Frederick Fink, 45 years old, an ironworker living at 149 East Eighty-fourth Street, was found unconscious on the downtown platform of the elevated road station at Eighty-fourth Street and Third Avenue last night by the ticket chopper. Blood was flowing from a wound on Fink's head.

When the man had been restored to consciousness by Dr. Baird of the Presbyterian Hospital, he said that he had been waiting for a train, and, as far as he knew, was the only passenger on the platform when he was struck down from behind. The ticket chopper at that moment was inside the waiting room, and from his position at the window the ticket seller was unable to see the attack.

Nothing was taken from Fink, as would probably have been done had the motive for the attack been robbery, and Fink believes that the assault had some connection with the strike now on among the iron workers of the city. He was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital, where it was said that his injuries were not serious.

GOMPERS MAY END STRIKE.

Federation President Coming Here to See Building Trades Leaders.

It is expected that Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, will be in this city to-morrow, and that he will confer with the representatives of the building trades unions in reference to a settlement of the strike of the Housesmiths' Union against the Allied Iron Associations.

Some time ago it was decided by the unions to ask Mr. Gompers to call a special meeting of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor in this city to get the unions under the arbitration agreement to work with non-union housesmiths, the open shop having been declared by the Allied Iron Associations in the housesmiths' trade. Since then, however, the unions under the arbitration agreement have decided not to strike in sympathy, but to stand by the agreement.

FIGURES TO ANSWER MINERS.

Operators Preparing Statistics—Exodus of Foreign Workers.

Action on the demands of the anthracite mine workers was staved off yesterday by the anthracite operators committee of seven, which met at 143 Liberty Street, pending the report of a sub-committee which was appointed at the meeting to investigate statistics bearing on the demands. The meeting was held in the office of President E. B. Thomas of the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

The sub-committee, it was said, consists of George F. Baer, President of the Jersey Central Railroad, and David Willcox, President of the Delaware & Hudson Company.

It was learned, however, that in order to meet the statements of the mine workers that the anthracite operators were unusually prosperous since the strike of 1902, and therefore can afford an advance of wages, the operators have had men collecting statistics at the collieries to show that they cannot afford an increase.

Four or five thousand foreign mine workers from Europe, who believe there will be a strike, are preparing to go to Europe for several months, where they can live cheaply. The first instalment consisting of 1,100 Hungarians and Slavs, arrived here yesterday by the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad to take passage for Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, but only 730 could find room. The rest will go by the Chemnitz, which sails to-morrow.

Dissatisfied Girl Runs Away.

The police have sent out a general alarm for 15-year-old Albertina Weinz of 338 East 153d Street, who ran away from home on Monday morning and has not since been heard of. The girl's parents say she looked much older than she really was, and that she was dissatisfied with the place they had procured for her with a dyeing and cleaning company.

MARCH 1906

DOUMA TO BE HELPLESS AGAINST CZAR'S WILL

Imperial Veto Absolute—Emperor Controls Upper House.

MINISTERS CAN MAKE LAWS

Have Power to Legislate When Parliament Is Not Sitting—Matters Kept from the Assembly.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 6.—An imperial manifesto and imperial ukases have been published setting forth the decisions of the Council at Tsarskoe-Selo in regard to the carrying out of the Czar's manifesto of last Oct. 30.

The manifesto and laws throw a flood of light on the purpose of the Government to keep a firm check on Parliament and to exclude certain subjects from consideration by the people's representatives.

It is provided that the two bodies which are to compose the Russian Parliament, the Council of the Empire and the Douma, or National Assembly, shall be convoked and prorogued annually by imperial ukase.

Only bills passed by both bodies may be submitted for the Emperor's sanction.

Bills rejected by the Emperor cannot be brought forward again in the course of the same session of Parliament.

Bills rejected by one of the legislative bodies will require imperial assent before being reintroduced.

During suspension of the sittings of the National Assembly the Council of Ministers, should extraordinary circumstances arise calling for legislative action, may refer to the Emperor for his decision such measures as do not involve a change in the fundamental laws of the empire. The power of such a law ceases if, two months after the National Assembly has resumed its sittings, no bill embodying the provisions contained in the act is brought forward or if such bill has been rejected by either Parliamentary body.

As Parliament is subject to dissolution by imperial ukase, the Government is thus in a position in time of stress to rid itself of an obnoxious Legislature and proclaim such laws as it deems necessary.

A feature of the law which seems effectually to bar "Reds" from membership in the National Assembly is a provision exacting from persons elected an oath of fidelity to "Emperor, Autocrat, and Holy Russia."

The most significant article, however, is one retaining certain provisions of an existing law which is mentioned only by number. This innocent-looking provision is far reaching, placing beyond the jurisdiction of Parliament and consigning to existing commissions of the Council of the Empire, composed solely of members appointed by the Crown, the consideration of the following subjects:

1. Reports of the Minister of Finance upon the state of the Treasury.
2. Charges of malfeasance against members of the Council of the Empire, Ministers, Governors General, and Commanders in Chief of land or sea forces.
3. The establishment of stock companies with special privileges.
4. Questions relating to entailed estates, titles of nobility, &c.

The Council of the Empire will consist of an equal number of elected members and members nominated by the Emperor.

Both Parliamentary bodies will have equal legislative powers in initiating legislation and in other matters. Both bodies may annul the election of any of their members.

The elective members of the Council of the Empire are eligible for a period of nine years. One-third of them will be re-elected triennially.

Each Zemstvo is privileged to elect a member, six members will be returned by the Holy Synod of the Orthodox Church, six by the Academy of Sciences and Universities, twelve by the Bourses of Commerce and Industry, eighteen by the nobility, and six by the landed proprietors of Poland.

All the members of the Council must be over 40 years old and baccalaureates. The President and Vice President will be appointed by the Emperor. Elective members will receive $12.50 daily during the session.

The composition of the Council of the Empire, with one-half appointed by the Emperor and twenty-four elected from the nobility and clergy, seems to insure a conservative majority in the Council to block the National Assembly should the majority of the latter be in opposition to the Crown.

The sittings of both the National Assembly and the Council of the Empire will be public. The closure of a debate may be voted by a majority.

Ministers will be eligible to election to the National Assembly.

Laws voted by the two bodies will be submitted for imperial sanction by the President of the Council of the Empire.

The members of both bodies are immune from arrest during the session, except by permission of the bodies to which they belong, unless guilty of flagrant offenses.

The manifesto concludes with the declaration that the Emperor firmly hopes that the participation of representatives of the people in the Government will contribute to the economic welfare of the empire and strengthen the unity of Russia.

BOMB FACTORY DISCOVERED.

120 Loaded Bombs Seized and 20 Reds Captured.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 6.—A bomb factory was raided by the police to-day at the lodgings of a druggist. One hundred and twenty loaded bombs were seized.

The apartments had been the rendezvous of students and Revolutionists, twenty of whom were captured. Another Terrorist, who was arrested in the street, had a bomb in his pocket.

Linevitch Home; No Enthusiasm.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 6.—Lieut. Gen. Linevitch arrived in St. Petersburg to-day. Lieut. Gen. Rudiger, Minister of War, and a few military officers were at the station to welcome him, but no demonstration was arranged in his honor. His reception was cold.

FATAL RIOTING IN FRANCE.

Clericals Succeed in Preventing Taking of Church Inventories.

PARIS, March 6.—Serious rioting occurred to-day at several provincial towns in the course of the inventorying of Church property under the law providing for the separation of Church and State.

At Boeschope, near Dunkirk, a manifestant was shot dead and the Government Commissioner was wounded.

Churches at Bressuire, Belfort, and Charleville were strongly barricaded and crowded with demonstrators, who prevented the making of inventories by burning sulphur and throwing lime in the faces of the gendarmes.

ABSOLUTE CALM; 200 ARRESTS

Dispatch from Montevideo Describes the Conditions in Uruguay.

MONTEVIDEO, March 6.—It is officially announced that absolute quiet prevails throughout the Republic.

Over 200 leaders of the Nationalist Party have been arrested.

The Democracia, organ of the Nationalists, has been suspended by the Censor.

GUARDIAN FOR ROYAL DUKE.

Paul Frederick of Schwerin Has Been Spending Too Much Money.

SCHWERIN, March 6.—A decree of the Grand Duke Frederick Francis was gazetted to-day placing his uncle, Duke Paul Frederick, and the latter's wife, the Princess Marie of Windisch-Graetz, under guardianship.

Only Paragraph 6 of the Laws of the Empire is mentioned as the ground for this action. Mental weakness, drunkenness, and extravagance are recited by the paragraph as sufficient reasons for placing adults under guardianship. It is understood that extravagance is the cause in this case.

Master of the Horse von Stenglin has been appointed guardian of the Duke and Duchess.

Grand Duke Frederick Francis is one of the richest of the European heads of States, but his uncles are not so well provided with money. One of them, the youngest brother of Duke Paul Frederick, is Prince Henry of the Netherlands, husband of Queen Wilhelmina, and the Dutch Government makes an annual allowance to him. A sister of Duke Paul Frederick is the wife of the Grand Duke Vladimir of Russia.

Duke Paul Frederick is 53 years old. He was married in 1881 to Princess Marie of Windisch-Graetz. In 1884 the Duke renounced all hereditary rights to the throne of the Grand Duchy on behalf of himself and his descendants and became a Roman Catholic.

CHINA OFFENDED BY US.

Our Military Measures Regarded as Showing Unfriendly Policy.

PEKING, March 6.—The Chinese Government is greatly perturbed by the reports of anti-foreign movements printed in the American and European press, and particularly by the dispatches announcing America's preparations for a military expedition in case of need. These reports, it is alleged, tend to embarrass the Foreign Ministers and create strained relations between them and the Chinese officials. The reports of American military preparations are regarded as a manifestation of an unfriendly policy.

A long edict published in The Official Gazette to-day, after referring to the warlike reports, declares that they are circulated by traitors who wish to separate China from her friends. Continuing, the edict points out the great difficulties which confront China at present and the strong need for maintaining friendly relations with the powers, reproves Chinese students for meddling with politics, and orders the officials, high and low, thoroughly to protect the lives and property of foreigners under pain of the most severe punishment.

A strong force of the troops of Viceroy Yuan Shi-Kai has been sent to the southern part of the Province of Pe-chi-Li, where the people have been threatening the Christians.

PORTO RICO'S CHURCH STATUS

Question as to Which Congregation the Island Is Now Under.

ROME, March 6.—The vacancy in the Bishopric of Porto Rico through the appointment of the Right Rev. James H. Blenk as Archbishop of New Orleans has given rise to an important ecclesiastical question, namely, whether Porto Rico is under the jurisdiction of the Congregation of the Propaganda or of the Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs.

With the exception of Canada and the United States, which are under the Congregation of the Propaganda, as they were originally missionary lands, the American Continent is under the Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, being originally Spanish or Portuguese colonies. This was the case with Porto Rico, but, having been annexed to the United States, its status may be changed. The nomination of the new Bishop will definitely settle the question.

PRINCESS ENA IN SPAIN.

Ceremonies of Betrothal and Conversion to be Held To-day.

SAN SEBASTIAN, March 6.—King Alfonso and Princess Ena of Battenberg arrived here together this morning, preparatory to the ceremony to-morrow at which the King will formally ask for the hand of the Princess and receive the assent of King Edward.

The royal party was awaited at the station by the Dowager Queen Christina and other members of the royal family, the Mayor, and a great crowd of people, who accorded an enthusiastic welcome to the King and his fiancée. One man called for cheers for liberty, and was immediately arrested.

King Edward will arrive here to-morrow. The ceremony of the conversion of the Princess will precede the betrothal.

CHINESE DIGNITARIES DUE.

Second Imperial Commission Will Arrive Here This Morning.

A delegation composed of twenty-three members of the second Chinese Imperial Investigating Commission, which reached America on the Great Northern steamship Dakota on Feb. 28, will arrive at the Grand Central Station this morning from Chicago. They left for the East yesterday morning on a special train.

The commission is headed by Prince Tsai-Tse. It includes His Excellency Chi Heng, Governor of Shangtung Province; His Excellency Li Cheng To, Chinese Minister to Belgium; Lady Ying De Chu, one of the foremost women of China, and about thirty secretaries and servants.

TO REVISE A. O. U. W. RATES.

State Grand Lodge Plan to Prevent Future Deficiencies.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 6.—The New York State Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, in special session here, to-day voted to revise the insurance rates put into effect by the Supreme Council on Jan. 1, 1904. The revision plans call for an advance for the younger members and more satisfactory options for the older members.

It is proposed by the readjustment of rates to prevent future deficiencies and make the grand lodge virtually independent of the supreme lodge guarantee fund.

RIVER OPEN TO NEWBURG.

Central Hudson Steamboat Company Makes an Early Start.

River traffic is now open to Newburg. The Central Hudson Steamboat Company, owing to the unusually open Winter, determined to start earlier than last year, and the steamer Ramsdell made her first regular trip from this city to Newburg Monday, the steamer Newburg leaving the latter point for New York at the same time.

Neither boat encountered sufficient ice to hamper it, and it is expected that within the next two or three days their trips will be extended to Poughkeepsie.

DEMOCRATIC RATE PLAN FAVORED BY ROOSEVELT

Bailey Has Proposed a New Court Review Amendment.

RATES TO BE COMPENSATORY

Would Give Power to Inquire Into Railway Extravagance—President Works with Democrats.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Senator Bailey of Texas, the Democratic leader in the Senate, has proposed a court review amendment to the Rate bill, and has received the approval of the President for his plan. His amendment, besides providing for supervision by the courts, would raise the whole question of the economy of railway management by declaring the power of the Inter-State Commerce Commission to fix rates that would be "justly compensatory" instead of "remunerative," as in the present bill.

Mr. Bailey urges that if the bill is left as at present it will be possible for a railroad to defend a high rate on the ground that it is only remunerative, when in fact the road is conducted extravagantly and the rate is far from just. Under the language he would use it would be possible to bring up the whole question of economy in management.

Railroad officials and managers, it is said, are often interested in car construction companies, and sell cars to their own companies at a high price. Rates are based on such investments. The point will also be pressed that a railroad running through a sparsely settled country and not doing a profitable business shall not impose on its patrons high rates in order to make dividends on a small business.

This view was presented to the President through Senators Dolliver and Clapp, who see Mr. Roosevelt every day and report developments in the rate fight, and who are on the friendliest terms with the Democratic leaders. Under these circumstances the Democrats are never in any doubt about how the President views their opinions.

It is understood that Mr. Roosevelt views Senator Bailey's proposition with more satisfaction than any amendment thus far proposed. This amendment would be included in a court review amendment on which Mr. Bailey has been in consultation with Senator Tillman, who is in charge of the rate bill on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. Bailey takes the ground that the law must answer the constitutional requirements that the carrier shall not be deprived of property without due process of law, and also that he must be compensated if his property be taken from him. He therefore believes that the language of the court-review amendment should include words defining the character of the rate in the light of its compensatory value.

Consideration of the rate question goes on with unabated interest from day to day in the Senate. To-day there was much study of Senator Knox's move yesterday in having read and placed in The Record the rate laws of several States. The Pennsylvania Senator said that he did this in order that Senators might have before them the work that had been done by the various State Legislatures along this line.

It was the general comment of Senators that Mr. Knox had edited his extracts from the State laws too much in the interest of his own amendment to the Hepburn bill. The laws of Georgia and Iowa are omitted. These are not so favorably constructed with reference to the court review idea that Mr. Knox desires to have incorporated in the pending bill.

FIGHT ON A HAMBURG LINER.

Pugilistic Passengers on the Deutschland Sent to Their Cabins.

When the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland was off the Newfoundland Banks on her trip to New York a dispute arose between two passengers in the smoking room as to whether her twin screws were both in the stern or one forward and the other astern.

The disputants grew angry when the other passengers suggested that the port side of a steamer was the side from which people disembarked and that starboard was the side of a ship reserved particularly for honeymoon couples and young men and women contemplating matrimony.

"I won't stand for all this nonsense," said one of the men. "They are making fun of us, and if you will come down stairs like a gentleman I'll show you where you are wrong."

"You mean go below, as you are on a ship," said the smart one.

"I mean aloft, to the spinnaker boom, or the scuppers, as you prefer it," was the retort, and the interloper was sent sailing over a table by a right hander. He was up in an instant, game, although one eye was rapidly closing, and a rattling fight resulted. The fighters were separated and confined to their cabins until the ship was nearing port, when, through the good offices of the ship surgeon, they agreed to shake hands.

Passengers who had witnessed the fight refused to give the names of the combatants, saying that they had both behaved splendidly, and that to divulge their names would not be fair.

AUTOMOBILE TEASERS.

A Most Uncomfortable Sort of Road Devised at Chatham, N. J.

Chatham, N. J., has evolved a new scheme for the regulation of automobile scorchers. Within a short time neatly printed signs bearing the legend, "Warning—Raised Crosswalks" will appear about the town.

Broken springs and racked machinery will await the motorists who fail to heed the warning. The crosswalks will be five inches high, constructed of flagstones and cobblestones.

They will be so sloped that vehicles traveling at moderate pace will not be discommoded, but an automobile traveling at, say, forty miles an hour, which strikes one will rise several feet in the air and settle with a shock that will be anything but pleasant to the occupants. The walks will be placed so close together that there will be no chance to get up steam between bumps.

This scheme of stopping automobile speeding has been discussed by different municipalities, but Chatham is the first place to put it in practice.

KANSAS LOSES FIGHT TO BAR STANDARD OIL

Supreme Court Dismisses Suit to Exclude the Company.

COUNSEL HERE ARE JUBILANT

The Same Subsidiary Corporation Involved as in the Missouri Case Heard Here by a Referee.

The suit of the State of Kansas against the Standard Oil Company was dismissed by the Supreme Court of that State on Monday, according to advices received yesterday by the New York legal representatives of the Standard Oil Company. The attorneys for the Standard Oil Company were prepared to go on with the case when it came up on Monday, but the Attorney General of the State, it is said, had no evidence to present to the court, which thereupon dismissed the suit.

This brings to an end, so far as present litigation is concerned, the movement begun about a year ago by Kansas against the Standard Oil Company and re-establishes that corporation in the position it held in Kansas previous to the effort made to bar it from that State.

It is just about a year ago that suit was brought against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, a subsidiary company of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, for forfeiture of its certificate permitting it to carry on business in Kansas. The forfeiture was asked for by the Attorney General on the ground that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was in league with the railroads and with other oil companies carrying on business in Kansas to control the market for oil in that State. The effort of the Attorney General to oust the Standard Oil Company from the State was the outcome of a popular demand.

Special interest attached to the dismissal of this suit by the Kansas courts for the reason that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana also does business for the Standard Oil Company in Missouri. Cases against the Standard Oil Company are now pending in the Missouri courts in the prosecution of which the officials of the Standard Oil Company were recently examined before a commission in this city.

The attack on the Standard Oil Company in Kansas was made at several points. In addition to suits brought against the company, alleging illegal combination in restraint of trade, the Kansas Legislature passed a law enabling the State itself to go into the oil business. This law provided for the establishment of a State refinery to be run in the interest of the people of Kansas. This scheme, however, was brought to naught by the refusal of the State Treasurer to issue bonds for the establishment of this refinery. This refusal brought the matter into the courts, which finally decided that the law providing for the establishment of a State refinery was unconstitutional. It was held by the Kansas courts that, while the State might have the right to engage in public utility undertakings, it could not, under its Constitution, go into a trading business.

This failure of the State refinery plan threw the hopes of the opponents of the Standard Oil Company in Kansas back on the action brought by the Attorney General for the cancellation of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana's certificate in Kansas. This, of course, would have closed the State of Kansas to the Standard Oil Company, and would have given that territory over entirely to other oil companies. The dismissal of this suit by the Supreme Court of Kansas, however, puts an end to the expectation that this action would result in the ousting of the Standard Oil Company from the State.

The companies specifically named in the Missouri case against the Standard Oil Company as being in illegal combination with the Standard Oil Company are not the same companies concerned in the Kansas litigation. The attorneys for the Standard Oil Company, however, consider the grounds on which the two suits were brought as practically identical, so that they attach more importance to the Kansas decision than they would were no similar cases pending against the company in other States.

In the Kansas suit, in addition to alleging that the Standard Oil Company had entered into illegal combination with other companies engaged in the refining and sale of oil, the complainants asserted that arrangements had been entered into with the railroads in Kansas in favor of the Standard Oil Company, which practically prevented competition on the part of independent producers.

NEW PLAN TO OUST ODELL.

Governor Frowns on Ward's Spring Reorganization Scheme.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—National Committeeman William L. Ward of Westchester put before Gov. Higgins to-day another proposition in regard to the State Chairmanship tangle. He told the Governor that he and others favored a reorganization of the committee, and the consequent ousting of Chairman Odell, in the Spring, and did not at all agree with the idea of some of the Governor's advisers to let matters take their course until early in the Autumn.

Mr. Ward did not get any encouragement, for Gov. Higgins, it is generally believed, will take the latter course. His love for Mr. Odell has not grown any stronger, but he has full appreciation of what the ex-Governor can do in the way of blocking legislation if he feels disposed to bend his efforts in that direction. It is pointed out that should any such action on the part of Mr. Odell succeed it would not add any great measure of strength to Gov. Higgins's ambitions for a second term.

Tenement House Bill Again.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—Senator Coggeshall made another attempt to-day to amend the tenement house law relating to the maintenance of bakeries and fat-boiling establishments in tenements. His bill amends the act so that dumbwaiter shafts may be constructed to the first or store floor in such buildings. This bill has bene introduced for the last year or two and has been vigorously opposed by friends of the Tenement House act.

Senate Advances Agnew Gas Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—The Agnew bill, providing for 80-cent gas in the greater part of New York, was advanced to third reading in the Senate to-day, and it is likely to be brought up for final passage during the week, probably to-morrow.

PLEAS FOR SEASIDE PAR

Tuberculosis Hospital Matter Also Before Assembly Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—The Assembly Cities Committee gave another hearing to-day to the Tompkins bill establishing a seaside park at Long Beach. Nassau County raised objections on the general undesirability of an institution sheltering convalescents. Its representatives argued that New York was about to lumber Nassau County with something it could not tax; that it was taking its beach for the sole benefit of New York invalids, and that the city might more consistently seek some other place.

Homer Folks, Dr. W. P. Northrop, Dr. Goldwater, and Dr. John W. Brannan appeared for the measure. Dr. Northrop made a great impression on the committee by a vivid description of the homes in New York to which the hospitals were compelled to return their convalescent children.

Homer Folk said: "One-fifth of all the children born in Manhattan and the Bronx die before the age of two years. These conditions are directly traceable to the absolute lack of proper breathing places."

Commissioner of Charities Hebbard came before the committee to oppose the Wedemeyer bill, which would make the consent of all local boards by a three-fourths vote necessary before New York City could establish tuberculosis hospitals outside Manhattan borough. He believed the Board of Aldermen should be left with absolute power to pass upon the placing of contagious disease hospitals, or in fact any institution of New York City. It came out that New York was to-day carrying the names of 28,000 tuberculosis patients on its rolls.

Ex-Assemblyman Doyle and Assemblyman Wedemeyer spoke in favor of the measure. Assistant Corporation Counsel Gay stated on behalf of the City Administration that it was in favor of the Tompkins bill and opposed to the Wedemeyer bill.

POOL SELLING BILL HEARING.

Big Delegation in Favor of the Measure Expected To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—The Cassidy-Lansing bill to prohibit pool-selling and bookmaking on race tracks and putting the gamblers in the same category with poolroom keepers, has, according to Senator Cassidy, excited more interest throughout the State than any other bill excepting those which relate to the insurance situation. The public hearing on it to-morrow is expected to bring to Albany one of the largest delegations of the year, and addresses will be made showing up the evils of the Percy-Gray law, and the illegality of any measure that makes an act a felony on one side of a fence and lawful on the other side. So far no one opposing the bill has announced his intention of being heard.

SHANAHAN BILL REPORTED.

Anti-Ryan-Belmont Traction Merger Measure Vainly Opposed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—The Shanahan bill, drawn to prevent the consummation of the Ryan-Belmont traction merger, was reported to-day from the Assembly Judiciary Committee, notwithstanding that the combination's best talent was sent here to oppose it, on the ground that it was unconstitutional.

By the bill, "No corporation, domestic or foreign, shall hereafter hold, directly or indirectly, more than 10 percentum of the total amount outstanding of the capital stock of any transportation corporation, or of any corporation holding more than the amount or proportion aforesaid of the stock of any transportation corporation."

It is provided, however, that the section quoted shall not be construed "to prevent the holding of stock heretofore acquired or stock held as collateral only by a moneyed corporation and not voted on by pledge."

The bill provides that shares of stock acquired in violation of the act shall be forfeited to the State.

NEW BILLS IN THE ASSEMBLY.

One Provides for Two Health Commissioners in This City.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—Bills of interest to New York introduced to-day in the Assembly were:

COHALIN—Repealing the act granting land under Pelham Bay to the Harlem River and Port Chester Railroad Company.

DOWLING—Providing for two Health Commissioners in New York, one for Manhattan, Richmond, and the Bronx, the other for Brooklyn and Queens.

DOWLING—Compelling banking corporations and trust companies to have at least $500,000 capital stock if branches are to be maintained.

HARTE—Compelling all street cars in New York to be equipped with heating apparatus whereby a temperature of sixty degrees may be maintained. Failure to comply with the act would be punishable by a fine of $50 per car each day.

Indorse Brackett for Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—Washington County Republicans held their County Convention to-day and indorsed Senator Edgar T. Brackett's candidacy for Governor and Isaac V. Baker for the next member of Congress from the Twenty-second District, which consists of Washington and Rensselaer Counties. Eugene R. Norton of Granville was renominated for Assembly.

Cheap Telephone Bill Recommitted.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—The Assembly to-day recommitted for a hearing and revision the Krulewitch bill making the telephone rates for local messages 5 cents. The Bell Telephone Company's manager in this city asked for a hearing, and the House was disposed to grant his request. The bill was also defective typographically.

Utilities Board Bill Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—The Cities Committee of the Senate reported out to-night Senator Grady's bill creating a Public Utilities Commission for New York City, which is to have general supervision and control of all public utilities, such as gas and electric lighting, telephones and street railways. This is the bill in support of which Charles F. Murphy led a large Tammany delegation to this city two weeks ago.

ASKED A DETAILED REPORT.

Fleicher Made Request at Havana Tobacco Company Meeting.

The Havana Tobacco Company, a subsidiary of the American Tobacco Company, held its annual meeting in Jersey City yesterday. A resolution was offered by John A. Fleicher requesting a detailed report of the company's earnings for the innformation of stockholders. The Chairman had no report to submit. The resolution will be voted on later.

Two other subsidiaries of the trust made public reports at their annual meetings yesterday. The American Snuff Company's report showed net earnings for 1905 of $2,633,550, out of which four dividends of 1½ per cent. were paid on the preferred stock, and four dividends of 2½ per cent. were paid on the common stock.

The remainder, added to the previous surplus after deducting a reserve of $698,273 for working capital, leaves a surplus of $3,252,135 in the company's treasury.

The retiring Directors were re-elected except George B. Wilson, whose place was filled by E. W. Somers.

The statement of the American Cigar Company shows a net income of $1,032,857, compared with $810,371 in the previous fiscal year. No dividends have been paid.

S. P. C. A. MEN HEAR HAINES WILL RESIGN

Nine of the Society's Managers Against Him Now, It's Said.

HE HAS NOTHING TO SAY

And the Head of the Reform Association Doesn't Believe It—Col. Erhardt Discusses His Successor.

"The communication" which President Haines of the A. S. P. C. A. has said he will present to the Board of Managers at a special meeting to-morrow afternoon, according to an authority well acquainted with the inside workings of the society, is the President's resignation, which he has already written. Six members of the Board of Managers have been working for President Haines's resignation for some time, but they hadn't enough support, it is explained. Now it is said that three more have been won to the side of the six, and that the nine have had a little meeting of their own. President Haines, it is also said, was made acquainted with their decision.

President Haines was very busy going from one set of books to another in the magnificent society building at Madison Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street yesterday afternoon. But he stopped long enough to say to a reporter:

"What is it? Oh, about my resignation? Nothing to say, nothing to say."

Arthur Turnure, who is not a member of the society, but who is leading a fight from the outside against President Haines's administration on the ground that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is a public institution, does not believe that Mr. Haines intends to resign. Mr. Turnure believes that the President has the entire machinery of the society so absolutely under his dominion that he does not fear anything from within at all.

If any one is to get at President Haines and force an accounting for the moneys that have poured into the society's treasury for the past fifteen years from bequests and dues and dog taxes, he must work from the outside, says Mr. Turnure, who is the head and front of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Reform Association, which purposes to bring about that accounting. The Reform Association has in it some members of the society which it would reform. It will hold a meeting to-night at the Waldorf-Astoria.

One member of the Board of Managers said last night that he had not the faintest idea what President Haines intended to do. "We never have known what he was doing," went on this member, "and now we are in the dark as to what he is contemplating. Maybe he has fixed up some sort of resignation, but he most likely has a string to it. Speculation on what President Haines may do is idle. Judging from what little past history of the society we know, President Haines will not get out unless he is absolutely forced out."

Col. Joel B. Erhardt, who has long been a member of the Board of Managers, seemed to talk last night on the assumption that President Haines would get out, for he described what kind of man "the new President" should be, while telling about futile attempts in past years to have President Haines give an accounting and about the machinery the President has used to make himself all-powerful within the society.

"Yes, there is to be a special meeting to-morrow afternoon," said Col. Erhardt at the Union League Club. "That will precede the regular meeting at 4 o'clock. The President is to present a communication at the special meeting. Of what it may be I know nothing.

"In the event of the President resigning his successor should not be a Trustee. Moreover, he should be a man well known to the country and a man whose name would be a guarantee of the sane and effective conduct of the society's operations and of the integrity of the system. There is no doubt that the society has lost public confidence, and he who thinks that it hasn't lost caste deceives himself. Under a different management, however, the organization will again rise and a great deal of good will come from it.

"I started some five years ago a move to have the society's accounts and management in general examined into. Nothing came of the move. I determined to stay in the society until I saw it brought back to its old place. Some abused me then, but now a great many believe my way. When I have seen the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals purged and brought again to its high place, to which it will be brought under a new and efficient management, I shall resign, for I belong to several organizations which demand a large part of my time. A new President with character, experience, who is fond of animals, can do wonders with the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"The society has been too close an organization. If any one wanted to join his application went to President Haines, who was the Nominating Committee. The Board of Managers was made up practically by the President. The President is not elected annually; he serves on until he is removed by the Board of Managers, that board which he practically makes up himself.

"I hope that the new management, if there be a new management, will consider a suggestion that has often been made by myself and others, that instead of employing agents at from $1,000 to $1,200 a year, retired and pensioned policemen be employed. They would be glad to work for $500 a year, and they know much more about gathering and presenting evidence than the present set of agents. Moreover, they would command the cooperation of the uniformed police. In that way, I believe, $15,000 annually could be saved over the old system, and that could be used in employing more agents and diminishing cruelty to animals."

GIRDER KILLS WORKMEN.

Failure to Flag a 2d Av. Elevated Train Causes Fatal Accident.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company has had a force of workmen engaged for the past few days in repairing the elevated station at Eightieth Street and Second Avenue. The work has entailed the hoisting of steel girders from the street to the platform, and Charles Hansen of 62 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, was assigned to flag trains in order that they might not collide with them.

Yesterday afternoon a train that was not flagged smashed into a girder, swinging it around so as to strike James Hickey of 1,541 Avenue A upon the head, knocking him to the street, killing him instantly. Coroner Dooley held Hansen and John Anderson of 30 Calumet Street, Brooklyn, a foreman, in $1,000 for examination.

The Correct Models and Their Source

His conceit is apt to blind a man to the true perspective of a proposition. Certain of our contemporaries seem to believe that the mere disposition to do the thing establishes them in a position to provide correct automobile garments and requisites.

They have not the courage to sink self and go to the fountain-head for their models. Perhaps, even if they did go, the fountain-head would be, for them, sadly limited, since the exclusive control of the models which the four recognized master designers of all Europe present is invested in us.

If you would know the innovations which the masters sponsor you may depend upon our collection, which includes the garments from

ACTRESS'S $50,000 SUIT AGAINST DURYEA BEGINS

Miss Madden Says He Made Four Promises to Wed.

BUT MARRIED VIOLA ALLEN

Plaintiff Testifies That Charles Frohman, Al Hayman, and Nathan Straus Helped Her Stage Career.

The trial of Miss Sara Madden's suit to recover $50,000 from Peter Duryea, a horse breeder, of Lexington, Ky., for alleged breach of promise of marriage, was begun before Justice Giegerich, in the Supreme Court, yesterday. Miss Madden is an actress. She appeared in Hoyt's "A Trip to Chinatown," "My Friend from India," and with Rose Coghlan in "Peg Woffington." She is now about 30 years old. Duryea is a tall, thin man, between 50 and 60. He has gray hair and a gray mustache. Both plaintiff and defendant were sufficiently nervous in court yesterday to cause comment on the fact.

Miss Madden says in her complaint that Duryea promised to marry her on four occasions since 1897, and that she has refused other offers of marriage, relying on his promises. On the witness stand she said she had not received the other offers of marriage, but that she had subscribed to the affidavit embodied in her complaint for the reason that she supposed she was swearing to a regular form used in such actions.

Duryea denies that he promised to marry Miss Madden. He is now the husband of Viola Allen, the actress. The marriage took place, it is understood, in August last, but was not announced until a few weeks ago. Madden was formerly associated with W. E. D. Stokes, the owner of the Ansonia Hotel, in the Patchen-Wilkes stock farm, in Kentucky, but the two men are no longer on friendly terms. This was apparent in the examination of talesmen by the defendant's counsel. Duryea is represented by Nathaniel Cohen of Howe & Hummel, while Coffin & Cuvillier appear for Miss Madden.

The plaintiff expects to call Mr. Stokes as a witness, while the defendant may call Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, (formerly Mrs. Stokes,) ex-Fire Commissioner John J. Scannell, Charles Frohman, and Clarence O'Brien, known, also, as "Paddy the Pig."

Miss Madden, who was called to the stand shortly after the trial opened, testified that she had lived at various hotels in this city, and that she and Duryea were known there as Mr. and Mrs. Duryea. She had been ill at the Kentucky stock farm. She had also nursed Duryea there when he was ill.

Miss Madden testified that at the instance of Mr. Duryea, Charles Frohman, Al Hayman, Nathan Straus, and Mr. Scannell had interested themselves in trying to get her a suitable part on the stage.

Many letters written by Mr. Duryea to Miss Madden were put in evidence, without objection on the part of the defendant's counsel. They contained many expressions of endearment, and were apparently written in a great hurry, as they lacked punctuation and were somewhat ungrammatical.

One letter introduced into the case mentions the name of Mabel Gilman, the actress, who figured recently in the domestic trials of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Corey. This letter said in part:

My Dearest Sallie: I have just received your letter of Saturday. You will be very sorry when it is too late for taking things to make you sleep. I forgot to tell you I received a picture of Mabel Gilman, with her name on the back, and a letter from St. Louis. The letter says that she is to play in Cincinnati soon, and she would like to run down of a Saturday night and stay at the farm, and see the lovely filly I named after her. Here are the words as written:

"I understand you have honored me by naming one of your fastest and most beautiful horses after me. I used to live in Kentucky, and if you will not object I would like very much seeing this young filly, and inspect her limbs and general conformation. You will probably remember me. When I am in Cincinnati of a Saturday night I could go down to Lexington on the last train, and stay at the farm until Monday morning, and leave on the 4 A. M. train Monday morning, if invited."

Now, who do you suppose is working up this job on me? Surely this woman would never write such a letter as this to a man she never met in her life. It is some one well posted.

The weather is very disagreeable here to-day, &c.

The trial will be continued to-day.

OCEAN TRAVELERS.

George C. Thomas of Drexel, Morgan & Co. Among Yesterday's Arrivals.

Among the passengers arriving on the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland yesterday was George C. Thomas of Philadelphia, a former partner of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., and now a member of the Philadelphia banking firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co. He was accompanied by Harry F. West, President of the Pennsylvania Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Among the other passengers was Leopold Lehman of New York, who is said to have won a fortune at Monte Carlo. Mr. Lehman would neither deny nor confirm the story of his good fortune. He did not seem unhappy. Another passenger was the Marquis Dusmet di Simours, who married the daughter of the late D. B. Oliver of Pittsburg. The Marquis left on an early train to join his wife and her family at Atlantic City.

In the passenger list of the Vaderland were Dr. W. H. Abdrus, Miss Kathryn Anschultz, A. Carpenter, Joseph Dirick, Mme. Marie Terese Fayon, J. J. Henriquez, Charles W. Hopkins, Louis Hornholtz, Mr. and Mrs. A. Koenig, C. A. and Frederick McFeeley, Dr. H. B. Martin, Mathew Pierrot, Dr. E. A. Scharff, Mr. and Mrs. Vance Thompson, and Miss Otilda Weil.

Among those sailing yesterday morning for Mediterranean ports on the Carpathia were Dr. and Mrs. G. N. Allen, Curtis N. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. John Gilfoyle, Mrs. A. Ogden, Col. and Mrs. W. P. Rend, Dr. W. H. Stummermann, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Ryder, Miss Louise Taylor, Brig. Gen. James N. Wheelan, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Williams, and W. Hugh Walker.

CITY PAVEMENT CONTEST.

Willcox and Others for Bill in Favor of Patent Pavings.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—Rival paving interests had their day before the Assembly Cities Committee to-day upon the Agnew bill, allowing the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York to solicit bids for pavements that are patented. L. Laflin Kellogg appeared against the bill on behalf of the Barber Asphalt Company. He declared there was no asphalt trust, and wound up by declaring that if the way were opened for patented pavements New York would be at the mercy of a paving monopoly.

Postmaster William R. Willcox favored the bill, saying that by it New York might obtain pavements best adapted for certain streets, that the present limitations with regard to pavements was undesirable. John C. Coleman, representing the West End Association; Charles F. Bostwick, Homer Folks, Henry W. Goodrich, and others spoke for the bill.

Quantity Buying

THE POWER FOR USEFULNESS of a great Store like this largely depends on buying in quantities.

Because we buy in vast quantities we can sell at lower prices than stores with less business and less power to assimilate goods.

Because we buy in vast quantities we can, in large measure, direct the manufacture of goods—that is, we can have garments made over our own specifications proved to be right, or we can have them a little better made than when they are intended for the general market.

Because we buy in vast quantities we can show at one time larger assortments than would otherwise be possible, giving a great range for selection.

Not everybody understands these things, and yet they are very vital factors in the Store's good service. A great Store like this can be a power for good if it will be. It can raise standards of manufacture as well as serving the people loyally and carefully. For a great many years there have been satisfactions in this business aside from merely getting goods and selling them.

Cold Storage
For Furs.

OUR COLD DRY AIR Storage Plant has been put in full readiness for the season's use, and we are prepared to receive Furs and fine garments for storage at the smallest prices—guaranteeing, of course, the absolute safety of the articles stored.

New Imported Leather Belts.
Samples : : Much Under Regular Prices.

THAT'S THE WHOLE STORY—except to tell how pretty the new styles are. They were sent over by French manufacturers to coax orders from importers here. Scarcely two Belts alike and no one could doubt for a moment the Parisian origin of every one. A bit of luck that brought them all our way to sell in many cases at almost half the regular prices.

They are made of glove kid and in some instances a cunning arrangement of elastics underneath makes the Belts fit like gloves themselves. The fine, soft kid is shirred and tucked in all sorts of pretty ways, as though to show how pliable the skins are—some of the trimmings are gilt buttons or gilt buckles and slides; other styles are studded with steel. A wide choice of pale grays, tans, blues, coral pink, lavender, as well as white and black, with kid covered, studded buckles.......$2.25 to $7.50

Broad Showing of New Spring Belts.
Both plain and fancy effects in leather—the smartest show, we believe, that has ever been made in Brooklyn. Prices start at 25c. and are low throughout—a black steel studded leather Belt, for example, as low as..98c

INSURANCE INDICTMENTS ASKED FOR BY JEROME

But He Gets the Grand Jury to Request the Court's Advice.

LARCENY CHARGES PREPARED

Judge O'Sullivan Will Reply Soon to Questions About Campaign Gifts—Other Charges Coming Later.

The first open move that District Attorney Jerome has made against the despoilers of the life insurance companies came yesterday in the form of a presentment by the Grand Jury. After listening to a detailed statement by Mr. Jerome in regard to the evidence now available as basis for their investigation of the insurance scandals, that body appeared in open court before Judge Thomas C. O Sullivan of General Sessions. The Grand Jury asked for his ruling on five points bearing on the question of guilt involved in certain transactions testified to before the Armstrong Committee.

The Grand Jury wants to know, and the court has undertaken to tell them in two or three days, whether the contribution by insurance company officials of their companies' money to political campaign funds constitutes larceny under the law both when the contributions are made with and without the approval of Directors and stockholders and when they are made for, and not against, the real or supposed benefit of the companies.

The presentment deals exclusively with political contributions from large corporations and the possibility of making them the basis for criminal prosecution, but it does not specify insurance corporations. So, if the court advises the jury that the cases premised by them furnish warrant for indictments, the Grand Jury's investigation may involve any corporation in this county known to have used some of its funds as some of the insurance companies' money has been used.

Mr. Jerome Defended.

Mr. Jerome would say nothing yesterday on this subject or on any other phase of the impending investigation, but his friends declared that he was planning to strike a blow at the very roots of political corruption, and that the wording of the presentment adopted by the Grand Jury as the foundation stone for their investigation has been prepared by him with great care to lend strength to that blow.

Mr. Jerome's friends also say that from the very start the greatest stumbling block in his way has been the contention of the officials of the implicated corporations that whatever contributions were made by them to political campaign funds were forced from them by the necessity of protecting their enterprises against the depredatory tactics of the politicians. The statutes relating to larceny on the part of corporation officials contain clauses making it imperative for the prosecutor to prove that the acts complained of have been against the interest of the corporations concerned. This has hampered Mr. Jerome, of course.

In answer to the demands made recently that Mr. Jerome act in the insurance cases it was said yesterday that he knew he could get some of the insurance men indicted, but didn't care to do that unless he was sure his case was good. He was determined, one of his friends said, that no clamor should tempt him into a "grandstand play," or into the sacrificing of any certain opportunity to punish the offenders or an ostentatious move that could be checked with the help of the courts in its very incipiency. In other words, this man said, the District Attorney wanted convictions, and not indictments merely that may be thrown out on demurrers as soon as returned, or used as a means of tying up the entire investigation by a fight over technical points.

From now on, it is asserted in behalf of Mr. Jerome, the fight will go on without more delay than may be caused by the interference of routine business. If the ordinary Grand Jury, after disposing of the regular calendar, finds the work too heavy, Mr. Jerome will ask the Supreme Court for a Special Grand Jury or the Governor for an Extraordinary Grand Jury.

Mr. Jerome, it is said, has by no means given all his evidence to this Grand Jury, as such a step would undoubtedly swamp the Grand Jury. He has divided the evidence into certain groups, defined according to the nature of the offense. Before the investigation is ended, it is declared, every phase of the insurance scandal—as well as other scandals not so much talked of—will have been subjected to review by the Grand Jury, the courts, and a trial jury.

If the charge of larceny, based on the campaign contributions by the life insurance companies, does not hold, efforts will be made to find binding indictments for conspiracy, forgery, or bribery.

Other Charges to be Made.

When that phase of the scandal has been exhausted others will come in order. One by one the syndicate dealings, the joint stock accounts, the bribery charges, the question of perjury, the falsification of books and accounts, the "Judge" Hamilton end, the House of Mirth scandal, the making of false reports, and whatever else there be of suspected wrongdoing, will be taken up. Though no word on the matter has been obtained from Mr. Jerome, it is said that he has the hearty backing of both the Governor and the court nearest at hand, General Sessions, and that good speed would be certain but for the crowded state of the calendar in that court.

If, in the present instance, Judge O'Sullivan should rule that the circumstances premised by the Grand Jury constitute a clear case of larceny under the law, all evidence bearing on political contributions by the corporations in general, and by the great life insurance companies in particular, will be placed before the Grand Jury, and indictments for larceny returned as speedily as they can be drawn.

If at any time the Grand Jury should find itself in doubt as to the validity of an indictment, a ruling will be asked for from the court. If the court in any case should decide that the facts submitted do not constitute a criminal offense under the definition of the law, that point will be dropped, temporarily at least, and another one taken up. If the court, on the other hand, decides that a crime has been committed, witnesses will be summoned and steps taken to strengthen the evidence already at hand so far as that is found possible. And every precaution will be taken to insure against any technical error in the return of an indictment.

Grand Jury in Court.

The proceedings in Part I. of General Sessions yesterday were very brief and formal. Court had just opened when Judge O'Sullivan received notification that the Grand Jury had a presentment to make. A few minutes later the twenty-three members of that body, headed by Foreman Van Valkenburgh, marched into the courtroom. The foreman carried the presentment, and read it aloud to the court. Acting District Attorney Nott was present, but Mr. Jerome was not there.

The preamble of the presentment stated in substance that the Grand Jury had been advised by the District Attorney that available evidence proved that some executive officers or Trustees or Directors of large corporations had contributed large sums of money, the property of those corporations, to certain individuals who were to spend them for the interest of political candidates or political parties; and that "the questions of law involved in these transactions were of such character that it would be wise for the Grand Jury to resort to the court for advice." The presentment further said that the Grand Jury was perfectly willing to take up the investigation if assured that the acts referred to constituted a crime, but that it had been advised that to do so would occupy much time that could not be spared from the disposal of ordinary criminal business if the existence of a crime had not been admitted beyond reasonable doubt.

Statement of Facts.

Then the presentment placed before the court this "Statement of Facts":

FIRST STATEMENT OF FACTS.—Assume as a first statement of facts the following: That it can be shown by lawful evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that in the County of New York, within the period of limitation in criminal actions fixed by statute, executive officers or Trustees or Directors of corporations, organized under the laws of the State of New York and doing business in the County of New York, gave property belonging to the corporations of which they were such executive officer, Trustee, or Director, to the representatives of one National political party; that such property was so given within a short time prior to an election at which Representatives in Congress and Federal officers were elected; that the intent with which said property was given by said officers was that the political party in whose aid said property was given should succeed at the polls at the ensuing election, and advocate certain economic doctrines in Federal legislation, such officers then and there believing that it was important that such economic doctrines should be advocated by the Congress and the President of the United States, if the property of the corporation which they represented was to maintain the value which it then and there had, and said officers then and there believing that if the economic doctrines maintained by the opposing National political party should be advocated in Federal legislation and by the President of the United States, the property of the corporations which they represented would be greatly depreciated in value.

SECOND STATEMENT OF FACTS.—Assume all the facts stated in the first statement of facts, save and except that in place of a contribution to one of the National political parties, a similar contribution was made to each of the great National political parties, and that the intent with which it was made was as follows, to wit: With the intent to so ingratiate the corporation in the favor of each of the great political parties that in the future there would either be no Federal legislation affecting the interests of the corporations which they represented, or that, if there was legislation, it should be friendly, or that at least, if there was legislation it should not be hostile, and by legislation friendly or hostile is meant legislation affecting the financial interests of the corporation which they represented.

THIRD STATEMENT OF FACTS.—Assume that persons related to corporations, as described in the first statement of facts, gave a portion of the property of the corporation which they represented to one of the National parties as organized in the State of New York, immediately preceding an election in the State of New York, and that the said property was so given with the intent to so ingratiate the said corporation in the favor of the political party to which it contributed that said political party, if successful in the ensuing campaign, would prevent any legislation or investigation which might affect the pecuniary interests of said corporation, or would secure legislation which would advance the pecuniary interests of said corporation, or would at least prevent the enactment of legislation which would injuriously affect the pecuniary interests of said corporation, or hostile investigation of its affairs.

FOURTH STATEMENT OF FACTS.—Assume the facts set forth in the third statement of facts, save and except that instead of giving the property to one of the National political parties as organized in the State of New York property was given to each of said parties.

Questions Asked.

FIRST QUESTION.—Assuming the facts as stated above, have said executive officers, Trustees, or Directors of such corporations, or any of them, committed the crime of larceny?

SECOND QUESTION.—Assuming the facts as stated above, if said executive officers, Trustees, or Directors of such corporations, or any of them, have not committed the crime of larceny, do the facts show the commission of any other crime, and, if they do, what crime?

THIRD QUESTION.—If the court is of the opinion that, assuming any or all the state of facts above set forth, the crime of larceny has been committed, we desire to be advised by the court if there was any way in which such persons could have been authorized, either by Boards of Directors or Trustees, or by stockholders or policy holders in mutual insurance companies, to do the acts assumed to have been done, so that they would not constitute the crime of larceny?

FOURTH QUESTION.—We are advised by the District Attorney that, if the facts assumed above can be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, and that the intent which governed in the doing of them was the personal advantage of the officer giving the property of the corporation, then and in such case the person so giving the property, if it be given without legal authorization, is guilty of the crime of larceny. At the suggestion of the District Attorney, we desire the advice of the court upon this point.

FIFTH QUESTION.—We further desire the court, if it is of opinion that the District Attorney is correct in the advice to us last above mentioned, to advise us as to the following: Assuming the existence of the state of facts above set forth, if it should appear uncertain to us whether the intent actuating the officers was selfish, or was to serve the interests of the corporation, under the presumption of innocence are we to give the benefit of the doubt to the officer? Assuming the state of facts above set forth to exist, must the intent of the officer giving the property to serve his selfish interests be made to appear before us beyond all reasonable doubt? Assuming the state of facts above set forth to exist, if we have a reasonable doubt as to the question of what the intent or motive of the officer who gave the property of the corporation was, must we give to such officer the benefit of that doubt and not find an indictment against him?

Judge Will Consider.

Judge O'Sullivan replied at length. He began with a reference to the large amount of routine business awaiting the action of the Grand Jury and the necessity of making haste in the disposal of it.

"Considering this question," [of the presentment,] he went on, "aside from its somewhat hypothetical character, it is not a difficult one, and the answer to it, if it were reduced to its simplest proposition, would be from the statutes of the State."

Having quoted the section of the Penal Code defining the crime of larceny, Judge O'Sullivan said in conclusion:

"My advice to you, gentlemen, is that you proceed with the work now in hand, disposing of it as rapidly and as efficiently as possible, that you may come to the consideration of this question, with nothing else to attract your attention or distract you from the performance of this duty. And in the course of a day or two, perhaps at the close of this week or the beginning of the next, the court shall instruct you with regard to the various points and intricate questions, which are of infinite detail, and which will require, perhaps, from time to time, instruction from the court or from the District Attorney."

The Grand Jury left the courtroom immediately afterward, and returned to the consideration of the regular calendar.

It was suggested last night that the presentment may have been decided on by the District Attorney, the Grand Jury, and the court as much for the purpose of giving the public some information on what is going on as to insure the validity of the indictments to be returned sooner or later. The one legal way of letting the public into the secrets of the Grand Jury is offered by a presentment.

BOSTON THE SECOND PORT.

Great Increase in Imports—Protest Against the Differential.

BOSTON, March 6.—In the twentieth annual of the Boston Chamber of Commerce issued to-day it is pointed out that Boston has become re-established as the second port of the country on combined values, taking the place of New Orleans; and that of the aggregate gain of $25,728,809 for Boston last year over 1904, $19,797,350 is credited to imports and only $5,931,450 to exports.

"These figures," says the report, "demonstrate most conclusively the burden under which we labor in our efforts to compete with the differential freight rates enjoyed by Southern Atlantic and Gulf ports on grain and its products carried for export. The justice of Boston's demand for the total abolition of this differential and an entire equality of eastbound rates with the most favored of the Atlantic seaports must be acknowledged."

THINKS CANALS BETTER THAN RATE LEGISLATION

Congressman Ransdell Says More Should Be Spent on Them.

CALLS CONGRESS NIGGARDLY

Speech at the Dinner of the North Side Board of Trade Evokes Enthusiasm.

The development of the waterways of this country as the best means of regulating railroad rates was advocated by Congressman Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana in an after-dinner speech last night at the annual banquet of the North Side Board of Trade in the Bronx.

"Water transportation," said Mr. Ransdell, "is from three to ten times as cheap as rail, and it should be developed to the utmost both as a carrier of freights and a regulator of rates. Wherever we have rivers, canals, and lakes, with good navigation, freights are cheap and there is no demand for rate legislation."

Mr. Ransdell's remarks were wildly cheered by the members of the board and their guests at the dinner. The speaker denounced as niggardly the policy pursued by Congress toward National waterways, and declared that this policy tended to the utter neglect of facilities for water transportation, and resulted in decided detriment to American commerce.

In the course of his speech the Congressman called attention to the cheap freight rates prevalent in France and Germany as a result of the numerous canals of those countries. He also brought forward statistics to show that of the total appropriations for all purposes made by Congress in the last ten years the rivers and harbors had received only 3 per cent., and that only 1 per cent. in addition to that had been appropriated for the promotion of commerce, while 40 per cent. had been expended for the army, the navy, and pension purposes.

The dinner was the twelfth annual dinner of the North Side Board of Trade. In point of attendance it was the most successful in the history of the organization. It was held in the Crotona Casino, on East 169th Street. Olin J. Stephens, President of the board, was toastmaster. The speakers included Congressman Joseph A. Goulden, Controller Metz, and Corporation Counsel Delany.

Three Mayors were present—Mayor Coyne of Yonkers, Mayor Brush of Mount Vernon, and Mayor Clarke of New Rochelle. Mayor McClellan did not attend, but the city was represented by a dozen officials, among them Borough President Haffen of the Bronx and President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen.

Congressman Ransdell, who was the first speaker, said in part:

"Cheap transportation is the greatest problem of the commercial world, and the nation which solves it best and quickest is bound to win in the race for commerce supremacy if other things are equal.

"The wisest piece of statesmanship ever devised and carried out by a State of the Union was the Erie Canal. It made New York City the metropolis of the Nation and has given to the whole State an impetus that will never be checked, and a lead that never will be overtaken. Next to the wisdom of the orginal enterprise is the present great enlargement of this Canal.

"No wiser or more generally beneficial expenditures are made by Congress than those for improving waterways and thereby cheapening freights to every citizen of the Union. For some cause, which I cannot understand, sentiment among the leaders in Congress has not been very favorable to waterway improvement.

"Our commercial interests are not getting a 'square deal.' They must rise up in their might and demand it. Let me cite your own Harlem River for an example. Your project for 15 feet deep, 400 feet wide, and 8 miles long, from the East River to the Hudson, at an estimated cost of $2,700,000, was adopted in 1878.

"On this work $1,320,000 has been spent, and the amount needed to complete it is $1,380,000. It has taken twenty-eight years to finish one-half of it. The last two bills of 1902 and 1905 each carried for it $75,000, or an average of $25,000 a year. At this rate it will take fifty years in addition to the twenty-eight that have already elapsed, and yet your project is one of the most worthy in the Nation."

Controller Metz had a word to say on the question of subways.

"My stand on subways is this," he said: "We want them, and we want them now, not twenty-five years from now—"

"I'm glad I voted for you," shouted one of the diners. Mr. Metz added:

"That's the reason I believe the subways should be built by private concerns, if the city can get the proper terms. If it took the city ten years to build its Hall of Records it would take us fifty years to build a municipal subway. If a private concern can build it in five years, why should not this be done? And, let me add, it is not fair to criticise the men who gave us the present Subway at a time when nobody wanted to touch a subway with a forty foot pole."

FOOD.

CURIOUS CHANGE

Caused by Food.

"A few months ago," writes a N. Y. State woman, "I was the victim of a stomach so disordered that I could eat scarcely any sort of food without suffering great distress. In time an eruption appeared of a most painful nature, which covered my whole body, and which the doctors said was erysipelas, and prescribed for it accordingly.

"Their medicines gave me no relief, however, my condition growing worse day by day. At last it occurred to me that possibly the derangement of my stomach was the cause of the trouble. The doctors said that that organ was like a piece of raw beef.

"I made a complete change in my diet, and put myself on a straight regimen of Grape-Nuts food. In a day or two I began to improve, my digestion gradually came back, all the nervousness and headaches disappeared, and within 10 days the so-called erysipelas passed away and has never returned. Meantime my weight has increased and I can digest food that formerly I could not.

"I can honestly say that Grape-Nuts food constitutes the best diet I ever used." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

March Sale of Medicines & Toilet Goods.

An Annual Demonstration of Leadership—This Year Wider

In Scope and More Notable in Price-Cutting Than Ever Before

THIS sale differs from the ordinary department store medicine and toilet goods sale in just the same way that our enormous, carefully conducted, thoroughly organized, perfectly equipped Drug Store differs from the ordinary "drug department."

If we had any way of making you realize the time, thought and work we put into these sales—the care we take to keep out unworthy goods at any cost—the merciless way we slash at unprotected prices—you would agree with us that this sale is something more than a mere store incident—it is an Event, deserving the capital E.

It Gives Almost an Unrestricted Choice Among All Standard Brands and Qualities of Herbs Brushes Soaps

Medicines Toilet Articles Perfumes
Rubber Goods Toilet Preparations Remedies

The detail following can only hint at the tremendous scope of the movement. The sale is given the entire Main Aisle position of honor, as well as the large Drug Store space itself.

A CAMPAIGN PLANNED AGAINST DOG THIEVES

Dr. Smith Thinks They Are Making Too Good a Living.

HE GOT TIGE BACK, AT A PRICE

Owner Thinks, However, He Has Discovered a Nest of Professional Dog Stealers in Third Av.

For twenty-four hours by the clock the household of Dr. E. E. Smith of 26 East Twenty-ninth Street in general and Clorinda, the colored maid, in particular, mourned the loss of Tige, a ten months old brindle bull terrier with a pedigree. Then after Dr. Smith had advertised a reward of $10 Tige came back—for a consideration. Incidentally Dr. Smith thinks he has discovered a nest of professional dog thieves.

"Some of my friends," said Dr. Smith last night, "who had noticed in the newspapers long lists of dog 'ads,' put in by people who live in this vicinity, warned me to look out for Tige, and sure enough he was gone Sunday afternoon. As I do three or four times every day, I let the dog out at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. When I went out a few minutes later to call him in there was no Tige in sight. As the dog never runs away, I felt sure that somebody had stolen him.

"After putting the 'ads' in the papers I told several of my friends. Every now and then somebody would tell us that he had seen Tige on Third Avenue or Fifth Avenue, or some other thoroughfare, and we would all make tracks for the place mentioned.

"I had given up hope of ever seeing poor Tige again, but at 7 o'clock Monday evening hope was revived, when a smooth young man with sandy hair, who talked with as much finish as Dickens's Mr. Pike, rang the door bell. He had a bull terrier, and asked me if that was my dog. I told him it was not. Then he told me that he had at his home another dog which, he said, answered Tige's description.

"I went with him to a boarding house in Third Avenue, near Twenty-fourth Street, where there were a lot of men sitting around, none of whom you would want to meet on a dark night. We went through a store on the ground floor and up several flights of dirty stairs. In a dingy room I saw Tige chained up with several other dogs. The dog wore a worried look, but when saw me he jumped with joy.

"The man said that while he was turning the corner at Thirty-fourth Street and Broadway Tige had insisted on following another dog which he was leading. That may be so, but I am more inclined to believe that the fellow is making a living collecting rewards for lost dogs. I intend to follow the matter up and, if possible, bring to justice the men who have been stealing valuable dogs in this vicinity for the last few weeks. I paid the man the ten-dollar reward."

SHONTS WOULD NOT TAKE HIS FAMILY TO PANAMA

Never Criticised Wallace for Resigning, He Tells Senators.

WOULD QUIT RAILROAD POST

But Talked It Over with the President and Was Not Told to Do So.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Senators who have been anxious to question Theodore P. Shonts about his retention of the office of President of the Clover Leaf Railroad while Chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, had their chance to-day. Mr. Shonts was on the stand all day before the Senate Canal Committee.

It was brought out that he had discussed his dual activity with President Roosevelt, but had not been told to centre it on canal business. Senators Taliaferro and Morgan evidently intended to show that the President had permitted Mr. Shonts to place his private interests before his interest in the canal, despite the strictures on ex-Chief Engineer Wallace for doing the same thing. Mr. Shonts was brought to the point where he admitted he would refuse to take his family and live in Panama if told to do so by the President. He also explained that he had never criticised Mr. Wallace.

Mr. Shonts was first questioned about the protest of Hudgins and Dumas of New York against the manner in which the great commissary contract was given to Jacob E. Markel of Omaha. Mr. Shonts referred to his letter to the President as giving his idea on the matter.

Mr. Taliaferro then surprised Mr. Shonts by pointing out his declaration to the President that the Markel contract could be canceled on thirty days' notice and asking the witness to point out this provision. The Senator then showed that the Government had no such right. Mr. Shonts then said he had understood there was a "right of cancellation."

"Personally, however," he continued, "I had little to do with preparing the contract. That was done by Mr. Ross"

Mr. Taliaferro asked Mr. Shonts for names of employes and their former railroad connections. The witness mentioned himself as connected with the Clover Leaf Route; Purchasing Agent Ross, the Illinois Central; Auditor Benson, the Southern Pacific, and Chief Engineer Stevens, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific.

Mr. Shonts was asked if he intended to continue with the Clover Leaf.

"Well," he replied, "the President spoke to me about that and I told him that on account of my large holdings I did not want to give up the Presidency. I talked with President Roosevelt more frankly than I am talking with you. I did not want to embarass him. He said he thought there would be no objection to my holding the place if I served without salary; that is, if I was merely the nominal President."

"Then you do not know what your intentions are?" asked Mr. Taliaferro.

"The President will tell me what he wants me to do, I suppose," replied Mr. Shonts.

In response to a question, Mr. Shonts said he was now negotiating to get rid of his interest in the Clover Leaf, but that he did not know how these would terminate.

Mr. Taliaferro attempted to show that the officials named by Mr. Shonts had had intimate relations with transcontinental lines. Mr. Shonts said that the Clover Leaf was not in any way associated with transcontinental lines, but that the other roads mentioned might be regarded as related to transcontinentals, although they would not be so called in "railroad parlance."

Senator Morgan afterward took up the subject of Mr. Shonts's conversation with President Roosevelt. Mr. Shonts's made it clear that the question of disposing of his railroad holdings had not been considered seriously in that interview.

"If the President asked you to resign the Presidency of the Clover Leaf and sell your holdings, would you feel free to resign your Commissionership?" asked Mr. Morgan.

"I never had it presented that way," said the witness. "As long as the President wants me to stay and his agreements with me are carried out, I think I should remain in the employ of the Government."

He explained that by "agreements" he meant that the President had promised him a free hand in carrying out his policies.

Mr. Morgan asked how a letter to him from ex-Chief Engineer Wallace, marked "personal and confidential," got into the hands of William Nelson Cromwell. Mr. Shonts believed he had filed copies of it with the Canal Commission, the Panama Railroad, and with Secretary Taft.

Mr. Morgan, referring to reasons given by Mr. Wallace for not wishing to remain on the Isthmus, asked the witness what he should do if the President told him he must move to the Isthmus and live there and take the members of his family there and compel them to live there.

"I don't know," replied Mr. Shonts. "A man must be just to his family."

"Ought not Mr. Wallace to have the same consideration?" asked Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Shonts said he thought Mr. Wallace had the same right to consideration, and called attention to the fact that he never had criticised Wallace's action.

Mr. Morgan demanded of Mr. Shonts a statement as to what his course would be if the President insisted that he should take his family to the Isthmus, and the witness said he could not afford to do so, because the future prospects of his children would be impaired.

Mr. Shonts concluded with an earnest appeal to the committee to determine the type of canal as soon as possible and legislate in such manner that the Canal Commission may know what to do.

TO CUT OLD MEN'S PAY.

House Members Decide to Limit Clerks Over 65 to $1,000.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—A provision limiting the salaries of Government clerks over 65 years old to $1,000 a year has been attached to the Legislative Appropriation bill which a sub-committee will report to the House Committee on Appropriations on Thursday.

The sub-committee has compiled figures showing that $2,000,000 is paid annually to clerks in Washington over 65 years old, and that 77 per cent. of these clerks receive more than $1,000 annually.

SURROGATE SCORES LAWYER.

Says S. H. Randall Insisted on Contesting Lillie Western's Will.

Because of his relation to a contest of the will of Lillie Western, who was well known in vaudeville, Samuel H. Randall, a lawyer of 70 West Eighty-eighth Street, Manhattan, may have to explain his behavior to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

Miss Western, who died at her home in Brooklyn last December, left an estate valued at $40,000. The beneficiaries are Miss Western's foster mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Woolsey, and Miss Harriet Gates, an intimate friend. Mrs. Woolsey engaged Lawyer Randall to look after her interests, but is said to have been satisfied with its provisions. Randall is alleged to have insisted upon a contest, and when the matter came up for a hearing yesterday asked for an adjournment. In admitting the will to probate Surrogate Church of Brooklyn said to Randall:

"You endeavored to get your client to sign objections to the will, which were based on the allegation that she was one of the next of kin and heirs at law. This, you should have known, was untrue. Despite her statement that she desired no contest, you verified the objections yourself, filed them, and had the case placed on the contested calendar. The papers in this matter will be transmitted to the Appellate Division for such action as it deems advisable."

COMMITTEE AGAINST SMOOT.

Only Four of Fourteen Members Said to Favor Mormon Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—It is said that only four of the thirteen members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections are inclined to favor the retention in the Senate of Reed Smoot of Utah. They are Foraker, Beveridge, Hopkins, and Dillingham.

The Senators who are said to be either directly opposed to Smoot or inclined to favor his expulsion from the Senate are Burrows, the Chairman; Depew, Knox, Dolliver, Pettus, Dubois, Bailey, Overman, and Clark of Arkansas.

It is the present intention of the committee to submit its report not later than April 15, when its immediate consideration will be asked. A report of this sort is privileged, and will take precedence over any other legislation, even the appropriation bills.

The difference of opinion in committee among the majority members who will favor the expulsion of Smoot is over the constitutional requirements. Senator Burrows believes that Smoot's seat can be declared vacant by a majority vote. Senator Bailey cotends that Smoot must be expelled by a two-thirds vote.

No effort has been made to poll the Senate on the Smoot case, but it is believed the vote would be close and it would be impossible to secure a two-thirds majority against the Senator. Therefore the fight is likely to be made along the lines favored by Mr. Burrows.

Mr. Smoot has had a very embarrassing position from the very beginning of this Congress. He is more frequently seen in his seat in the Senate than any member of the body, but never attempts to address the Senate or urge his views upon it. He occasionally reports bills or submits amendments, but is never aggressive. Upon the advice of his friends some months ago he decided to vote his individual sentiments upon all matters which were presented in the Senate.

So far as is known, he has made no attempt to present his case to his colleagues.

AGAR OUT OF POLITICS.

Republicans Didn't Play Fair and Democratic Leader Quit.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, March 6.—John G. Agar, the Democratic leader of New Rochelle, to-day announced his resignation as Chairman of the City Committee and started for his country seat in California. Before he left for the West he announced that he had been tricked by the leaders of the Republican Party.

Mr. Agar, who is a New York lawyer of large fortune, lives in a large mansion on Davenport's Neck. When the Democratic Party was out of favor in New Rochelle four years ago, he succeeded ex-Mayor Michael J. Dillon as leader. He announced at that time that cleanliness in politics and government would be his watchword.

When Mr. Agar entered politics he agreed with the Republican leaders that no money would be expended in purchasing votes on election day. Now, it is said, Mr. Agar declares he was tricked, for no sooner had he entered into this agreement than the Republicans opened their barrel, and kept control of the city government.

John F. Healy, connected with the Grand Rapids Furniture Company, has been chosen to succeed Mr. Agar. Mr. Healy is a practical politician.

GRIGGS TO RUN CAMPAIGN.

Georgia Man Chairman of Democratic Congressional Committee.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Representative J. M. Griggs of Georgia was unanimously chosen Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee to-night at a meeting in the Capitol attended by thirty-one members of the committee. Representative Bowers of Mississippi placed Mr. Griggs in nomination.

TWO NEGROES TO HANG.

Small Found Guilty of Murdering Miss Allinson at Moorestown, N. J.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., March 6.—There will be a double hanging here on March 24, when Rufus Johnson and George Small will be executed for the murder of Miss Florence Allinson at Moorestown on Jan. 18.

Small was declared guilty of murder in the first degree to-night.

ANTI-GAMING BILL STOLEN.

Kentucky House Will Investigate Theft of Poolroom Measure.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 6.—Representative Simmons of Kenton County to-day called attention to the fact that the original and all printed copies of his bill to suppress poolrooms have been stolen from the records of the State Senate.

The House appointed a committee of investigation, with authority to swear witnesses.

Ex-Alderman Held on Nuisance Charge

Ex-Alderman Robert Hall, who keeps a livery stable at 49 East Sixty-second Street, was held in $500 bail yesterday by Magistrate Cornell in the Yorkville Court charged with maintaining a public nuisance. Neighbors complained that he used the street as a carriage yard, washing the vehicles there; that he dumped refuse from the stable into the street, and that the drivers doffed and donned their liveries in public.

The Magistrate expressed sympathy for the complainants.

WAR RUMORS KEPT ALIVE BY GENERAL STAFF—HALE

Senator Believes Army Officers Plan a Descent on China.

BUT ROOT SITS ON THE LID

Republican Leader in Senate to Oppose All Proposals for an Increase in the Army.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Senator Hale, the majority leader in the Senate, to-day named the General Staff of the army as the source of the many rumors of late about war in China. Secretary of War Taft, who was a visitor to the Senate, heard the charge made.

Senator Warren, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, called up the bill for the enlargement and improvement of the Army Medical Corps. Without going into the merits of the bill in particular, Senator Hale opposed it on the broad ground that the army idea needed curbing.

Mr. Hale said that much of the mischief came from the General Staff, which now that it had been called into existence, was busying itself with all sorts of wild ideas looking to war in some quarter of the earth. The idea of increasing the Medical Corps, he urged, was only one of many similar propositions for the general enlargement of the military establishment. There was now no necessity for this, and the Secretary of War was not in favor of it. The scheme came, he thought, from the General Staff, which was the source of many others like it.

"This General Staff," said Mr. Hale, "is amusing itself as the General Staffs of the armies of Europe do with the construction of special problems. There, with armies of 700,000 or 800,000 men, the idea is a useful one in certain cases. With us it is at no time a necessity nor of any particular use.

"We must not think that our General Staff with an army of 60,000 men should take up the work that the officers of the large standing armies of Europe think they should consider. The thing is out of place here where we practically have no great standing army, and there is no danger of invasion or immediate or unforeseen call to make war."

Senator Hale then took up the talk that has been rife in the newspapers for two months past about possible war in China. He said that it came directly from the General Staff, to whom the idea was a great and interesting war problem. The staff has worked out the whole plan for a war in the East and the invasion of China by an American army has been discounted on paper even to the last details.

Mr. Hale said that he had no solicitude on that score, however, "for with the present Secretary of State sitting on the lid I do not believe we are likely to have war with China."

To this Senator Tillman facetiously interposed the objection that if the Secretary of State was "sitting on the lid and the Secretary of War was trying to pry him off, the lid would come off because the latter Secretary had the greater avoirdupois."

Senator Hale seriously replied that, while Secretary Taft had forwarded the recommendations of the staff to Congress, he was not himself committed to their ideas, and the country would be safe so long as he was at the head of the War Department. The presence of a much larger number of troops in the Philippines than had been kept there for several years past was the work, he declared, of the General Staff, whose purpose was, he believed, to send these troops into China whenever occasion required, and this would in effect be a declaration of war if it should occur when Congress was not in session.

Taking up the matter of retirements, Mr. Hale said that more officers had been retired of late than in any similar period, and that it had come to be an abuse. Officers were advanced in grade, and often had held rank but a day or two before they were retired with the higher rank. Thus the burden of the retired list had become greatly increased.

Senators Warren and Pettus defended the bill, urging that it really did not increase the army, and Mr. Pettus cited the work of the Medical Corps of the Japanese army to show that the health of the men and the minimum of disadvantage coming from wounds in battle was due to the excellent organization in the medical branch.

Senator Hale has consistently opposed every form of legislation this session looking to the increase of the army, and in most cases effectively. He will not relinquish his opposition to the Medical Corps bill, and his views are being accepted by a considerable number of Senators.

CANCELS BIG CONTRACTS.

New Public Works Director of Philadelphia Acts Quickly.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—One of the first official acts of Thomas L. Hicks, who was to-day sworn in as Director of Public Works of Philadelphia, succeeding A. Lincoln Acker, was to annul the five contracts held in the name of Daniel J. McNichol for the construction of several parts of the city's filtration system.

The reason given is "collusion, irregularity, and fraud in the procuring an execution of the contracts whereby the city has been wronged and defrauded in its rights and property." The total value of the canceled contracts is $1,976,000.

The McNichol firm, which includes Israel W. Durham and State Senator James P. McNichol, had already completed contract work on the filter plant amounting to more than $12,000,000. The action taken by Director Hicks is the result of an investigation made by the Board of Engineers, of which Major Cassius E. Gillette, Chief of the Bureau of Filtration, is the head.

The McNichol firm will not give up the contracts without a contest.

NO SAVING ON BRITISH ARMY.

Liberal Papers Disappointed—Nation's Defense Bill $330,000,000.

LONDON, Wednesday, March 7.—A memorandum attached to the army estimates was issued last night. It estimates the army expenditure for the current year at $148,630,000, which is a reduction of only $85,000 on the previous year. As in the case of the navy, the new Government has simply adopted the estimates prepared by its predecessor. Including $180,000,000 for the navy, the nation's defense bill is nearly $330,000,000, which destroys any possibility of a large budget surplus or a substantial reduction in taxation.

The Liberal papers are disappointed that the Government has seen no way to effect a greater reduction in national expenditure, which the country naturally hoped for from a Liberal Government pledged to retrenchment.

War Secretary Haldane does not intend to proceed further with ex-War Secretary Arnold-Forster's scheme for the formation of a separate branch of the regular army for home service, with a two years' term of service with the colors. There will be no large scheme for army reforms this year. Provision is made for the formation of a reserve of civilian surgeons, and also for brigading the volunteer infantry, the Brigadiers being responsible for the training and inspection of the volunteers.

The proposed reduction in the establishment is estimated at 5,300 officers and men. The chief causes are the disappearance of the Royal Garrison Artillery at colonial stations, and the reduction of engineers in consequence of the transfer of submarine defenses to navy control.

The memorandum says that as the result of experiments, short rifles are being issued to troops in India and at home, and it is calculated that a year hence all the troops will be thus armed. The rearmament of the artillery will, it is expected, be completed next year.

PRAISE DIRECT PRIMARY AT REFORM CONFERENCES

Speakers Think It Would End Rule by Machines.

FATAL TO SOME CANDIDATES

One Orator Says Platt and Depew Couldn't Have Been Elected, but Would Not Hurt Jerome.

Attended by about 100 delegates from civic organizations and Good Government Clubs in various sections of the country, the second National Conference for the Reform of the Primary and Election Laws and the Corrupt Practices acts, held under the auspices of the National Civic Federation, began its sessions at 203 Broadway yesterday morning. The day was devoted to the reading of papers on and a general discussion of primaries. Every man who talked except one favored the direct system. The business of to-day will include a discussion of the general subject of ballot reform and the Corrupt Practices acts, to be followed by a general interchange of views. Josiah Quincy of Boston presided at the morning meeting and ex-Gov. Franklin Murphy of New Jersey in the afternoon.

The proceedings were enlivened by a speech delivered by Irvine L. Lenroot, Speaker of the Assembly of Wisconsin, who, in arguing for the direct primary, used as an illustration the recent election of District Attorney Jerome and that of the two United States Senators for New York. Some one had suggested that the primary law was valuable to some candidates as an election advertisement and injurious to others.

"The fame of William Travers Jerome has gone into every home in the land," he said. "He is admired the country over as a conspicuous advocate of the clean home and clean government. Such a man would have had an advantage in the direct system had it been in use in New York, and that advantage would never have been detrimental to the interests of the people. Such a man as Jerome never has anything to fear from the people. It is the machine that lies between the candidate and the people that is to be feared.

"Take, on the other hand, the case of your two Senators. They, too, are known the country over wherever current literature is read. Their names are as familiar to the people as that of Jerome, but the sentiment they evoke is somewhat different. Could either of these men be nominated as a candidate for the Senate under a direct primary system? Could they ever have been nominated for such an office? I know they could not in Wisconsin."

"This very conference," declared Oscar S. Straus, "is evidence of the fact that, while we cannot escape the evils that threaten a democracy, we are not blind to their approach, nor shall we lack the will or determination to eradicate them. The fighters against dishonest politics have seldom, if ever, won such signal and precious victories for the moral law as were achieved by Gov. Folk of Missouri, Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia, Senator Colby of New Jersey, by Jerome of New York, and by the Prosecuting Attorney of Boston. Similar victories against long-intrenched bossism were gained under the stimulating helpfulness and uncompromising attitude of Secretary Bonaparte in Maryland and Secretary Taft in Ohio.

"The lessons of the last and many preceding elections accentuated the necessity for reform all along the line, and let us not forget that no political contrivance, however minute and drastic, can serve as a substitute for the indifference of the general body of electors or for the lack of the ever-watchful spirit of unselfish patriotism."

Corporation Counsel John J. Delany, as a representative of Mayor McClellan, delivered a brief speech of welcome, and caused his audience to laugh when, in speaking of New York's future, he admitted that there was room for improvement.

"The opinion of the people, whether good or bad, as expressed at the ballot box, must be upheld," he said, "and the man who dreams for his country and does for her day by day to the best of his ability is, in my opinion, a greater hero than any bloody field ever produced. We have a great city here, probably the greatest in the world. We hope, by persistent effort to make it the best. We acknowledge that there is room for improvement."

Mr. Quincy said that he believed that most of the reforms in the election system could be traced to the Australian ballot system.

Horace E. Deming, a representative of the City Club, read a paper, in which he said that nine out of ten offices now elective should be appointive.

George L. Record, Corporation Counsel of Jersey City, said he believed the primary should be held on the same day as the first day of registry, at the same places as the election, and that voters should be enrolled at the time of the primary.

"I believe that even without money we can beat the bosses a fair part of the time."

William D. Washburn, Jr., of Minnesota, a member of the Minnesota Legislature, praised the Minnesota direct primary and said that the politicians were opposed to it because it did away with the old system of party rewards. Abraham S. Gilbert, a lawyer at 38 Park Row, opposed the system of direct nominations. He favored the New York system, though admitting that it had defects.

At the afternoon session, George Fred Rush of Chicago talked about primary laws in Illinois, and said that one out of every sixteen men in Chicago held a public office of some sort. He said that the free right to elect was not complete without the free right to nominate. After Speaker Lenroot had concluded, Charles R. Russell, Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the Georgia State Assembly, commended the direct primary system in Georgia. He exhibited a sample ballot, containing many party emblems, designating it as a "circus poster."

"It was an amusing bit of paper," he declared, "but I happened to be running opposite the affiliation designated by a horse's head. I told the voters not to 'scratch' my horse, and they understood. Col. Andrew B. Humphrey of the Republican Club questioned the speaker.

"I note," he said, "that this ballot is marked 'white primary.' Was there no primary for the negroes?"

"You forget, Sir," replied Mr. Russell, amid general laughter, "that this was a Democratic primary."

Ex-Gov. Murphy told briefly of conditions in New Jersey, saying that a great majority of the officers of the State were appointive. "The people elect the Governor and the Legislature," he said, "and there they stop. The remainder, as a whole, are appointed. The people are satisfied with this condition and are willing to let it remain."

Following Mr. Murphy's talk came a general discussion of the subject of primaries, in which Col. Humphreys, William H. Wadhams of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District of New York, Frank Hendrick of the Republican Club, and Roswell R. Moss of Elmira participated. Mr. Wadhams urged that the meeting adopt resolutions which might serve as a guide to the sub-committee of the County Republican Committee, which is to report to the full committee on March 15 on the subject of primaries. Col. Humphreys took exception to remarks made by several speakers, who were about to reply, when ex-Gov. Murphy admonished them.

"I think we had better steer clear of the sharp places," said he, "and remember what the meeting was called to discuss."

R. L. Borden, member of the Canadian Parliament, read a paper, in which he declared that education was necessary to the ideal elective system.

A letter from Perry Belmont was read favoring compulsory publication of campaign contributions.

SAILOR, RIBS BROKEN, DIVES AND SAVES MATE

Schooner Manning Gale-Battered and Struck by Lightning.

CREW IN PITIABLE PLIGHT

Drop Into the Sea from Ice-Coated Boom When Steamer Arrives to the Rescue.

BOSTON, March 6.—With two of his ribs beaten in by a shifting deckload of lumber, Ingebard Gjerteen, a Norwegian sailor, dived from the wrecked Mary Manning, a four-masted schooner, in the height of a gale on Saturday last, and saved the life of Joseph Arip of Waretown, N. J., the mate, who had become delirious and jumped overboard.

The other members of the crew, benumbed by the cold and exhausted by lack of food and sleep, were barely able to get the two men aboard. Their condition when at length they were hauled to safety was so grave that it was difficult to keep life in them until the British steamship Casilda picked up the crew on Sunday, after they had been exposed to the elements for 110 hours. The rescue was made 160 miles south by east of the Nantucket South Shoals Lightship.

The Mary Manning was wrecked by a combination of lightning and a gale. She sailed from Fernandina, Fla., with a cargo of yellow pine and railroad ties, on Feb. 21 for New York. Capt. Elias Barr was her master. He had a crew of eight men and one passenger, Joseph Rooney of 467 West Twenty-sixth Street, New York, who had been employed in Fernandina and was on his way home.

Six days out the Manning ran into a gale. It was accompanied by lightning, and before the storm had reached its height a bolt struck the main boom, which broke off, carrying away the mainsail and foretopmast staystail. The vessel was swamped by heavy seas, and all the boats were swept away or smashed. The schooner carried a donkey engine to hoist the sails, but a giant sea flooded the engine room, smashed the forward house, and ruined all the provisions except the canned goods.

The schooner sprunk a leak, but the steam pumps were out of commission, and the crew took refuge on the afterhouse after the vessel became waterlogged. The afterhouse was finally washed away, and the men took refuge on the spanker boom, which was so slippery with ice that they were barely able to cling to it. It was then that the mate jumped overboard and was rescued.

When the Casilda reached the schooner the men were in a state of collapse. They loosened their holds on the boom and dropped into the sea. They were able to give but little account of their experiences when first picked up, but all had nearly recovered when the Casilda made port to-day. The engineer and steward, John Clayton and M. J. Murphy, live in New York.

The Mary Manning was rapidly sinking when last seen.

Suit to Dissolve a Camera Business.

Supreme Court Justice Fitzgerald has appointed J. Henry Muller receiver of the assets of the partnership of John H. and Justus Andrews, doing business as the New York Camera Exchange, at 114 Fulton Street, in a suit brought by John H. against Justus for a dissolution of the partnership on account of a disagreement between them. The bond of the receiver is $10,000. The business was started in 1891, and for three years, to May 1, 1904, they had a branch store at 56 East Twenty-third Street.

A TELEPHONE INQUIRY NOW.

Monopoly Charged with Plundering—Old Contract to be Passed On.

There is to be a telephone investigation by the Board of Aldermen added to the other many investigations that have been started. Alderman C. R. Freeman offered a resolution at yesterday's meeting of the board, calling on the Committee on Laws and Legislation to make such an investigation, and it was adopted without debate.

The resolution cites the necessity of the telephone to the business life, urges competition in the business, states that one company has a monopoly in the local field, charges it with plundering the people, and provides for the investigation of "the conditions of the telephone service in this city, the method of charging subscribers for calls, the reasonableness of the rates, and the powers of the board to control and regulate such matters." The Committee on Laws and Legislation is to meet later in the week to take up the matter and arrange for the first public hearing if it finds from the Corporation Counsel that it has the power to proceed.

Commissioner Ellison of the Department of Water Supply delved down into the old records of his department yesterday and resurrected an application of the New York Electric Lines Company for a permit to construct subways in which to lay telephone wires. Commissioner Ellison then issued a statement on this application, as if it had just been presented, whereas it had been filed with the department in December, while Commissioner Oakley was in office. The Ellison statement recites that the Electric Lines Company was incorporated in 1883, and got an old franchise from the Board of Aldermen of the old city. That has never been used and has been declared invalid by the courts. Now the company is owned by the Great Eastern Telephone Company, an ally of the Atlantic Telephone Company. The Great Eastern wants to use the old franchise instead of taking up a franchise which the Atlantic sought of the city and for which the city asked $7,700,000, payable in installments running over the twenty-five-year franchise period.

Commissioner Ellison says the Great Eastern declares it is ready to engage in the telephone business at once, and wants the right to construct ducts for its wires. Ex-Controller Grout has appeared for the New York Telephone Company with the contention that the New York Electric Lines franchise has lost its legal existence. Commissioner Ellison expects to act on the application soon.

THINKS THE ROAD WILL QUIT.

Unnecessary to Condemn All the Central's Property, Mayor Holds.

Mayor McClellan held a long conference with Corporation Counsel Delany yesterday, discussing the Saxe bill for the removal of the New York Central tracks from Eleventh Avenue and connecting streets. This bill comes before the Mayor next week for a public hearing. It is expected, from what the Mayor has said, that he will sign the measure. He said yesterday that he did not think the city, under the bill, would be obliged to condemn the entire property in order to have the road act. He believes that if the city starts condemnation proceedings against the property, it can stop there, and need not complete the proceedings. He believes the road will do the rest. Anyway, he wants to get the tracks off the west side streets.

TRANSIT BOARD FAVORS ALTERNATIVE BID PLAN

Would Adopt It in Most Cases, Mr. Orr Writes.

THREE BIDS WOULD BE ASKED

For Building the Subways, for Operation, and for Both, He Tells Mr. Cutting.

President R. Fulton Cutting of the Citizens' Union made public last night correspondence between himself and President Alexander E. Orr of the Rapid Transit Commission regarding the attitude of the board toward future rapid transit subway contracts if larger discretionary power is given to that body by the Legislature. President Orr says he believes that the board, under the pending Page bill, would think it wise to call for alternative bids in most instances. Mr. Orr comes out plainly for the Page bill and against the Elsberg bill.

In his letter to President Orr Mr. Cutting says it seems advisable, in view of the state to which rapid transit agitation has progressed, that the Rapid Transit Commission should outline its probable policy in inviting construction and operation bids for future subways if it receives larger powers from the Legislature as proposed in pending measures. He says it seems to him best that bids be invited first, for construction by itself; second, for operation by itself, and third, for construction and operation jointly.

"If it is the purpose of the commission to so invite bids," wrote Mr. Cutting, "it is most important that the public should know it, that it may be assured that it will have an opportunity of itself discriminating between the relative advantages of the respective bids."

Replying, President Orr wrote:

"It would be impossibe for the commission to undertake to answer officially a hypothetical question as to what it would do if the law were changed in some manner not clearly defined. But personally and unofficially I may say that if Senator Page's bill should be passed I believe the Rapid Transit Commission would, in most instances, think it wise to call for alternative bids in the matter you suggest.

"I say, in most cases, because I think that in some instances, as, for example, in the case of a projected road where the amount of business was doubtful, it might be unwise to consider building the road before the tenant was secured. But these are not cases in which the Metropolitan Street Railway Company would be likely to have any interest.

"If the Elsberg bill should be passed, even with such amendments as to give the commission, in form, the discretion to make contracts both for construction and operation, yet, in my judgment, it would be idle to call for alternative bids. The reason is, that the term of a lease being limited under that bill to twenty years, I feel confident that no responsible bidder could be found to undertake both construction and operation. In other words, that bill offers no genuine alternatives.

"I have shown your letter and this reply to most of my colleagues on the commission and am authorized to say that it expresses their views."

WOODBURY INQUIRY HELD UP.

Appropriation for the Investigation Put Over for a Week.

After a lively debate, the Board of Aldermen refused yesterday to vote the $25,000 necessary for the Committee on Street Cleaning to conduct its investigation into the workings of the Department of Street Cleaning under Commissioner Woodbury. The resolution required a unanimous vote for passage, and two members voted against it. At last it was laid over and made a special order for next week, when a unanimous vote will not be required. In the meantime, however, the investigation is blocked.

Prior to the meeting the committee held an executive session, at which it was agreed to ask the board for the $25,000 at once. It also was practically decided to name ex-Assemblyman John Hill Morgan of Brooklyn, partner of James McKeen, as counsel, to be the associate of Bainbridge Colby, who will probably be chief counsel for the investigation if it is ever held.

At the session of the Board, Alderman Meyers, the Republican leader, offered the resolution for the issuance of special revenue bonds to provide the $25,000 needed for the investigation. Alderman "Little Tim" Sullivan immediately got to work. He said the investigation would be partisan and that he was opposed to all investigations. Commissioner Woodbury, he said, did not object to being investigated, however, so he thought the resolution ought to pass. Alderman Dowling said if the committee did not get down to work soon it ought to be disbanded. Alderman Downing of Brooklyn wanted the investigation at once, and said there was certainly graft in the department.

Alderman Olvany opposed the resolution, fearing it was illegal to appropriate the money and fearful that any Alderman voting for it could be held personally liable for the expenditure. This was because President McGowan had declared the Corporation Counsel the legal representative of the board and had questioned the legality of going outside for counsel. Alderman Morris joined Alderman Olvany in his opposition, and they cast the two opposition votes. Sixty-one votes were cast for the appropriation. Next week, when the matter comes up again as a special order, sixty affirmative votes will pass it.

STORM HIT INSURERS HARD.

Last Atlantic Gale Caused $450,000 Damage to Shipping.

It was stated yesterday at the Maritime Exchange that not in ten years had the marine underwriters been as hard hit as they were in the last Atlantic storm. This list of lost and abandoned vessels was given out:

	Value.
City of Gloucester, foundered	$300,000
Eliza J. Pendleton, abandoned	40,000
Millie, wrecked	25,000
Jessie W. Starr, dismasted	20,000
Mary Manning, abandoned	30,000
John S. Deering, foundered	35,000

All but the City of Gloucester were schooners. The City of Gloucester, a British steamer, was laden with 3,000 tons of iron pyrites. She was abandoned last Friday, and her crew saw her founder. The twenty-three men were landed in Boston Monday night by the Norwegian bark Gerd, which rescued them. The steamer was insured for three-fourths of her value.

Capt. Dodge of the schooner Eliza J. Pendleton was picked up 100 miles southeast of Fire Island. He was clinging to a broken spar, and is believed to be the only one to survive of his crew of six. The crew of the Mary Manning was rescued by the steamer Casilda. Four of the crew of the Millie were drowned.

Belmont Injunction Continued.

The preliminary injunction restraining the city from interfering with work on the Belmont tunnel was continued by Justice Blanchard of the Supreme Court yesterday. He holds that any interference with the work, which is being done by the New York & Long Island Railroad Company, would prevent the fulfillment of the contract on time, and that the city cannot suffer by a postponement of final action.

Pond's Extract Soap

ARMOUR & COMPANY, SOLE LICENSEES FROM POND'S EXTRACT CO.

A Message of New Beauty

THIS MESSAGE brings news that is important to you. FIRST news, for never a word of this new aid to beauty has ever been printed before.

To begin with, let us make our announcement:

We are now taking Pond's Extract and making soap with it.

It is called Pond's Extract Soap. Its merits and results have already been proved by months of use, experiments and tests by the experts of our laboratories.

The day this message reaches you the new and better soap will be put on sale for the first time.

We want YOU to be one of the first to prove its special and extraordinary qualities—and the changes that it will make on the toilet-table, the advantages, comforts and benefits that are important to YOU.

Beauty is the first benefit that Pond's Extract Soap offers you—

—Beauty of brightness, freshness and bloom.

Don't think this is the ordinary claim (made to-day by a hundred soaps). We mean not the beauty of cleanliness alone, but a positive physical influence on the complexion—an influence that starts instantaneously, and that any one may feel and see.

Realize clearly what this means. It is going to cause something very like a revolution in the arts of the toilet table.

The cosmetics, creams and lotions, that yesterday were thought to be almost indispensable to beauty-culture, must to-morrow make place for this easier, simpler, more sensible and effective beauty aid—Pond's Extract Soap.

Beauty of complexion depends on the condition of the three delicate layers of your skin, and of the tiny blood-vessels that lie just beneath the surface. The pores and these little blood-vessels act on one another, and their condition is what makes your complexion good or bad, clear or muddy, fresh or oily.

FOR YOU
A Message—an Offer—a Promise—a Pledge
First News of the new—and better Soap—made with Pond's Extract

Nature wants your skin to be clear and beautiful. All that she needs is help and a fair chance. Pond's Extract Soap stimulates the tiny blood-vessels to full and perfect action. It helps the pores to clear themselves of the oil, soil, pigment and the other material that Nature intends should come from the pores, but which should not clog them.

Stimulus—to help Nature—that is the whole secret of the power of Pond's Extract Soap to aid beauty and build a perfect skin—and of its power to heal and soothe.

You can feel the little blood-vessels and the pores take up their proper work. The stimulus is felt at once. Its results are seen almost at once.

No cream, lotion or beauty treatment can work more easily or more gently, or can help Nature more quickly than Pond's Extract Soap.

You don't need any other beauty aid when you use Pond's Extract Soap.

Hard, Woody Branches, Used in Making Ordinary "Witch-Hazel."

Only Young and Tender Twigs Are Used for Making Pond's Extract.

Whether your skin has been harmed by wind, sun, cold or heat, whether it is chapped, chafed, cracking, hard and dry, or whether it is soft, oily, pasty or dark, use Pond's Extract Soap without any other application.

No other beauty aid is so easy as Pond's Extract Soap. Don't rub hard—don't massage, don't boil or steam or "cup." This is all you need do:

—Lather well with Pond's Extract Soap.

—Count sixty.

—Wipe it off.

That is the treatment in a nutshell. Use Pond's Extract Soap every time you wash your face and hands, and—just before you go to bed—make this soft, warm lather of Pond's Extract Soap. Cover the face, hands, arms, neck and shoulders, lathering it well into the pores. Notice that you feel at once the stimulus it gives the skin.

After a minute or two, wipe it off with a soft towel. Don't rinse off the rest of it. Let it remain all night.

To grasp thoroughly the peculiar powers of Pond's Extract Soap and its difference from every other soap, you must know what Pond's Extract itself is, and its difference from every other fluid that claims to be like it.

Pond's Extract (Hammamelis Virginica) is four times as strong as common "witch-hazel." In the Connecticut Valley, where witch-hazel grows wild and flourishes best, farmers cut the bushes at blossom time and bring them to the factory. It is sold by the pound weight.

Only the tender shoots are bought to make Pond's Extract. The thick, hard, woody branches (which weigh the most) are sorted out and rejected.

That trial is all that this new and better soap need ask.

We have spent $18,000.00 for this advertisement (the highest price ever paid for a single advertisement in all the history of advertising).

Think this over. Have you ever read an offer as sweeping and as earnest as this?

What kind of a soap must this be, that we can DARE to make such an offer for it?

Go to your druggist, or to the store where you usually buy toilet articles. Get the one first cake of Pond's Extract Soap.

Begin the test TO-DAY.

Pond's Extract Soap
Armour & Company, Chicago
[Sole Licensees From Pond's Extract Company]

The Pond's Extract Co. has given us the exclusive license to make soap with Pond's Extract. No one else can make it.

And then you must come and see with your own eyes.

The name Armour in soap making stands, and has always stood, for scientific research, new and scientific improvements in process—the scientist's rigid scrutiny of every ounce of materials used, and strictest test of the finished product before it goes out.

We want you to come and see all this for yourself. For ours is a laboratory without any secrets. The ceaseless Care—of scientists, who know what care can do—the Care that started before the first foundations of the laboratory were made—that is the secret of it all. Our laboratory is as open to you as a store would be.

DELINEATOR FOR MARCH

now on the newstands, appears the four-page advertisement, printed in colors, which we reproduce somewhat smaller above. For this the advertiser paid us $18,000.00 for the single insertion. This, together with the eleven full pages to follow during the succeeding eleven months, constitutes what we believe to be the largest one-year's advertising contract ever taken by a single publishing house in all the history of advertising.

We call your attention to it because the supreme value of the Delineator as an advertising medium is proven when one of the very largest advertisers in the world, with the experience of years, chooses the Delineator for this greatest of expenditures. The Delineator goes into a million homes each month; its authority on all matters of fashion and dress, and the closeness of the bond between itself and its readers, has increased during each of its thirty-two years of experience. The March number speaks for itself.

IS IT A DEFIANCE?

There are certain features of the statement made by the German Ambassador at Washington as to the position of his country at the Moroccan Conference that have a disagreeably truculent air. "It was," says Baron VON STERNBURG, "for the specific object of reaching a peaceable arrangement that my Government urged the conference at Algeciras." This is a distinct implication that war was the alternative. No such intimation appears to have been conveyed to France in the course of the preliminary negotiations. It is at least highly improbable that France would, as certainly, mutatis mutandis, Germany would not, have assented to a conference under the pressure of what substantially is a threat. The same intimation is iterated in another passage referring to Germany's recognition of a French preferential position in her frontier regions:

> This concession by Germany was only made because of her earnest desire to do everything consistent with the national honor to bring about a peaceful arrangement. Should Germany now recede further she would appear in the eyes of the world as weak, but also—what is of paramount importance—she would be buying peace at the cost of a great international principle, which the future would prove to be poor economy.

There is also a plain and offensive expression of suspicion of bad faith on the part of France. "Germany believes," says the Ambassador, "that if the control of the bank is placed in the hands of France, [which, by the way, France has not asked,] the equality of economic rights will be forfeited and the open door will soon be closed." And as if this were not sufficiently calculated to arouse ill feeling in a conference professedly seeking peace, the Ambassador proceeds to use language containing a thinly veiled reference to Egypt which is sure to be regarded as offensive and insulting by Great Britain: "Africa shows enough examples of assurances given by civilized nations which have gradually vanished, leaving in their place European protectorates."

No one can tell in advance what turns the policy of the German Emperor may take, but he has chosen a curious method of assuring the world of his peaceful intentions.

MR. MACK'S OPINIONS.

Deputy Commissioner MACK marred his highly becoming act of resignation with a most unbecoming statement of his reasons. That the reasons he gives warranted his resignation, in fact made it compulsory upon him, there can be no sort of doubt. But we think if he had consulted wise friends they would have advised him to restrict his public utterance upon the occasion to the letter he addressed to his chief.

Mr. MACK must now see, what everybody else sees, that he was temperamentally unfitted for the post he held. It was not his business or his duty to determine the policy of the department, yet that is precisely, according to his own statement, what he tried to do. He disagreed with Commissioner BINGHAM as to the punishments inflicted upon policemen for failures and derelictions of duty. Mr. MACK says Commissioner BINGHAM "hadn't a drop of the milk of human kindness in his make-up." He protests that the fine of fifteen days' pay for a failure to patrol, with ten days' pay for absence from reserve roll-call, is excessive. No doubt these penalties are severe, since a fifteen days' fine blocks the path of promotion. But service in the Police Department is not a parlor game, where slight infractions of the rules may be politely passed over. Failure to patrol is manifestly a serious offense. If the offender is found guilty it must be assumed that he had no valid excuse. Probably Police Commissioner BINGHAM concluded that a really deterrent penalty would be a good thing for the discipline of the force. His first act in office was to discontinue the practice of detailing men for espionage, whose duty it was to go about catching policemen off patrol when they could. An increased sternness of penalty is the natural complement of the abolition of a part of the machinery for detecting offenders. At any rate, it was Deputy Commissioner MACK's business to obey, not to argue and oppose.

The Deputy Commissioner insists that there is "politics" in the department. He does not present a satisfactory array of specifications in support of this charge. One of the instances he cites is bad for his case. He is quoted as saying that Capt. DOOLEY "had 160 men under him working against McCLELLAN at Coney Island, and they were determined to 'soak' him the first chance they got." This work "against McCLELLAN" was done during the Mayoralty campaign and on election day, it seems. If what Mr. MACK says is true, Capt. DOOLEY and his 160 men are unfit for police service. This would be equally true had their election labors been directed against Mr. HEARST or against Mr. IVINS. A policeman, be he Captain or patrolman, who permits his zeal for the success or the defeat of a candidate for office to betray him into campaign or election-day activities outside the line of his duty, is not only guilty of flagrant impropriety but exposes himself to injurious suspicions. It is in that way that the "system" would work to shield itself against molestation, and "graft" to secure an extension of its privileges. If Police Commissioner BINGHAM is trying to drive that kind of "politics" out of the Police Department he will have the support of the community.

The case of Mr. MACK should be a warning to the Mayor and to the Police Commissioner. His experience in the department showed that he had not the temperament, his letter showed that he had not the discretion that would have qualified him for the service he undertook to perform. It appears to have been a hasty appointment. There was too little inquiry as to the fitness of the appointee, and in particular as to his capacity to perform his duties without indulging in the luxury of having a "policy" of his own. As to the temper and judgment of the late Deputy Commissioner, his public statement gives all the testimony that is needed.

OUR COAST DEFENSES.

One might, without caviling, justly object to the first sentence of the President's message to Congress: "Our coast defenses, as they existed in 1860, were not surpassed by those of any country." It is inconceivable that the Presidential view should be found to be supported by any professional authority of the date in question. But that is an "obiter dictum" in the message, and of only historical importance. A more serious omission, though also one of no present importance, is that which fails to give credit for the public opinion which produced the "Endicott Board" and its labors to SAMUEL J. TILDEN. As, eminently, a civilian, and a man who could not be supposed to have spent much of his attention upon military affairs, Mr. TILDEN, in his old age, and after his own definitive retirement from politics, could not be supposed to utter a warning to his countrymen about their military unpreparedness, except upon good grounds. For this very reason such a warning, proceeding from him, was much more impressive than if it had proceeded from a much higher technical authority. And it doubtless led to the formation of the Endicott Board and to all the good work which has been done in consequence of that formation.

But the President is none the less thoroughly justified in the practical point his message makes. From time to time such schemes as that of the Endicott Board need revision, by reason of technical changes and advances in the art of war. That is true of any country which has the need of fortifying itself. Such a scheme also needs revision in view of any larger responsibilities which the nation making it may have assumed in the interval. That is very particularly our case. Our insular and our Isthmian "commitments" not only require insular and Isthmian defenses as the part of a prudent patriotism. They also increase the chances of our being compelled to defend our own soil. Especially is this the case when we have determined, as it seems we have, that the Monroe Doctrine of 1820 needs extension to make it applicable to the conditions of 1906.

The report which the President commends to Congress without question embodies the best opinion of the army, and apparently of the navy also, as to our most vulnerable points, and as to the measures required for their protection. It carries, in fact, such a weight of authority that one cannot conceive of its being opposed in Congress, except by members who are anxious to attain a temporary notoriety for themselves, at the public expense, by means of very cheap demagogism. The total estimate, of some fifty millions, is, in the circumstances, of a surprising moderation.

WHY NOT ENFORCE THE LAW?

According to law the Inter-State Commerce Commission is "required to execute and enforce" the provisions of the Inter-State Commerce act. Why does it not do so? Yesterday we had a report of the attempt by a new Sound steamship line to induce the Commission to order railways to do business with it. The attempt is in accord with the qualities denoted by the name of the Enterprise Transportation Company, and there is nothing to be said against it. But when Commissioner KNAPP said that there had been no violation of law it is difficult to see how the Commission's intervention is explained. And it is the more difficult because within the past few days the Supreme Court has handed down a decision in the Citrus Fruit cases which is applicable to this case in principle as well.

The Enterprise Company's grievance is that the railways choose with what connecting lines they will do business, and the Enterprise is not one of them. But Judge PECKHAM said: "The common carrier need not contract to carry beyond its own line. If it agrees to transport beyond its own line it may do so by such lines as it chooses, and may guarantee the through rate on condition that it has the routing." The Commission itself, in the decision rendered within a week in the New England oil case, expressed itself in similar terms: "Every joint rate is a matter of agreement between the parties to it." The Enterprise Company wishes the railways ordered to agree with it. Business by mandamus is an anomaly so singular that the Commission is in agreement with the Supreme Court that it has no authority to order joint rates. Has it nothing else to do that it busies itself with matters doubly decided to be beyond its jurisdiction?

It is to be remarked that whatever grievance shippers may have, none is alleged in the proceeding. There is no complaint of extortion or discrimination between shippers or places. The Enterprise Company merely wants to extend its carriers' business, and seeks to do so by legal process. It does indeed say that its rates are lower than its competitors', and naturally, because the Enterprise Company is a combination of shippers to carry their own goods, and whatever other business comes to them. They are satisfied with themselves, and their procedure is businesslike up to the point where they demand legal assistance in their competition with others. The law very properly requires all shippers' goods to be carried upon terms of equality, but this is a case for requiring all carriers to do business together. This will bear a good deal of arguing. Perhaps it ought to be the law, but it is not the law, and the Supreme Court has overruled the Commission's decision that doing business with chosen connections is pooling. Upon the contrary, the court rules that it prevents rebating, and is in accord with the spirit of the law.

If the Hepburn bill or its substitute were to be enacted to-day would its terms be matter of legal disputation twenty years from now? Does not our experience under the Inter-State Commerce act support the view that the wise way to regulate rates would be to amend and improve discovered defects in the law we have rather than to pile up on the statute books fresh contentious matter?

MR. HAINES'S RESIGNATION.

The memory of HENRY BERGH is still a living force in this community. It has inspired a small number of men and women to devote no small share of their time and a good deal of their toil to the effort to effect a reorganization of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Their labors have covered a period of several years. Their triumph, it appears, is now at hand. There is good reason to believe that Mr. HAINES, the President of the Society, whose administration has been much criticised, is about to tender his resignation. That will clear the way for the work of reconstruction that will impart new vigor to the Society, and, it is hoped, restore it to its old-time usefulness.

The reform which is about to bear this fruit has proceeded entirely from the inside. Serious as have been the dissensions due to President HAINES's acts and policies, they have not hitherto sufficed to array against him a clear majority of his board. His critics and opponents have been in the minority. This situation has now been changed, and Mr. HAINES acts wisely in recognizing the unwisdom of further resistance. Meanwhile an organization wholly outside the Society has undertaken, doubtless with the best intentions in the world, to save the S. P. C. A. from its impending fate and to put it on its feet again. This organization, we believe, is to have a conference or mass meeting to-night. Probably the sincere friends of the Society, and those who are actuated by the humane sentiments which HENRY BERGH made practically effective, will perceive the wisdom of awaiting the fruits of the reform work that has been going on inside the Society. The S. P. C. A. hardly needs two sets of doctors, and, as its own Directors are the family physicians, it is only fair to assume that they understand the constitution and the needs of the patient better than outsiders.

THE SCHOOLS AND THE PEOPLE.

There is much common sense and sound civic spirit in the letter we print this morning from the Rev. HENRY A. STIMSON under the above caption. The writer takes the trouble to lay before the public facts that have come to his personal knowledge as to the honest, practical, and intelligent manner in which appointments are made in the high schools of New York "with absolutely no 'pull' or 'graft,' or suggestion of it," the appointments going "to the best candidates after a perfectly fair and just examination."

We give this communication place the more willingly because there is unfortunately a certain tendency, not yet very strong, in the Board of Education, and an effort outside which is really strong and determined, to adopt a policy the effect of which must be to demoralize this excellent system and to incur the risk of the reintroduction of the old bad methods of personal and political pressure. This is reflected very plainly in the bills before the Legislature protested against by Mr. HENRY W. TAFT, a former member of the Board of Education. These bills aim to concentrate in the board the appointment of the District Superintendents and of the members of the Board of Examiners. The issue here is very clear and simple. Such duties should be in the hands of professional men with a standard and reputation to preserve. They should not be in the hands of the Board of Education, which has not the special knowledge needed and especially has not and cannot have the same sense of accountability. There is still another bill in the same pernicious direction increasing the power of the board over the course of study. The whole tendency is mischievous and should be resisted firmly. We have not hesitated to criticise some of the features of our schools, and shall continue to do so as occasion seems to require, but our criticism is and shall be at least intended to perfect the present system, not to break it down.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Opposed to Peasant Agriculture.

A correspondent of The Richmond Times-Dispatch discusses the Southern labor question with a frankness that is somewhat startling, since he treats as evils developments usually held to be highly desirable. Firmly convinced that the negro is the best, as well as the most convenient, laborer in the South, he is as firmly opposed toward helping—or even permitting, apparently—the negro to become a small farmer. "The main reason," he says, "for the scarcity of labor is that land is continually sold or rented to the very class upon whom we depend for laborers. Were this not the case the negroes would have to labor for others for their living. And as to the matter of animus, I hasten to say that, in my judgment, the natural laborer of the South, the negro, is not improved in his own condition by either buying or renting land. He only becomes a peasant farmer of a very low type, of little use to himself or the country." And the antagonism is not to negro peasants alone: "The immigration of working farmers from whatever section or country is not a proper solution of the difficulty. A working farmer in the South is, for both physical and social reasons, a peasant and undesirable. Such Northern farmers as come here, in the large majority of instances, fail to prosper and return whence they came." What the agricultural South needs, according to this authority, is the re-establishment of the conditions that existed before the war—only with free labor substituted for servile, which will, he declares, involve no increased expense. He believes that the South wants the plantation, not the small farm, and he denies that the old ability to manage the great estate is now lacking. The Italian laborer is condemned because of incompatibility of temper, while "we cannot afford to try any of the races that have become inoculated with union notions and who are so quick to overestimate their contributions to the success of the enterprises upon which they work and demand wages accordingly. If the comparatively prosperous Northern farmers cannot satisfy white laborers, how can we expect to enter the labor market of the world?" All this will be distasteful doctrine to ambitious negroes, both North and South, for they naturally think of the small farm as a step toward better things not to be reached unless that step is taken. The letter, as a whole, is much more interesting than convincing, and yet it evidently contains a lot of fact and sense. A question which it leaves unanswered, however, is that as to the necessary superiority of the man, white or black, condemned to a lifetime of work as a hired laborer, as compared with the more or less independent "peasant" who can become something else and better if he has the ability to rise.

Hurrying Up the Price of Ice.

With the American Ice Company lamenting the serious diminution of its "crop" and other observers declaring that the harvest either has been or might have been about as big as ever, the helpless consumer is reduced to a state of irritated uncertainty as to everything except that prices have already risen, and that they are going higher. Out in the suburbs—to which so many people go with a delusive expectation of decreased living expenses—ice is now 50 cents per hundred pounds, or 10 cents more than it costs in the city, and what it will be by midsummer nobody knows. The dealers, big and little, are evidently going to try to make as much out of a reduced supply as they would have made from a larger one, and, as it will not cost so much to handle it, some will believe or suspect that most of them view the prospect with composure. There is difficulty in discovering the excuse for the present advance in price. The ice gathered has cost no more than that produced in the severest of Winters, except for the freight charges paid on some of it, and that accounts for only a small part of the increase. It is, however, human nature to take advantage of opportunity, and when demand exceeds supply prices always go up, with little or no regard for cost of production. We hear much about the expensiveness of plants for the manufacture of artificial ice, so called, and the great length of time it takes to build such factories. Yet they are not particularly complex, and in other years the "literature" of those who make refrigerating machines told another story. The fact stands out large and plain that for some years past "artificial" ice has successfully competed with the "natural" kind, and people are going to be exceedingly restive if the mildness of the Winter is used as an excuse for exploiting them too relentlessly.

A Warning That Lacks Logic.

President SCHURMAN of Cornell has gravely announced to his freshmen that they will not be allowed to hold their class banquet unless he receives assurances from the sophomores that the latter will allow the innocent function to take place without such molestation of its innocent organizers as would involve "destruction of property, danger to life, and the loss of university work." By a little effort we are able to see something extremely humorous in this proclamation—something that would stand out as particularly funny if it formed an episode in "Alice in Wonderland." We really do not understand why the holding of the freshman banquet should depend upon anything else than its own quality as a good thing or a bad one, and to ban it unless the sophomores will promise not to commit divers felonies and misdemeanors is about as reasonable as it would be for the police to forbid the honest householder to have silver spoons unless the burglars will promise not to steal those pretty and useful utensils. Would it not have been better, or at least as well, if President SCHURMAN had told the freshmen to go ahead with their banquet and had solemnly warned their traditional enemies that he was able to maintain order and intended to do it or to inflict condign punishment on all and sundry who indulged in crime? That would have been an entirely reasonable announcement, and we cannot for the life of us see why anybody should have complained of it. With things as they are, the situation is very curious to the disinterested observer and just a little humiliating to the sober-minded son of Cornell. One may fear, however, that the freshmen would not enjoy a banquet that was entirely safeguarded from molestation half as much as they would one that involved the usual dangers. That is a side of the hazing question which is always ignored by folks who have forgotten that they were ever young—who, perhaps, never were young in anything except years.

A President Is Not a Prisoner.

Before Prof. ALBRECHT WIRTH of Munich arranges a meeting at Kiel between President ROOSEVELT and the Kaiser it would be well for him to inform himself a little better about things American. He seems to be a very well-intentioned person, but when he ascribes diplomatic importance to a coming visit of Mrs. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH to Berlin he needs better support for his theory than the fact that the President's daughter recently accompanied a member of our Cabinet to the Far East. That, he says, gave her journey an "official character," but nobody over here will be able to see how it did, and the failure will make us all smile at the professor in a way not advantageous for the fulfillment of his hopes. He also declares that "the President is not permitted to leave American territory." Not permitted by whom? We know of no law to that effect. There is, indeed, a vague impression that it would not be well for Presidents to pass our own boundaries, and they have all refrained from doing so, we believe, except for brief trips over contiguous bits of the Atlantic Ocean, but, if occasion arose for them to go abroad, they could do so without giving the Constitution a single quiver, and President ROOSEVELT would be just the man to delight in breaking the ancient custom if his inclinations happened to turn that way. What would or could happen if he did is a mystery, to be sure, but one not at all alarming.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The most casual visitor to the galleries of the House this afternoon knew at once that the Indian Appropriation bill was up for discussion because the talk was all about the tariff. It is only on occasions of that sort, when there is no division of opinion about the bill that is up, that there is time for a general delivery of campaign speeches on the old stand-by subject of the tariff. To-day Lacey of Iowa began it. When he had ended his speech, John Sharp Williams got the floor. Several members standing in the aisle in front of Lacey's seat hid the Iowa man from Williams, who asked where he was.

"I have looked so often into that countenance for light, and so often had to look further," he said, "that I should like to see it now."

Lacey accommodatingly moved to a place where Williams could see him, and the Mississippi man went on:

"It used to be said of the Bourbons that they never learned anything and never forgot anything. Under that definition, my friend from Iowa is certainly entitled to claim at least Bourbon royalty. Something about him reminds me of the mule that used to travel round and round in a ring, turning a mill, down in Tennessee. He kept it up year after year, until he got old and blind. Then one night the mill burned down, but the next day the old mule that couldn't see anything at all went back to his place and began to walk round and round that ring, and his countenance bore an expression of good-natured complacency that showed his happiness."

Williams is one of the two minority members of the Committee on Rules, the engine by which the Speaker enforces the Administration's will in the House. The minority members of the committee never have anything to say about what the committee is to do. As Williams once put it, "When they have decided on the outrage they call us in and tell us when they are going to perpetrate it." Williams had made a pleasing reference to the desire of New England for the repeal of the duty on hides.

"Massachusetts, you mean," interjected Mr. Gardner of that State.

"I apologize to Massachusetts," retorted Williams, "for so incautiously including it with the rest of New England.

"I have a bill myself," he went on, "and if I can persuade my friend, the Speaker, and my other friend, the Republican leader on this floor and Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and the majority of the Rules Committee, I may be able to bring it before the House."

"The gentleman is a member of the Committee on Rules," put in Gardner.

"Yes," drawled Williams, "nominally."

The House recognized the thrust with a roar. But Gardner persisted.

"You attend the meetings of that committee," he said.

"I am invited to the séances," returned Williams, "but I am never consulted about the spiritualistic appearances."

Representative Longworth visited the Senate to-day. Fearing the ordeal of congratulations likely to occur he came in very quietly and was well within the chamber before he was seen.

Senator Kean was quick to offer his congratulations, and after him came a dozen or more Senators. Longworth got very red under the volley of remarks that fell upon him. Just as the incident was at the height of its interest the door opened again and in came Prince Cupid of Hawaii.

"Longworth is here," said Kean, "and Cupid came also."

The next moment the young son-in-law of the President was making a hasty flight back toward the south end of the Capitol.

Tacloban a Small Place.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your statement this morning of the relative size of Tacloban as compared with other Philippine towns is open to correction. Tacloban is a rather insignificant village, having, according to the official handbook of the Philippines, published in 1903, a population of 5,226, while by the same authority there are 369 pueblos having a population of more than 6,000. Instead of being the fifth city in the islands it is nearer the three hundred and seventieth.

Less a King Than the President.

From The Toronto Mail and Empire.

Our neighbors are contrasting the King's speech with the President's message, and some of them conclude that under his Majesty there is less of the monarchical principle than under Mr. Roosevelt. Certainly, in England it is the Executive, sustained by Parliament, and, therefore, by the people, that rules. In the United States the head of the State exercises the greater degree of power, and seems to be free from popular supervision. A British Ministry has gone out because the people wanted a change. How could such a thing possibly occur next door?

THE SCHOOL AND THE PEOPLE.

Testimony to the High Character and Efficiency of High School Teachers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In times like these, when there is so much crimination and so much suspicion, it is a privilege, if not a public duty, to bear testimony to the character and efficiency of public servants when the evidence comes in one's way.

I have of late had opportunity to become acquainted with various high school teachers of the first class coming to accept service in our New York City schools. They have borne explicit testimony to these things:

First—There has been absolutely no "pull" or "graft" or suggestion of it in connection with their appointments. Nor in their belief is there any in any appointments of teachers under the present system. The appointments they believe go strictly to the best candidates after a perfectly fair and just examination.

This is not true even in some of the most important of the New England schools.

Second—The compensation here and the terms of the service are such as to make the position to-day the most desirable in the country, and attractive enough to draw the very best teachers from the best positions either in the West or in the East.

Third—The work here is highly specialized, and, though our high schools are still so recent an addition to our public school system as to make them among the newest, if not the very newest, in any important city, the course of study, the system as a whole, and the general administration are such as to cause the Superintendent and his leading associates to rank as among the first educators in the land. I understand that these high-grade teachers are in consequence proud to be associated with them and under their direction.

Fourth—The new high school buildings are so commandingly beautiful and so admirable for the work to be done in them that these new teachers find in them an added inducement to take up service here.

All this accrues to the credit of the Board of Education, and to the staff of administrative officers it has called into the public service under their direction; and, as a private citizen having no connection with them whatever, beyond the general interest which all citizens have in the most important department of our city's life, I am glad to call attention to such facts which come within my observation which may strengthen their position and help to secure that public approval which will guard them against pressure for change, or hostile personal attack. Considering the condition in which we were ten years ago, we owe them public expression of exceptional gratitude.

BIBLE FOR OLD BRUTON CHURCH.

It Was Given by King Edward and the Lecturn by President Roosevelt.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your paper of March 3 you made mention of the gift of a lecturn by the President of the United States to Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, Va. May I say through your paper that the Bible was given by King Edward to Bruton Church, not through Mr. Tucker, as stated, but upon suggestion of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury. The President was approached by the Bishop of Washington, accompanied by Mr. Henry St. George Tucker, President of the Jamestown Exposition, and responded to the suggestion that he would perhaps be glad to contribute the lecturn to hold the Bible to be given by the King of England.

The Bible and lecturn will commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the establishment of English civilization and the English Church, and is given to Bruton Church, Williamsburg, Va., as the direct successor of the Church at Jamestown and the old Court Church of Colonial Virginia.

Rowdyism Unrestrained.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Can our new Police Commissioner offer any explanation of the reign of roughness which seems to prevail in the city, especially in the Subway and elevated cars? From 9 o'clock at night until midnight gangs of rough boys and overgrown rowdies invade the trains, singing, yelling obscene or profane remarks, indulging in horse play, and wholly disregarding the feelings of other passengers, be they women or men. The guards seldom attempt to restrain or even remonstrate with these destroyers of public comfort; on the contrary, they seem to be rather amused by the performance.

A few years ago, when Tammany was "at its worst," a decent woman could ride the length and breadth of the city, running practically no risk of annoyance by word or deed. This is positively not the case to-day. The night stick may have been a menace to popular liberty, but it was more nearly a guarantee of public tranquillity than the infrequent arrest and the still less frequent fine.

We shall have a full-fledged, truculent mob in this town unless its germs are destroyed as soon as they show themselves.

The Public Should Come First.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see Mr. A. J. Haydel's letter regarding the New York Public Library. It seems an extraordinary thing that a vast work of this sort should not be stamped on its face as being the New York Public Library. While the public is indebted to Astor, Lenox, and Tilden for their contributions, still these are secondary to the one great public building erected by New York City and dedicated to the people. Cannot the library Trustees, while giving recognition to Messrs. Astor, Lenox, and Tilden, preserve the predominance of the public? The thought should always be clear that this is a library built by and for the people.

Editor's Bride Thrashes Him.

From The Philadelphia Record.

The honeymoon of Editor Lemuel E. Borden and bride of Calvery, Va., near Woodstock, Shenandoah County, has been suddenly terminated in the most strenuous manner by the bride administering a severe thrashing, during which the groom received two black eyes and numerous other injuries. The trouble continued all day and is supposed to have been caused by some eccentricities of Borden, who is a country lawyer as well as an editor. He wanted his bride to sign a marriage contract, which she had repeatedly refused to do, and after the encounter, from which she emerged unscathed, she boarded the first train for Philadelphia, where she was Mrs. Julia H. Stead prior to her marriage to Borden, on Feb. 11. The editor has been married three times, his first wife dying several years ago. His second bride was obtained from Illinois through a matrimonial paper, as was also Wife No. 3. The other wives, it is said, signed the marriage contracts, whch contained specifically stated agreements regarding their property rights.

PERILOUS GRADE CROSSINGS.

No Protection on New York Central Tracks Above Seventy-second St.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial views this morning on the Eleventh Avenue menace are sound, but in all this talk of Eleventh Avenue, in all this discussion of Eleventh Avenue dangers, the peril to life and limb every day and every hour at the west side grade crossings north of Eleventh Avenue seems to have been ignored.

There are many such crossings between Seventy-second Street and Spuyten Duyvil, but the worst of all is that at Manhattan Street, protected (?) like the others by old-fashioned and inadequate bar gates. The crowds which pass over this crossing to the excursion steamers in Summer and all the year round to and from the West 130th Street ferry rush under these gates directly in front of fast-approaching freight trains, and the escapes every day are nothing short of miraculous. Usually there is not even a policeman on post to keep the people back, and often the locomotive cowcatcher grazes women and children, while the engineer toots his whistle and applies the emergency brakes. This and other grade crossings should be abolished at once by elevating the tracks.

Municipal Court Conditions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I indorse Mr. Maxwell's idea of a central municipal court in each borough. I believe if it were patterned after the Supreme Court and City Court the result would be most beneficial to all parties concerned. The business could be distributed equally among the Judges presiding in different parts, and be an improvement on the overcrowded condition of the calendars which prevails now in some districts. The work of the Judges would be equalized, thus insuring quick results and saving of time on the part of the lawyers and litigants. Another thing, there would be uniformity of attendance on the part of the Judges.

I have found the great majority of the Municipal Court Judges in the different boroughs to be fair, with the sole desire to administer the law impartially, and I have no fear that they will not compare most favorably with any like body of men anywhere.

Let the Children Help.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With the large classes in the public schools it is impossible for teachers to give sufficient attention to individuals and to help the slow pupils to the extent that they require assistance.

Dr. Luther H. Gulick, in his lecture at the West Side Auditorium last Friday evening, mentioned the fact that efficient pupils in physical training are at present coaching those less efficient for the schoolboys' contest which will take place at Madison Square Garden, March 17.

Why not introduce this system of coaching in all studies? In every class there are some children who show particular aptitude in one or two subjects, and these pupils can assist the teachers very materially. Let the children help one another. It would arouse the ambition of those who frequently are not so very slow, but who need a "waking up."

The plan has been tried and it has met with success.

Justice Gaynor for Governor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Democratic Party cannot win this Fall with an ally of captains of industry as its candidate. If Herrick should be the nominee against Higgins, Hearst would win. The discontent which made Hearst its political idol in New York last Fall is not local to that city.

It is not necessary to accept the radicalism of Hearst to meet public opinion, but it is necessary to recognize that before the public service corporations are the people. Their rights stand first, and the Democratic candidate must be one who is known throughout the State as being "against the corporations."

Another on Timbuctoo.

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

Gen. Keifer pauses long enough in his efforts to reduce Southern representation to say, in extenuation of the race riots by his people at Springfield, Ohio, that "most of the acts that have inflamed the white people in Springfield in recent years have been committed by bad negroes who came from Kentucky." Is it possible? But, if true, what of it? The riots were directed by the whites of Springfield against the negroes of Springfield, not because the latter had committed any offense, but simply because they were negroes, and two men who were charged with an offense were also negroes. What difference does it make whether the "bad negroes" hailed from Kentucky, Ohio, or Timbuctoo?

AN IRRESISTIBLY COMIC FARCE FROM THE GERMAN

Francis Wilson in "The Mountain Climber" at the Criterion.

THE COMEDIAN IS DROLL

But Still Too Much Inclined to Excessive Buffooning—May Robson Adds Burlesque Touches.

Montague Sibsey	Francis Wilson
Samuel Midgham	Joseph Allen
Dr. Charles Midgham	George S. Spencer
Arthur Lydbrook	William Lewers
Sidney Ketton	Sidney Rice
Watson Frimley	Grant Mitchell
Oscar Rheinthaler	Joseph Brennan
Sepp Rheinthaler	Harrison Armstrong
Toni	Herbert Marion
Otto Jones	Augustin Duncan
First Deputy	Charles J. Greene
Second Deputy	Walter Dickenson
Mrs. Montague Sibsey	May Robson
Alice	Edith Barker
Betty	Ellen Mortimer
Lena	Angela Keir
Mary	Elsa Garrett

A tumultuous farce, and irresistibly comic, is "The Mountain Climber," adapted from the German of Curt Kratz, and produced by Francis Wilson at the Criterion Theatre last night.

If it has any one fault it is that there is too much to laugh at, that the laughs come so quickly that before the three acts are over the average auditor is likely to find himself tired out by his own cachinnations. That, however, is not a bad fault in farce, and, as must be admitted, it is one that is not too common to this style of play.

The chief idea in "The Mountain Climber" is as old as the hills—or older—but it is handled in such a thoroughly good-humored way and with such capital additions in the way of fresh and amusing incidents that the result is practically new entertainment.

Mr. Montague Sibsey, a puny and pusillanimous suburban gentleman, given to periodic visits to Paris, where he poses as a bachelor and a theatrical maanger, has allowed his wife and daughters to believe that on such occasions he has been mountaineering in Switzerland. In order to lend color to his deception—he is in the oil and color trade, by the way, and lives up to his trade—he has written letters home describing his exploits, these letters having been copied verbatim from a book about the Alps. His wife, overjoyed at her husband's bravery, has the letters published in a little volume, invites her husband's alleged guides from Switzerland, and, to make matters worse, insists that he shall repeat his heroic actions before the admiring eyes of his family.

So much being understood it may be readily imagined that trouble will folow. In the first act it comes in the various guises of admiring friends, to each of whom Mrs. Montague Sibsey has presented a copy of the book a reporter who has been sent to interview the interpid adventurer, and a photographer who insists on converting the drawing room into a miniature Alpine pass by means of tables and chairs piled on top of one another. To the summit of this toppling mountain Sibsey is dragged in great fear and trepidation only to slide down as swiftly and ungracefully as possible.

In the second act his difficulties are increased twofold, first by the fact that he is brought face to face with the man whose book he has cribbed; secondly, because it is now expected that he will make an ascent which no explorer has hitherto been able to assomplish. To detail the manner in which his successive difficulties are overcome need not be recited, especially as to do so would merely rob successive spectators of the fun which comes from the surprises. Sibsey's deceptions, as may be surmised, eventually bring happiness for everybody concerned, including two young couples whose love affairs provide the minor notes of sentiment that run through the piece.

To Francis Wilson, of course, fell the best lines and the best situations, and there was in his performance a good deal of the broad drollery that one has learned to expect of him. In a recital of an encounter with wild beasts at the summit of a mountain crag he was excrutiatingly funny, so funny, in fact, in a quiet, dry sort of way, that one could not help wishing that he could more frequently restrain his natural tendency to buffoon. He is always too anxious to be up and doing, and his strained poses and grotesque gestures, however comic they may be at times, grow tiresome with repetition, even in farce.

May Robson, like Mr. Wilson, created a great amount of laughter as the wife proud of her heroic husband, and expressing her emotions in very bad French. But, like Mr. Wilson, also, she inclines to the broadest possible touches—splashes might be the better word—where more delicacy in handling would bring a better result.

The others were generally competent, Edith Barker and Ellen Mortimer providing the agreeable feminine interest, and the latter being especially happy in a brief love passage in which the sincerity of William Lewers ably seconded her own. Bits were nicely played by Angela Keir and Grant Mitchell.

A novelty is provided at the end by a drop curtain representing the front of Sibsey's house, at the windows of which the chief characters are supposedly listening to a serenade and greeting their friends in the crowd.

"DIE WALKURE" AT THE OPERA

A Fine Performance That Showed More Careful Stage Management.

The second cycle of "Der Ring des Nibelung" was continued at the Metropolitan Opera House, when "Die Walküre" was performed before an audience of good size. Lovers of the Wagnerian drama were delighted with the performance, which showed evidence of a new spirit and a new study in some of the minor but essential details, as well as in the general effect. There was not only dramatic life, but finish in the performance; many points in the stage management showed the work of a new intelligence.

The cast was the same as that which has interpreted the work in previous performances. There were Miss Walker, Miss Fremstad, Mme. Homer, Mr. Burgstaller, Mr. Van Rooy, and Mr. Blass, in the parts with which they have been associated. Miss Fremstad was in especially good form, and her assumption of the poetically dramatic and physically exacting rôle of Sieglinde on the evening after her remarkable performance as Carmen aroused admiration for her versatility as well as for the power that enables her to fill both parts with so complete an identification with their essential characteristics. Miss Walker made a fine Brünnhilde.

Mr. Hertz conducted with splendid energy and with a greater discretion in the matter of the orchestral tone than he has sometimes shown. There was superb effectiveness in many of the critical points of the drama. Some of the scenic details that have brought disaster in previous performances were properly managed, as in the first act, the flickering of the fire and the illumination of the sword hilt sticking from the tree, and in the second the illumination of the fight in the clouds between Hunding and Siegmund.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

A professional matinee of "Twiddle-Twaddle" and "The Squaw Man's Girl of the Golden West" was given at the Weber Music Hall yesterday. Among those present were Blanche Bates, Fritzi Scheff, Edna Wallace Hopper, Blanche Walsh, Julie Opp, Amelia Bingham, Odette Tyler, Elsie Janis, Eleanor Robson, William Faversham, David Belasco, Robert Hilliard, and Frank Keenan.

At the Garrick Theatre to-day "Gallops" will have its first Wednesday matinee at popular prices, the best seats being $1.

A professional matinee of "The College Widow" will be given at the Grand Opera House to-morrow.

THE OLIVE MEAD QUARTET.

Third Concert of the Organization in Mendelssohn Hall.

The third concert of the Olive Mead Quartet was given last evening in Mendelssohn Hall. Their audience, not so large as they deserved, listened to an excellent performance of a programme comprising Beethoven's quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2; Brahms's second violin sonata, Op. 100, and Schumann's quintet in E flat, Op. 44. Mrs. Thomas Tapper, who had not played in New York before, was the pianist in the sonata and the quintet. There was evident in the playing of Miss Mead and her associates a careful preparation, and not only a love for finish, euphony, and fine balance of tone, but the musical feeling, the skill, and the enthusiasm to attain them. The Beethoven quartet was played with delicacy and charm, and with delightful tonal beauty.

Mrs. Tapper is an excellent ensemble player who has a sense of proportion and a sympathetic style; she worked in complete understanding with the string players in the quintet. Spirit and elasticity characterized it. She and Miss Mead gave a beautiful performance of Brahms's beautiful sonata in which lucidity and warmth were united. Miss Mead played in this with breadth and mellow richness of tone, and with a full understanding of the music.

SAFONOFF IN PHILHARMONIC.

The Russian to be Engaged as Society's Permanent Conductor.

At a meeting of the Philharmonic Society, held yesterday morning, it was decided to abandon the policy of engaging noted foreign conductors for its separate concerts, as carried out in the last three seasons. A committee was appointed to confer with Wasilly Safonoff, the noted Russian conductor, and offer him the post of permanent conductor for one, two, or three years. The term of Mr. Safonoff's engagement will be decided by him and the committee.

In order to make Mr. Safonoff's engagement possible, it will be necessary to use a guarantee fund which is now being raised by some of his admirers. There will also be subscriptions from other members of the society.

Mr. Safonoff, who has just conducted with great success a series of concerts in London, has gone to Switzerland to visit his son, who is ill at Davosplatz. It is understood that his compensation with the Philharmonic Society will be $20,000 a season, which is the largest sum ever paid to any conductor in this country. He will devote his services exclusively to the organization.

A NEW CIRCUS SPECTACLE.

"Peace, America's Immortal Triumph," to be Seen at the Garden.

When the Barnum & Bailey show opens at Madison Square Garden on March 22 an entirely new spectacle, which has been in preparation all Winter, will be presented. It is called "Peace, America's Immortal Triumph," and symbolizes the signing of the treaty of peace between Russia and Japan. There are 400 people in the spectacle, and the production is under the stage management of Eolossy Kiralfy.

The spectacle is to serve as an introduction to the regular performances in three rings, a hippodrome track and in the air. Several sensational features on the "Dip of Death" order will be seen. They are said to be "thrillers."

NEW BRIGHTON BEACH PARK.

W. A. Brady Will Open Amusement Resort on May 26.

The land along the West Coney Island beach front, which is to be the site of the out-door amusement enterprise to be directed by William A. Brady, passed from the Brighton Beach Improvement Company to the possession of the Brighton Beach Development Company on March 1. The new resort is to be known as the Brighton Beach Park, and will open on May 26. Amusements of all kinds will be provided.

Grand Opera at New Rochelle.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., March 6.—Mme. Mantelli and her English grand opera company gave their initial performance of "Il Trovatore" at the New Rochelle Theatre to-night before a large and enthusiastic audience of music lovers. Mme. Mantelli was heard in her famous rôle of Azcuna, the gypsy; Mme. Noldi sang Leonora, and James F. Roach sang Manrico.

500th Time of "The Music Master."

The five hundredth performance of "The Music Master," in which David Warfield has been starring in this city for two seasons, was celebrated at the Bijou Theatre last evening. The house was packed to the doors and enthusiasm was at full tide. Mr. Warfield was compelled to make a short speech. David Belasco, who was in the audience, spoke a few words, too.

Manager Brady Still Talking.

"The Redskin" was still being produced at the Liberty Theatre last evening, with William A. Brady making speeches about the critics between the acts.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The engagement was announced yesterday of Miss Rosalie Tone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Wolfe Tone, to Roe Tyson, son of Robert F. Tyson. The wedding will probably take place in the Autumn. Miss Tone made her début a little over a year ago.

⁂

The wedding of Miss Catherine Cossit Dodge, daughter of Mrs. George Egleston Dodge of New York and Tuxedo, to John Shillito Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pendleton Rogers, will take place on Wednesday, April 18, at 3:30 o'clock, in the Brick Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street. Miss Dodge, who is a granddaughter of William Earl Dodge, has asked the Misses Emily Rogers, Susan McCook, Eunice Terry, Sybil Kane, Evelyn Sloane, and Miss Hopkins of Washington to be her bridesmaids. Mr. Rogers's best man will be his brother, H. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., and the ushers are to be R. Bayard Cutting, Frederic Kernochan, Henry R. Taylor, Frederic Juilliard, Bradish Johnson, and Beverly Robinson.

⁂

Miss Critten and Mr. Sherley were members of the Taft party to the Philippines.

CALL FOR POLICEWOMEN TO PROTECT THE BOYS

Why Not? Asks Mrs. Goldzier, "Clubwoman" of Bayonne.

WRITES TO MAYOR ABOUT IT

Women's Clubs Radiate Moral and Spiritual Improvement and Men's Don't — Which Proves It.

A police force composed entirely of women is what Bayonne, N. J., is going to have if Mrs. Julia Goldzier of 26 East Forty-fifth Street, that city, wife of a New York lawyer, can bring it about. Mrs. Goldzier sent to Mayor Pierre Garven a letter urging the appointment of policewomen, and telling what a lot of good such a body could accomplish.

Mrs. Goldzier is a Christian Scientist as well as a member of several women's clubs. Some time ago she caused a stir by declaring that it was her "absent treatment" which aided the Newark Bay Boat Club's whist team to win a glorious victory. In her letter to Mayor Garven she said:

"I desire to call your attention to the pathetic degeneration of our youth, especially our boys. Even those of refined parents are loutish, sickly, sunken-chested, slouchy in gait, and have a general run-down appearance. Blame is placed on the parents, particularly the mothers. They are told that they gossip too much or are too much engrossed in their houses. Blame is placed on the women's clubs, and finally it is charged that mothers allow their sons' interests to grow away from their own.

"These reasons are all invalid. Self-sacrifice is still practiced by women instead of improvements substituted by men. The children are neglected not because of the women's clubs, but because women do not club together enough. Men's clubs are bad for the men and the children. They are places for holding smoking and drinking bouts, gambling, and general licentiousness. They should be discouraged, for they interfere with domesticity and waste time and money necessary for the family.

"Women's clubs are places for moral, mental, and spiritual improvement which can but conduce to domestic felicity and aptitude for the proper rearing of children.

"It would be a small extension of authority to organize a police system to protect our children, our most precious possession. We employ women to teach our children, and it would be no startling innovation to employ women as guardians over our children. When the children are at home or in school they are safe.

"All the mischief is done in the streets, and it is to the interest of the community that they be safely guarded on the streets as elsewhere. Policemen patrol our streets to protect property. Why should not policewomen patrol the streets for the protection of our boys? Nothing can be said against it but its novelty. Better citizens would result, and the standard of living would be raised. Policewomen could readily enter into the boys' games, and the much needed feminine influence would be exercised upon the minds of the young.

"Bayonne could make a wonderful name for itself by introducing policewomen. It would be an everlasting glory to the city to have policewomen mingle with the boys in their games and watch over them. An immortal fame awaits the pioneer in this movement."

Mayor Garven, strange to say, took a chance of missing immortal fame by declining to treat with Mrs. Golzier for the establishment of a force of policewomen. He discovered last night at the meeting of the City Council that his correspondent had gone over his head and laid her proposition before the city fathers. The Democratic minority was inclined to ask the Republican majority to do something about it, but the Republicans succeeded in burying the proposal in the Committee on Public Charities.

"I guess the scheme's all right," said the Mayor to a TIMES reporter later, "but if we ever get that force and if it's put up to me to see that the female police force of Bayonne runs along smoothly and without factional dissensions, I quit."

Bayonne's ninety-five policemen, who would have to stay at home and do the washing and cooking if their wives landed their jobs, are standing solidly with the Mayor.

YIDDISH POET STRICKEN.

Author of "Songs of Ghetto" Paralyzed in the Leg and Arm.

Morris Rosenfeld, the Yiddish poet and author of "Songs of the Ghetto," is ill with paralysis at the New York Surgical and Physical Hospital, 465 Lexington Avenue. He was taken there a few days ago with his right arm and leg afflicted, and although his case is considered serious his physicians think that with a year's rest he will recover. His doctors say that in that time he will not be able to write a line.

Rosenfeld worked in an east side sweatshop. He has no income, but admirers of his literary work, including Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes, who was Miss Rose Pastor, have taken an interest in his case and will see that he wants for nothing.

Rosenfeld is well known on the east side, and two of his Yiddish plays, "The Last Chief Priest" and "The Rabbi of Prag," were played in the east side theatres this Winter. His "Songs of the Ghetto" were translated into English by Prof. Leo Wiener of Harvard, and into German, French, Polish, Russian, Hungarian, Roumanian, and Bohemian by others. Mrs. Stokes is now engaged on a new English version of the songs. An edition de luxe was published in German. In 1904 he published a collection of all his poems. Among them are "The Jewish May," a negative verse, the moral of which is that everything blossoms for everybody except the Jew, whose Spring is yet to come; "On the Bosom of the Ocean," typifying the feelings of the Jew who is deported from America because he has not enough money to land, and "The Jewish Soldier," a picture of the spirit of a Jew killed at Plevna in the war between Russia and Turkey, in which the Jew climbs the fortress and protests against the persecution of a race which has fought Russia's battles. He has also written many prose articles and sketches and a life of Heine, the German poet.

Rosenfeld is 40 years old, and came to America from Russia, after having worked in the Whitechapel district in London as a tailor.

To Act Against Smoke Creators.

The Board of Health is again after the creators of the smoke nuisance. At to-day's meeting radical measures will be passed upon for doing away with the use of soft coal. The board may even revive an old section of the law changed during the Low administration by the advice of Corporation Counsel George L. Rives.

SALE OF PAINTINGS.

Works of Gay, Chapman, Blenner, and Others Will Be Offered.

A lot of modern paintings will be disposed of to-night at 8:15 o'clock in the Silo Galleries, 366 Fifth Avenue, under the management of Mr. William Clausen. To-night's collection is made up of paintings by Mr. Edward Gay, who is now away on a visit to Greece; Mr. Carlton T. Chapman, the painter of marines; Mr. Carle Blenner, delineator of potent pretty girls; Mr. William A. Coffin, and Mr. Henry Ihlefeld. There are not quite fourscore of these figures, landscapes, and marines.

One of the best is a water color by Chapman, A. N. A., called "The Derelict." Similar in subject, but different in treatment, is "Abandoned Ship," while the long array of sea fights to which the painter has devoted himself is represented by a couple of frigates of a hundred years ago in a state of collapse, "After the Battle." Mr. Chapman's Summers at Narragansett Pier are recalled by several views of Bass Rock and Indian Rock. There are pictures by him from St. Malo, Brittany. One or two moonlight landscapes by Coffin are notable, also some snowscapes under sunset effects. The miniature drawing and sweet coloring which Mr. Blenner gives his ideal pictures of young women are sure to bring them plenty of patrons. It is certainly remarkable how he manages to vary the pose of these ladies, who really have no more individuality or life than the Du Maurier or Gibson type of woman.

Friday night in the same galleries some threescore American paintings will be sold for William Clausen by Mr. Silo. Here will be an occasion to get a water color by Samuel Colman, a painter not half as highly appreciated as his merit deserves, and a chance to secure Frederick Kost's "Fishing for Sea Bass," an excellent shorescape with solitary longshoreman standing on a dock intent on sport. Several highly colored sunsets by George H. Bogert come up on Friday; also "The Philosopher," interior by Verplanck Birney," two sunsets by Bruce Crane, head by Carroll Beckwith, landscapes from the White Mountains and Adirondacks by the late George Inness and J. F. Kensett, views by Leonard Ochtman, a landscape by William Sartain, and other notable pictures.

Saturday evening there will be a further sale of Mr. Clausen's gathering of American pictures, including "October Afternoon," by E. H. Potthast; a moonlight by Charles H. Davis, N. A.; two landscapes by the late Robert C. Minor, N. A.; a "Moonrise" by Leonard Ochtman, and landscapes by Arthur Parton, George H. McCord, William Hart, D. J. Gue, C. C. Griswold, H. W. Ranger, E. S. Hamilton, Peter Rudell, William H. Howe, and the late George Inness, as well as by George Inness, Jr.

Thursday evening and Saturday afternoon there will be sales here of old engravings and color prints, etchings and mezzotints, also many sporting prints, such as are so much the vogue nowadays, and an assortment of mirror and picture frames elaborately or simply carved.

Owing to the rush of auctioneers to get all the sales into a few months of the Winter season, these pictures are likely to rule low, and good bargains are pretty certain.

A CAESAR OF MARRIAGE, HE.

Brooklyn Man Came and Saw and Conquered All in Four Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, March 6.—Percy Irvine, Treasurer of the Montauk Theatre, Brooklyn, made a record for marriage when he came to this city on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock and left four hours later with a bride. He took a stroll on the boardwalk immediately upon his arrival, then took dinner with Miss Rose Hart, when he met here last Summer while he was Treasurer of the Steeplechase Pier. At 7:15 he proposed to Miss Hart and was accepted. At 7:20 he had received the consent of Miss Hart's mother to the wedding. At 7:25 he started out to look for a preacher, and there is where he was almost stalled.

Every preacher was in his pulpit, and at 7:40 there was a dark cloud on the horizon. At 7:45 he proposed to his bride-to-be that they be married by a Justice of the Peace rather than be balked in their plan, and she consented. At 7:50 they started for the home of Justice of the Peace Harry Williams, and at 7:55 they were quietly wedded. They jumped into a cab and were whirled to the Pennsylvania Railroad station, where they arrived just in time to jump on the end of the last car of the 8 o'clock and last train out of the city.

HIGH BAIL FOR CHAUFFEURS.

Coroners Demand $5,000 Hereafter When Automobiles Kill Anybody.

Coroner Harburger announced yesterday that hereafter when chauffeurs who had run over and killed other persons with their machines were arraigned before him they would be held in $5,000 bail and not in a small amount. He said he proposed to compel those who could afford automobiles to put up a large amount of bail to compel the appearance of their chauffeurs at the time the inquest is held.

The Coroner was considering the case of Perecatti Attillo of 217 Sullivan Street, chauffeur for Peter Cooper Hewitt, who ran over and killed thirteen-year-old Robert Claudot in front of his home at 247 West Twenty-ninth Street, on Monday night.

Mr. Hewitt was in court with $1,000 in cash expecting that that amount would be fixed as bail. Coroner Harburger surprised everybody in court by placing the bail at $5,000. Mr. Hewitt pleaded for a smaller amount, and at last it was fixed at $3,000. Mr. Hewitt did not have that much in cash so he offered as security the Van Deusen Farm in Bronxville, which he recently purchased and which he said was valued at $20,000. This was accepted and the chauffeur was released.

Mr. Hewitt wasn't quite certain about the present name of the farm. What he was sure of was that at one time it was known as "Spy Farm," because it was owned by the man who informed on Major André.

TRUMAN S. GILLETT DEAD.

Former New York Politician Passes Away in Chicago, Aged 82.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Truman S. Gillett, once prominent in New York State politics, died here to-day, aged 82 years.

During the civil war Mr. Gillett was sent to London by President Lincoln on an important missio.

As a journalist he was connected with New York and Albany newspapers. Mr. Gillett came to Chicago in 1863 and engaged in the paper business, retiring several years ago.

No Penalty for Marrying a Minor.

Judge Carrick in Jersey City yesterday decided a suit brought by Michael Reuss of Paterson against the Rev. Arney S. Biddle in favor of the pastor. On Jan. 3 Mr. Biddle married Teresa Reuss, plaintiff's daughter, to James Winters. Alleging that his daughter was only 17, Reuss sued for $300 under a statute imposing that penalty in a case where a minor marries a girl under 18 without her father's consent.

PICTURES BY RUSSIANS SELL AT LOW FIGURES

Only $6,158 for 77 Works Sold by Auction.

HIGHEST PRICE OF SALE $420

Experts Valued the Painting at $4,000—Landscapes at Small Prices.

New Yorkers had a chance to buy pictures at low prices last night. It was the first evening of the sale of the collection of Russian paintings shown at the St. Louis Exposition. Large canvases and big gilt frames have seldom gone for lower prices, to say nothing of the work of the artists. A total of $6,158 was brought in by the 77 oils, water colors, and pastels sold last evening.

J. Dunbar Wright, the artist, paid the highest price of the evening, $420, for a picture, "Two Peasant Women," by P. D. Schmaroff. The works of a number of the Russian artists sent over, Verestchagin, Makofsky, and others, were not in competition, but of the painters competing for prizes, Schmaroff, whose name is prominent in Russian art circles, was one of three who received gold medals at the Exposition. The "Two Peasant Women" was a picture of brilliant coloring, a large unfinished sketch apparently. Mr. Wright said that in many ways he considered Schmaroff the equal of Sargent, and he was much pleased with his purchase, which Russian experts said was worth $4,000 at the lowest estimate in Russia.

"Leaving Church" brought the second highest price of the evening, going to E. I. Marshall of Rochester for $295. A portrait of the Hebrew scholar and philanthropist, Rabbi Itsok Elkhanon, went to David L. Friedman for $150. "The Sayan Mountains on the Frontier of Russia and China in the Spring," by Mrs. Mary Pedoshenko-Tretiakoff, went to F. Haines for $240, and I. Cabor paid $200 for a "Light Night in Finland," by A. F. Haush. "Garden of Meditation," a peculiar painting by M. P. Latree, brought $210.

A number of attractive landscapes which sold low were "End of Day," "Evening Calm," "Among the Reeds," &c., good-sized canvases by Risnitchenko, which went for from $40 to $70. A gruesome picture by Miss Julia Stankevitch was "Life and Death." This showed a skull half buried in the earth with a lily of the valley, bright green leaves, and pure white blossom, growing from the mouth. It brought $55. "Studies of Russian Girls," by Baboot, brought from $25 to $50 odd.

The sale will be continued to-night, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, when the more important pictures will be sold.

HUDSON'S MAYOR DROPS DEAD

William S. Hallenbeck Stricken While Going to His Office.

HUDSON, N. Y., March 6.—William S. Hallenbeck, Mayor of this city, dropped dead to-day while on his way to his office in the Municipal Building. He was 67 years old.

Mr. Hallenbeck was serving a three-year term as Mayor, and had previously served in several public offices, including City Superintendent of Schools, City Clerk, and County Clerk for two terms.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Henry Joseph Ruggles.

Henry Joseph Ruggles, son the late Philo Ruggles, died last night at his residence, 238 East Thirteenth Street. He was 92 years old.

Mr. Ruggles was the last of a generation conspicuously identified with the history of New York before 1860. He and his brothers, Samuel B. and Philo T. Ruggles, secured Union Square to the city, founded Gramercy Park, laid out and named Lexington Avenue, and did much to further the building of the Erie Canal and the Erie Railroad.

Mr. Ruggles was born in Milford, Conn., in 1813. After graduating from Columbia College in 1832, he studied law in his brother's office, and later practiced for some years in this city. Since 1866 he had devoted his time to Shakespearean criticism. He published two books, "The Method of Shakespeare as an Artist" and "The Plays of Shakespeare Founded in Literary Forms."

Major George H. Hopkins.

DETROIT, Mich., March 6.—Major George H. Hopkins, former department commander of the G. A. R., died to-day at his home in this city. He was 64 years of age. In 1862 he enlisted in the Seventeenth Regiment, Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and served throughout the war. He then studied law and was admitted to the bar. For four years he was private secretary to Gov. John J. Bagley. He was elected a member of the State Legislature in 1878, from Detroit, was re-elected in 1880 and 1882, and appointed Collector of Customs at the Port of Detroit by President Harrison in January, 1890.

A. L. Knight.

A. L. Knight of 72 East Seventy-seventh Street, founder of the firm of A. L. Knight & Co. of 11 Ferry Street, died yesterday at Roosevelt Hospital after an illness of six weeks. Mr. Knight was New York's pioneer wholesale oil dealer. He was born in Cleveland in 1837. Mr. Knight leaves a widow, Kate Palen Knight, and three daughters, Mrs. Charles H. Stuart, Mrs. Philip McKim Garrison, and Miss Grace Arnold Knight. He served in the civil war as a member of the Seventh Regiment, and was one of the original members of the Union League Club. His funeral will be held at St. James's Church, Seventy-first Street and Madison Avenue, Thursday morning.

Obituary Notes.

WILLIAM HENRY BOUCHER, the illustrator of Robert Louis Stevenson's novels, died in England yesterday.

The Rev. JOSEPH F. McDONOUGH, pastor of St. Michael's Church in Providence, R. I., died there yesterday of typhoid fever. Father McDonough was 53 years of age.

FERDINAND BOULON, a veteran Long Island florist, died at his home in Sea Cliff, L. I., yesterday. Mr. Boulon was 65 years old. He was a member of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, and had aided in beautifying the large country estate of many of the colony at Glen Cove, Roslyn, and Wheatley Hills.

CRANMER C. LANGILL, who died on Monday at his home, 65 West Eleventh Street, was a well-known photographer, and had a studio at 10 East Fourteenth Street. He was 46 years old and a member of the Salmagundi and Kit Kat Clubs, the Professional Photographers' Society, and Howard Lodge of Free Masons.

Mrs. EMILY M. ELIOT, widow of Samuel Eliot, one time President of Trinity College and Principal of the Boston Latin School, died suddenly yesterday in Boston. Mrs. Eliot was born in Boston in 1832, and was a descendant of one of the oldest families of the city, being fifth in descent from James Otis. Her father was William F. Otis, and her mother was a member of the Marshall family.

WILLIAM C. DOUBLEDAY, a bond broker at 33 Nassau Street, died of heart disease at his home, 9 Belmont Avenue, Jersey City, on Monday. He was born at Sandy Hill, N. Y., on March 16, 1851. For fifteen years he was secretary of the North Hudson County Railway Company, resigning that post at the time of the absorption of the company by the Public Service Corporation.

A LADY IN WAITING

By CHARLES WOODCOCK SAVAGE.

The heroine of this novel of the French Revolution has just left the convent at the beginning of the book. She is a proud little aristocrat to the tips of her fingers. In her diary she tells of her first love affair revealing her girlish thoughts. She is separated from her lover by her jealous sister, and goes to Paris to become a lady-in-waiting to the Queen. Then follows the Revolution, the loss of all her family, her escape from Paris in the disguise of a boy, and her final reunion with her lover in the United States.

D. Appleton & Company, Publishers, New York.

There is a manufacturer who is to-day using a list of mediums reaching five million people. He began four years ago with a forty-two-line ad. in THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL. The forty-two-line outline was a tentative one, not made in any sure consciousness that it would be a good investment. Step by step this manufacturer scaled the advertising heights, until now he is greatly disappointed in not being able to buy a back cover of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL at five thousand dollars. He is more willing to spend this five thousand dollars as only a part of his appropriation for a month than he was to spend two hundred and fifty-two dollars when it was his entire appropriation for a year.

This shows, first, the strong, increasing consciousness on the part of a good advertiser that an advertising appropriation is a wise investment, and second, that a large expenditure is small when the full value is delivered.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The lake region area of high pressure is rapidly moving off to sea over the Middle Atlantic Coast. The plateau region high pressure has not altered its position within the last twenty-four hours.

In the middle and lower Mississippi Valley a shallow depression has appeared, causing snow in Illinois, Colorado, and Nebraska, and rain in Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, and Eastern Texas. In all other portions of the country fair weather has prevailed.

Temperatures are generally about normal except in Oklahoma and Eastern Texas, where there has been a fall of 16 to 18 degrees in the last twenty-four hours.

The Missouri Valley depression will cause light rain in the Lower Ohio and Middle Mississippi Valleys Wednesday, and rain is also probable in the Lower Mississippi Valley and the Eastern Gulf States.

Temperatures will rise slowly east of the Mississippi and in the Northern districts.

Winds along the New England Coast will be fresh west to southwest; along the Middle Atlantic Coast, light to fresh southeast to south; South Atlantic Coast, fresh east; East Gulf Coast, light to fresh southeast; West Gulf Coast, fresh northwest; Lake Michigan, light and variable.

Steamers departing Wednesday for European ports will have light to fresh southwest winds to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Fair Wednesday and Thursday; fresh southwest winds.

Western New York and Western Pennsylvania—Partly cloudy Wednesday and Thursday; fresh west winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1905.	1906.		1905.	1906.
3 A. M.	31	28	4 P. M.	35	39
6 A. M.	31	27	6 P. M.	34	38
9 A. M.	32	30	9 P. M.	31	35
12 M.	34	34	12 P. M.	30	34

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level.

The average temperature yesterday was 33; for the corresponding date last year it was 32; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 35.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 28; at 8 P. M. it was 36; maximum temperature, 40 degrees at 3:50 P. M.; minimum, 26 degrees at 6 A. M.; humidity, 65 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 55 per cent. at 8 P. M.

OLD BYRNES MAN IS DEAD.

Heidelberg Did Clever Detective Work for the Former Police Chief.

Detective Charles Heidelberg, who in the days of Thomas Byrnes was considered one of the cleverest men in the Detective Bureau, died yesterday at his home, 233 West 112th Street. Since 1895 he had managed a private detective agency of his own, the office of which is at 350 Broadway. He was busy at his desk there on Monday afternoon when he was taken ill.

Upon his arrival at his home Dr. T. Hamilton Burch of 106 West Fifty-seventh Street was called. By the time the physician reached him the veteran detective had lapsed into unconsciousness, from which he never emerged.

Heidelberg was a protégé of "Tom" Byrnes. His associate in much of the best thief-catching work that he did was Patrick Dolan, who died several years ago. Heidelberg was appointed a policeman in 1866. He was dismissed in 1874, but was reinstated again in 1880 as a patrolman. In 1883 he was made a Detective Sergeant.

Byrnes had great confidence in the tact of Heidelberg, and he gave him many important assignments. He made a great many arrests during his twenty-seven years as patrolman and detective, and took fourteen trips to Europe in pursuit of fugitives. His star performances include the arrest of Joseph W. Milne, who stole $1,200 from the First National Bank of Fall River, and the arrest of William D. Batchelder, the blackmailer. He was retired in 1895 on a pension of $1,000 a year.

NEW YORK ASSOCIATION FOR IMPROVING THE CONDITION OF THE POOR.

At Albany yesterday, Dr. Northrop, in urging a seaside park, said: "Sea Breeze, with its crippled children growing strong and rosy, could not disfigure any landscape." Children suffering in N. Y. tenements do mar the picture of industrial prosperity. We know hundreds whose sick parents can't provide food to-day. Will you help one or more? Robert Shaw Minturn, Treasurer, 105 East 22d St.

SYSONBY PROMINENT IN SARATOGA STAKES

Champion Entered in Three Big Races of Meeting.

HORSES BUSY AT GRAVESEND

Fifteen Colts of Fred Burlew's Cover the Last Quarter of a Mile in 0:26.

There is every indication that the complete list of stake entries for the Saratoga meeting will show a handsome increase over that of last year. James R. Keene is one of the principal nominators. His champion Sysonby is entered in the Great Republic, the Saratoga Handicap, and the Saratoga Cup. The last-named race will give him an opportunity to meet horses under the scale arrangement, it being a weight for age race. Delhi, of the same stable, is named for the Great Republic and the Saratoga Handicap.

In all there were forty-four nominations received for the Saratoga Handicap yesterday. This leaves several of the big racing establishments to be heard from, and the list is a creditable one. For the Saratoga Special fourteen had been received, and it is expected that the complete list will at least reach twenty, the total number of last year. Newton Bennington took two subscriptions in the race.

Ormondale, winner of the Futurity of last year, is only named in one stake, the Saranac, and the entry is in the name of W. O. B. McDonough. The mares Kiamesha and Santa Catalina are each named in the Saratoga Handicap, while Kiamesha is also named for the Great Republic. James B. Brady has his stars in all of the races for which they are eligible, and the good filly Whimsical, in addition to being nominated for several three-year-old races, is in both the Great Republic and the Cup.

Gravesend was a busy training ground yesterday and most of the horses that are being pointed for an early start this season were out in useful exercise. Fred Burlew was one of the first to show on the track. He brought out a set of fifteen colts and after being sent along in a nice limbering-up gallop they were permitted to breeze along for the last quarter in 0:26. Waterbearer and the good filly Edna Jackson came out together and their speed test consisted in a smart quarter in 0:27. Both are looking well and should be ready when the stable sends them to the post.

Tom Welsh had Merry Lark, Duenna, Bull's Eye, and Inquisitor in company, and after they had galloped along slowly for a couple of miles they were allowed to go along for three furlongs in 0:42½. Ormondale came out in company with three good-looking two-year olds, and galloping was all that was required.

Trainer Booker had Don Royal and Knight of Pearl under saddle and their task, at the end of a long gallop, was three furlongs in 0:42, accomplished very cleverly.

"Jim" McLaughlin allowed the two-year olds Solly M. and Sun Up to step along for a lively three furlongs in 0:40.

"Billy" Timmons had only two on the track. They were Prince Vic and a smart chestnut colt. Three furlongs in 0:39½ was the task very cleverly performed.

Trainer Claxton came over from Sheepshead Bay with a half-sister to the imported steeplechaser Gatebell. This one looks to be of the right sort, and her way of moving in the seven furlongs that was asked gives promise of her amply making good. An Irish jumper that is being pointed for the Benning meeting bore her company in the gallop.

William Hueston had several of his horses on the track. Kehalian, Oarsman, and Mazienello were only galloped, while Miss Ogden and a two-year-old filly were indulged in a lively quarter in 0:26¾.

"Father Bill" Daly is still drilling along for the Benning opening, and if his stable does not succeed there it will not be for lack of exercise. Amberjack and Proceeds were sent along for a mile in 1:55, and it was accomplished handily. Tom Cod and Radical showed a nice half in 0:52½, and Veronese, showing more speed than any one of them, turned a clever five furlongs in 1:06½.

"Tim" Donohue, the clever cross-country rider, will leave for Washington to-night. He will at once go into active training for the season at the Benning track.

Schoolboys' Championship Meet.

The New York Interscholastic Athletic Association has arranged a rather attractive programme for an invitation championship meet to be held at the Eighth Regiment Armory on the evening of March 17. Nine events have been planned for seniors, including a 60-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard, 880-yard, and one-mile runs, high jump, pole vault, putting the 12-pound shot, and 80-yard hurdle race. The events for juniors will be a 60-yard dash and 220-yard dash. In addition to medals to the winners of first, second, and third places a silver cup will be presented to the school scoring the greatest number of points. Entries close on March 10 with Edward E. Sturges, President of the New York Interscholastic Athletic Association, 270 West Seventy-second Street.

Tigers at Work in the Cage.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 6.—The call for baseball candidates issued by Capt. Reid has been responded to by eighty-five men, and they have been put to work in the cage under the direction of Coach W. B. Cosgrove. The prospects are unusually good, as the material on hand will make up an infield that will be hard to beat. Cooney will probably stay behind the bat, and Capt. Reid will still be the shortstop. Byram will be at the head of the pitching staff, while Bard will likely hold first base again. McLean is a good man for second base, while Sides, a freshman, comes from Exeter with a fine reputation as a third baseman. The outfield is the doubtful question, and will likely be composed chiefly of freshmen. E. Dillon, the quarter back on the football team, will probably secure one place, and Heymeyer, when he is not pitching, the other. The third fielder is yet to be picked from twenty-five contestants.

POOR DAY FOR FAVORITES.

Four Out of Thirteen Finish In Front at New Orleans Tracks.

NEW ORLEANS, March 6.—Judge Davey and Guiding Star were the only winning favorites at the Fair Grounds to-day. Redfern and Lyne both appeared in the saddle for the first time at the meeting, Redfern having three mounts. Lyne confined himself to working out the Morris derby candidate, Lotus Eater. The weather was clear and the track good. J. C. Ferries, Jr., has bought Colonel White on private terms. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Half mile. Judge Davey, 118 pounds, (Livingston,) 4 to 5, won; Dorothy M., 115, (Bell,) 17 to 5, second; Gold Circle, 118, (W. Robbins,) 4 to 1, third. Time—0:49 2-5. J. J., Jr., Judge Wallace, Weather Vane, Friction, Glad Pirate, Quien Sabe, and Black Water also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Six furlongs. Electric Spark, 107 pounds, (Bell,) 9 to 2, won; Arabo, 110, (W. Robbins,) 4 to 1, second; Verandah, 96, (Moreland,) 18 to 5, third. Time—1:14 3-5. Sir Francis II., Girdle, Tower, Tennyburn, Teddy Brookwood, King's Charm, Ogontz, Brookston, and Glengallant also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Six furlongs. Tom Mankins, 110 pounds, (W. McGee,) 10 to 1, won; Invincible, 110, (H. Alexander,) 5 to 2, second; Rou, 113, (W. Robbins,) 18 to 5, third. Time—1:14 4-5. Hortensia, Monis, Celebration, Whippoorwill, Gay Adelaide, and Whorler also ran. Felix Mozzes was left at the post.

FOURTH RACE.—Six furlongs; handicap. Guiding Star, 106½ pounds, (W. Robbins,) 9 to 20, won; Disobedient, 102, (J. Johnson,) 7 to 1, second; Cousin Kate, 106, (L. Smith,) 7 to 1, third. Time—1:14. Peter Paul and Plater also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—One mile and a sixteenth. Uncle Henry, 115 pounds, (Bedell,) 5 to 3, won; Lemon Girl, 115, (Moreland,) 15 to 1, second; Lena J., 98, (J. Johnson,) 9 to 10, third. Time—1:49 4-5. Lady Freeknight, Shunpike, Benora, Roderick, Marvin Neal, Phoebus, and Trogon also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Mile. Rolla, 108 pounds, (Aubuchon,) 6 to 1, won; Request, 93, (H. A. Walsh,) 30 to 1, second; Hamilcar, 103, (Bedell,) 6 to 1, third. Time—1:43. Bitter Brown, Buttercup, Oberon, and Chauncey Olcott also ran.

Bon Mot and Meadow Breeze, which won the last two events on the card, were the only successful favorites at City Park to-day. The track was fast. The Stewards have ordered the refusal of the entry of St. Tammany in the future, deeming his performances too inconsistent. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Three and a half furlongs. Little Boot, 106 pounds, (Romanelli,) 25 to 1, won; Irene A., 103, (J. Hennessy,) 7 to 1, second; Black Flag, 108, (D. Austin,) 11 to 2, third. Time—0:42 1-5. Belle of the Bay, Imposition, Beans, Recorder, Denigre, Charley Ward, George Duehscherer, Azelle, and Sister Peggy also ran.

SECOND RACE.—One mile and three-sixteenths. Siss Lee, 98 pounds, (Heffernan,) 4 to 1, won; Benvolio, 116, (D. Austin,) 11 to 10, second; Small Talk, 105, (Romanelli,) 50 to 1, third. Time—2:01. Loch Goil, Arab, Digby Bell, Honda, Parnass, Miss Rillie, Harpoon, The Only Way, and Wakeful also ran.

THIRD RACE.—One mile and a sixteenth, handicap. Sailor Boy, 97 pounds, (J. Hennessy,) 8 to 1, won; Tarp, 90, (Koerner,) 18 to 5, second; Garnish, 110, (Romanelli,) even, third. Time—1:47 2-5. Devout also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—Five and a half furlongs. Prince Brutus, 113½ pounds, (J. Daly,) 4 to 1, won; Robin Hood, 130, (Nicol,) 7 to 10, second; Astarita, 108, (H. Graham,) 20 to 1, third. Time—1:08 1-5. Precious Stone, Sam Craig, Phiora, Palmdale, Orbicular, Plebeian, Nutoow, and Lulu Mack also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—One mile and a sixteenth. Trenola, 114 pounds, (D. Austin,) 13 to 5, won; Wogglebug, 108, (Koerner,) 8 to 5, second; Glenclare, 114, (W. McIntyre,) 15 to 1, third. Time—1:48 3-5. Lieber Gore, Libation, Ann Hill, and Maudina also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—One mile. Bon Mot, 117 pounds, (E. Morrison,) 8 to 5, won; Arthur Cummer, 106½, (G. Schilling,) 7 to 2, second; Brushton, 109, (Nicol,) 10 to 1, third. Time—1:40 3-5. Orient and St. Tammany also ran.

SEVENTH RACE.—Five and a half furlongs. Meadow Breeze, 118 pounds, (Larsen,) 5 to 2, won; Dr. Mack, 110, (Dealy,) 30 to 1, second; Oratoran, 107, (D. Austin,) 6 to 1, third. Time—1:08. Gentian, Tom Combs, Kara, Anna Smith, Oliver, Poetry, Telepathy, Follow the Flag, Principia, Suds, Field Lark, and Mescal also ran.

Another 100 to 1 Shot at Ascot.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 6.—Winners at the starting price of 100 to 1 are becoming the usual thing at Ascot, another in Belvoir coming in the opening event of to-day's card. The track was lightning fast. Embarrassment at 15 to 1 stepped a mile in 1:39¼ in the fourth race. Eugenia Burch was made favorite, but finished fifth.

Kentucky Senate Passes Racing Bill.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 6.—By an almost unanimous vote the Kentucky Senate to-day adopted the Chinn bill for the creation of a State Racing Commission to control the running tracks of the State. The bill was amended so as to have Commissioners appointed for a term of four years; to allow appeal to the courts on revocation of license for cause; excluding trotting tracks from any of the provisions of the bill, and providing that tracks shall have at least forty days' racing a year, if the management desires.

HARVARD TO PLAY FOOTBALL?

Report That University Authorities Are Ready to Try New Game.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 6.—It is believed here to-night that the Harvard authorities have decided to allow football to have one more year's trial under the new rules that have been adopted by the American Intercollegiate Rules Committee. An incomplete informal canvass of the Board of Overseers made to-day indicated that if the Harvard Athletic Committee is willing to permit another trial of the game, the overseers will not oppose it, provided it is agreed that if the game results unsatisfactorily next Fall it be abandoned thereafter. It is known that the Athletic Committee is favorable to another trial.

The meeting of the Athletic Committee to be held to-morrow will consider the subject, but it is hardly expected that definite action will then be taken. The report of Secretary William T. Reid of the Rules Committee will be studied and discussed, but it is believed the committee will wish a longer time to consider it than at one meeting before acting finally. It is certain that their report will be presented to the overseers within a fortnight, however, and will settle the fate of the game at Cambridge.

Harvard men in general feel great satisfaction that the Rules Committee recommendations have reflected Harvard's ideas of reform so generously, and believe it is this fact that has determined the scale in favor of the continuance of the game for another year here.

PETERSON BEATS HOPPE.

Wins Again Against World's Champion in Close Billiard Game.

C. T. Peterson again defeated World's Champion Willie Hoppe yesterday afternoon in the series of special billiard matches between the two. After Hoppe, playing the eighteen-inch balk-line game, one shot in, had led all the way and totaled 380, Peterson struck his gait in the twenty-second inning, and with a run of 19, well played, ran his string up to 344. The champion amassed 9 in his twenty-third attempt, and Peterson by excellent manipulation of the ivories ran the 56 necessary to win the game.

Peterson, of course, was playing the eighteen-inch game with two shots in, and at times showed rare form. He was not steady, however, and though he had but two blank innings, double figures were infrequent. The score by innings:

Peterson—1 6 53 5 47 40 2 0 16 2 91 4 9 13 10 11 3 3 6 3 0 19 56. Total, 400; average, 17 9-23; high run, 91.

Hoppe—61 37 7 41 5 36 7 6 54 8 6 0 0 35 0 37 8 20 1 0 9 2 9. Total, 389; average, 16 20-23; high run, 61.

In the evening both were off their game, the balls rolling hard to add to their difficulties. Hoppe won by a score of 300 to 286, though they were practically even all the way until 250 was reached. Hoppe's best run was 49 and Peterson's 37. They averaged, respectively, 13 14-22 and 13 13-21.

Rifle Shooting by Naval Cadets.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 6.—The cadets of the Naval Academy will engage in rifle shooting more extensively this season than in any previous year, and have already arranged three matches to take place at Annapolis. A challenge has been sent to the West Point cadets for a match to take place on May 20, the same day that the baseball nines play, but there has been no answer. The matches arranged are: May 5, officers of the Maryland National Guard; May 12, officers of the District of Columbia National Guard; May 19, officers of the Seventy-first Regiment of the New York National Guard. Lieut. Harris Laning, United States Navy, is team coach, and Midshipman Sloan Danenhower is Captain.

AUTOISTS MAY CHANGE GLIDDEN CUP ROUTE

Suggestion to Start 1,000-Mile Run from Cleveland.

CANADIAN TRIP SHORTENED

New Plan Will Conclude Trip at Saratoga After Leaving Montreal—Committee Soon to Meet.

Notwithstanding the objections that have been made by automobilists to the selection of Canada as a part of the Glidden Cup tour this season, it is more than likely that the original decision will be adhered to, although with some modifications. A number of suggestions have been made to the cup commission within the last few days, and after the appointment of the new Chairman of the Touring Committee of the American Automobile Association this week a meeting of that committee and the Glidden Cup Commission will be held at an early date to act upon these suggestions and ascertain the advisability of making any changes in the original route.

The latest suggestion that has come to the committee is that the tour start from Cleveland instead of from Buffalo. The run will then lead direct to Buffalo, and from that point the tourists will enter Canada, probably by way of Niagara Falls, and proceed to Montreal, eliminating Quebec and other eastern points in Canada, where, it is said, the roads are much poorer than is the case on the Montreal route. Leaving the latter city, the tourists will run south, crossing the New York border line, and, passing by Lake Champlain and Lake George, conclude the tour at Saratoga. This trip will occupy about ten days, covering a trifle over 1,000 miles.

New England automobilists have been insistent since the announcement of the selection of the Glidden touring route last Fall that Massachusetts and the White Mountains be included in the tour. It is the purpose of the Cup Committee, however, to make this annual contest international in scope, and incidentally to stimulate touring conditions in various parts of the country, thereby enabling motor car owners in different localities to compete without difficulty.

The competition is one of the annual events of the American Automobile Association, as the deed of gift gives the trophy to that organization under specific conditions. President John Farson's plan will be to enlarge the National scope and influence of the American Automobile Association, and he, as well as several other officers, believes that some recognition should be given to Western autoists in the coming tour.

Next to the Chicago Automobile Club the Cleveland Automobile Club is probably the most energetic in the West. Cleveland itself has nearly 2,000 automobile owners, and a strong request has come from many of the leading autoists that Cleveland be made the starting point. It is believed that the tour will have an excellent effect upon the efforts that are being made in Ohio to secure better highways.

Some of the American manufacturers have complained against the selection of Canada on the ground that not only were the roads poor, but that the Canadians had shown little tendency to purchase American cars. The Glidden trophy, however, is an international cup, and the donor stated before he left for his Far Eastern trip that a tour through a part of Canada would undoubtedly lead to a revival of automobile interest there. It is not the aim of the committee to choose localities where smooth roads will be found. The contest is a test of touring car conditions over the ordinary roads of the country, and if difficult stretches of road are encountered now and then it will simply prove that the cars finishing the 1,000 miles successfully are entitled to the certificates that denote endurance and reliability. The tour will start late in July.

ECONOMY TEST FOR AUTOS.

New York Motor Club Will Make Some Changes in This Year's Run.

A special meeting of the Directors of the New York Motor Club was held yesterday at the Hotel Cumberland, Broadway and Fifty-fourth Street, to discuss plans for the forthcoming economy test. A six days' run has been planned by the club somewhat on the same lines as in the first test of that kind held last Fall. Several changes will be made this year in the method of conducting the event, and the committee is busily engaged in preparing the conditions. No date was decided upon for the contest, but it may be held during the Spring.

Owing to the inability of F. J. Griffin to give the necessary time to the office of Treasurer, the Directors transferred R. H. Johnston from the Second Vice Presidency to that of Treasurer, and put Mr. Griffin in the Second Vice President's place. A. L. Kull and W. D. Hurlbut were elected to the Board of Directors. President W. J. P. Moore was appointed the club's delegate on the board of the New York State Automobile Association. Several new members have been elected recently, and the club's rooms in the Hotel Cumberland are being used for a number of informal motor talks and conferences.

PLAN THREE RACE WEEKS.

Seawanhaka and Atlantic Yacht Clubs to Emulate Larchmont's Fixture.

Race weeks are to be popular in yachting this year, and while the Larchmont week will likely be the feature of the season, as usual, it will be pressed for honors, for both the Seawanhaka-Corinthians and the Atlantics are talking of starting similar enterprises. If carried through the yachtsmen will have a solid week's racing at Oyster Bay in June, another at Larchmont in July, the New York Yacht Club cruise in August, and the Atlantic week in September.

The feature of Larchmont week will be a schooner series for the Class B boats, the ninety-footers. The new Maxwell schooner will make her debut there, and it is thought the Cary Smith boat, building for William E. Iselin, will be ready in time. With F. F. Brewster's Elmina and Arthur F. Luke's Corona to contest honors with these two a good series should result. It was hoped the Ingomar would start, but Commodore Plant has declared that he will not put the boat in commission again, devoting all his time to the steam yacht he bought abroad last year, Venetia. The reappearance of the Ingomar is all that is needed to make the schooner class this year the most notable that has appeared in many years.

With the Muriel, Valmore, Agatha, Venona, Mavis, and Katrina, all to race actively, besides the new schooner building for L. J. Callanan, there should be good sport in other classes.

COLUMBIA Y. C. OFFICERS.

C. A. Starbuck Re-elected Commodore—F. D. Underwood Rear Commodore.

The annual meeting and election of the Columbia Yacht Club were held at the clubhouse at the foot of Eighty-sixth Street on the Hudson River last evening, with a full and enthusiastic attendance of club members and a promise of an exceptionally lively year. The report of the Secretary and the Treasurer showed a large enrollment of boats and members and a financial condition that was most gratifying. The election resulted in the re-election of all the old officers, with one exception, to serve another year.

Commodore Charles A. Starbuck was renamed, with Charles G. Gates again to serve as Vice Commodore. To the office of Rear Commodore, however, Frederick D. Underwood was selected. His long and prominent association with the Atlantic Yacht Club makes his choice in the new club of exceptional interest. George R. Branson was elected Secretary, James Stewart for Treasurer, and John H. McIntosh for measurer. Three trustees were chosen, Charles E. Simmons, Alfred H. Curtis, and Frank Lewis. John H. McIntosh will represent the club at the meeting of the American Power Boat Association to-day.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

Governing Body of All Clubs and a New League Organized.

Association football will in future be governed by a central body of governors, whose province will be similar to the English Association Football League. The new organization, which will be known as the New York Amateur Football Association, was formed at a meeting held last night at the Boys' Club, Avenue A and Tenth Street, when the following representatives were present: J. Catty and Gordon Brown, Flushing Football Club; A. H. Dale and M. Shaw, Cameron Football Club; Harry Manley and J. C. Jenkins, Staten Island Football Club; F. H. Tabor and A. W. Smith, Boys' Club; R. Morrison and A. Perrie, Burns Football Club; N. Agar, Critchley Football Club; A. Challenger and W. Stiles, Brooklyn Football Club. Letters were received from Columbia University and the Crescent Football Club pledging support to the movement.

A committee, consisting of A. Challenger, A. H. Dale, and A. W. Smith, was appointed to draw up a set of rules to govern the association, and a general invitation was extended to all the clubs in the Metropolitan Association Football League and the American Association Football League to join the organization at the next meeting of the association, which will be held at the Boy's Club next Monday.

A new Association football league was also formed, which will be known as the New York Amateur Association Football League. The new league consists of the Flushing Football Club, Boys' Club, Staten Island Football Club, Brooklyn Football Club, and Cameron Football Club. The Critchley Football Club was invited to join, but the invitation was afterward withdrawn.

The officers of the league are: President—F. H. Tabor, Boys' Club; Vice President—Harry Manley, Staten Island Football Club; Secretary and Treasurer—A. W. Smith, Staten Island Football Club; Board of Governors—A. Whitelaw, Staten Island Football Club; J. Catty, Flushing Football Club; M. E. Shaw, Cameron Football Club; E. O. Challenger, Brooklyn Football Club, and A. Kessler, Boys' Club.

The first round of games will be played on March 17 under the English cup tie system, which drops the loser of each round. The schedule follows:

March 17—Boys' Club vs. Brooklyn Football Club, at Columbia Oval; Cameron Football Club vs. Flushing Football Club, at Macomb's Dam Park; Staten Island Football Club, a bye.

March 24—Staten Island Football Club vs. winner of Boys' Club and Brooklyn Football Club match.

March 31—Winner of first round vs. winner of second round.

UNIQUE AUTO BOATS ABROAD.

Candidates for the International Cup for Which Dixie Will Race.

Two remarkable motor boats are building in France that will be observed by racing enthusiasts with great interest when they are ready for trial. One will be a 40-foot automobile craft having a triple screw—the first application of the triple screw to the autoboat—and will be equipped with three eight-cylinder motors generating a power of 600 horse, the highest powered craft of its kind in the world. It is to be fitted with motors that have other interesting and novel characteristics. First, they will have neither flywheels nor carburetters, but will inject the petrol directly by means of pumps. Then, too, the motor can be reversed of itself by simply stopping the engine and starting the switch in the opposite direction, by simply altering the angle of the cams, which is done automatically with the switch.

The most extravagant predictions are made for the boat, the French builders contending it will attain under favorable conditions a speed of 85 kilometers an hour, or nearly 53 miles an hour. She will be known as Antoinette IV., and is expected to race in all the big motor boat events.

The other boat will mark the first application of steam to the racing launch. This is a combination of the Simpson-Strickland steamers building for Lord Howard de Wallen and called the Rose en Soleil. The secret of construction is the remarkable evaporative power claimed for her boilers in comparison to her weight, though how the apparatus is to be fitted to a forty-foot speed launch is difficult to understand. Lord Howard de Wallen is confident, however, that she will outclass her petrol rivals.

Other notable competitors building for the International Cup races, in which the American champion Dixie, owned by E. J. Schroeder, has been entered, include the forty-foot Siola, building for Lord Montague, whose Napier won the cup last year. She will be distinctive in that she will mark the first application of the six cylinder to the Napier engine and the Yarrow-Napier combination racer, called "1176," which is expected to develop 26 knots.

The general tendency abroad, however, is toward the 100 horse power engine in a thirty to forty foot craft, developing moderate speed.

VAN ALLEN'S GREAT SHOOTING

Breaks 936 Glass Balls Out of 1,000 at the Sportsman's Show.

S. Van Allen made what was announced to be a world's shooting record at the Sportsman's Show in Madison Square Garden yesterday. He broke 936 glass balls out of 1,000 in one hour and ten minutes. Of the first hundred Van Allen broke 91, his poorest effort, but from this point he gradually improved, and in the sixth hundred he missed but 4 balls, averaging 6 minutes 6 seconds, or over 15 balls a minute. Two men were kept busy throwing up the balls, and two others reloading the Winchester rifles. The previous record was 928 balls in 1 hour and 31 minutes, which was made by Van Allen last year. The strain was so great yesterday that Van Allen was exhausted after his performance.

One of the novel exhibitions at the show is a rotary steam engine, suitable for propelling boats, automobiles, and furnishing power for electric lighting plants. It embodies all the features of the Corliss, together with the desirable rotary motion. Steam is furnished by a generator having an oil burner using either kerosene or crude oil. The new rotary engine is the invention of A. D. Wright of Corona, L. I.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt was an interested visitor at the show yesterday. He closely inspected the high speed craft and is said to contemplate the purchase of a fast boat. He was accompanied by Mrs. A. G. Vanderbilt.

Senator Edward Bailey of New York is another prospective purchaser of fast boats. H. M. Parson of Cleveland, a son-in-law of the late Senator Mark Hanna, ordered a 50-foot cruising boat, and J. Lumsden, the lumber king of Ottawa, purchased a 34-foot high speed launch, propelled by a 25-horse power automarine engine.

The competition on the water was close and exciting. The canoes again defeated the "Buster Brown" launch in the tug-of-war. Summary:

Mattress Race, One Lap.—Won by L. Pettigrew, New York; E. Hirsch, New York, second.

Canoe Tug of War, Doubles.—Won by H. Braeunlick and F. Pendrill, United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps; A. Dilly and R. O'Hara, Inwood Canoe Club, second.

ROOSEVELT IN HIGH JUMP.

President's Nephew, Entered from Harvard, Will Be in N. Y. A. C. Games

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 6.—New Yorkers will have an opportunity to see a scion of the house of Roosevelt compete in the athletic arena next Tuesday evening on the occasion of the indoor track games of the New York Athletic Club, to be held in Madison Square Garden. In addition to the mile relay team to run against Yale and another college, probably Pennsylvania, Harvard will make five individual entries in those games. One of these will be G. E. Roosevelt, 1909, in the high jump. Roosevelt is a nephew of the President and a classmate of the President's oldest son, Theodore, Jr. He is in the neighborhood of 6 feet 8 inches tall, with a shock of tow-colored hair. George Roosevelt was a member of the St. Mark's School track team last year, and when he entered the Cambridge University in the Fall he was at once seized upon as a likely man for the Harvard track team in the high jump.

Three Challengers for Tennis Trophy.

LONDON, March 6.—The entries for the Dwight F. Davis International Lawn Tennis Cup closed to-day with only three challengers, America, Australasia, and Austria. The drawing for the preliminary heats to decide which team will play the British holders of the trophy is expected to-morrow.

ROW ENDS WRESTLING WHEN TURK IS THROWN

Kazzi Attempts to Assault Referee, Claiming "No Fall."

REFUSES TO CONTINUE BOUT

Disorder Marks Night at Grand Central Palace Until Police Quiet the Crowd.

George Bothner's wrestling bout with Abrahim Kazzi, the Turk, ended in violent disorder last night at the Grand Central Palace. The American scored a fall at Graeco-Roman style, as this was the only method that the Turk would agree to. Upon Referee Hugh Leonard's decision Kazzi rushed at him as if he intended to show the New York Athletic Club man a strangle hold. He was prevented, and after a generous flow of vituperative Turkish, Kazzi leaped from the ring. No persuasion could induce him to return. The crowd became clamorous, and the police were called to quiet them.

This was only the culmination of scenes of disorder which had marked the entire night. The spectators raised a merry time almost from the first bout. They immediately took sides when Bothner and Kazzi finally came into the ring, after an interminable wait. John Dunn announced then that the Turk absolutely refused to meet Bothner at catch-as-catch-can, as the agreement did not call for it. All efforts to patch up the trouble only found the Turk and his manager more obdurate.

The crowd surged toward the ring, and the police moved up to forestall trouble. Finally Kazzi's manager agreed to toss a coin as to the style of wrestling. Then he reconsidered his determination, and Bothner agreed to go on at Graeco-Roman, providing in the event of his getting the first fall Kazzi would meet him at catch-as-catch-can, the style of the third bout to be later determined upon.

When Bothner secured the fall by an arm lock and head hold, Kazzi was wild with rage. He attempted to attack Referee Leonard, and the latter left the ring. Then the managers wrangled and the crowd got up to the ring. After Kazzi had gone to his dressing room the crowd waited for him to come back, and when Dunn announced that he would not they made such a clamor that the police took a hand in clearing the building. In a measure it was a repetition of previous bouts, ending in a fizzle.

The Turkish colony sent fully three-quarters of the spectators. All of them expected their countryman Kazzi to weave Bothner into a rug pattern. Even the Turkish Consul was present in a box.

Bothner was the first to enter the ring, and he was closely followed by Kazzi, both receiving applause. For the moment the crowd became calm until the stand of Kazzi was announced. They did not quiet down until the men got to work.

Bothner threw the Turk to the mat within two minutes of their getting busy. He tried for a hammerlock, but Kazzi proved skillful at evasion, and finally wriggled loose. Kazzi then worked for a hold, until suddenly Bothner secured a wing hold and almost put the Turk's shoulders down. Kazzi labored hard, but the American shifted cleverly to an armlock and head hold, which threatened to break the Turk's neck as he bridged.

The pair had struggled to the edge of the mat, and as Bothner was unable to get Kazzi's shoulders down, Referee Leonard had them shift to the centre of the padded floor. Bothner continued to force the same hold, the Turk showing signs of weakening. Referee Leonard was keenly on the watch, and as Bothner forced the Turk fairly down in 12:09 he received the referee's slap. Kazzi leaped to his feet, wild with rage, and then he scenes of disorder followed.

To whet the appetite of the big crowd for the championship young Hackenschmidt and Nels Olsen, the great Dane, met in a Graeco-Roman bout. They grappled all over the mat for fifteen minutes without any decision.

Charles Sterling and George Camp met in the next bout at catch-as-catch-can, but no decision was rendered.

REAL BASEBALL FOR GIANTS.

McGraw and "Christy" Mathewson Lead Opposing Teams at Memphis.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 6.—Continuation of balmy weather enabled the Giants to put in another good day's practice. The forenoon and afternoon were spent at Red Elm Park in snappy work, with the Mathewson brothers furnishing features for a good-sized crowd of native onlookers.

Real baseball was indulged in for the first time, the opposing forces being led by McGraw and "Christy" Mathewson, respectively, with Henry Mathewson pitching against his big brother. Base hits were at a premium during the reign of the youngster, although he was not exhibiting a great amount of speed, nor did he seem to exert himself more than was necessary to warm his arm.

Base running was the branch of the game to which McGraw showed most attention. In loud tones he instructed his men in the value of a quick get away, and on several occasions pretty exhibitions of the hit and hurry up method were witnessed. Taylor, Wiltse, Ames, and others worked brief spells in the pitcher's box.

McGraw continues to introduce innovations, which may seem surprising. To-day he discovered a Sicilian organ grinder outside the park. He promptly contracted with the "musician" to render selections from the side lines. Good humor was displayed by the team members, but Taylor made signs that he was for one time at least happy in his misfortune in not being able to listen to the band.

The McGraw policy of keeping the players' minds off their training work may take other turns before the three weeks' siege is finished.

Fordham's Baseball Men Outdoors.

After a month's hard work in the cage in the "gym," in which the candidates were put through a drill in batting, handling grounders, and throwing the ball, the Fordham baseball squad went out for practice for the first time this season yesterday afternoon. The ground was in good condition. Coach Callan cautioned the men about straining their arms and put them through a hard afternoon's work. Each candidate received instructions in how to stand, how to hold the bat, and the manner to strike at the ball. The aspirants for the infield positions were instructed in handling hard-hit grounders and in fielding slow-hit balls. The candidates for the outfield places received a chance to show how much ground they could cover and how well they could field the ball. After practice the squad took a mile jog around the track.

The team loses by graduation: Hartman, Captain and shortstop; Robertson, first base; Murray, pitcher, and Oliver, centre field. Shean, second base; Raftis, third base; McCarthy, catcher, and McLane, pitcher, have left college. This leaves an entire new infield and nearly a whole new outfield to be developed, besides getting together a pitching staff of worth.

Early Diamond Pick-Ups.

Trouble has cropped up between Pitcher Scanlon and the Brooklyn Baseball Club management. According to Scanlon, who is attending the Medical College of the Syracuse University, he was to receive an increase in salary if his work last year warranted. He claims that he helped Brooklyn considerably, but there is no increase in salary in sight. He declines, therefore, to put his name to a contract.

Under the tutelage of Manager Stuart Morrison, the Riverview Academy at Poughkeepsie expects to be represented by a strong team this year. The schedule as at present arranged is: April 21, Newburg Academy; May 2, Mohegan; 5, Mackenzie School; 12, Peekskill; 19, Boys' High School of Brooklyn; 24, Holbrook; 26, Mohegan; 30, Pratt Institute; June 23, St. Paul's of Garden City; 9, Holbrook.

The National Commission, through its Chairman, Garry Hermann, has just issued an attractively bound volume containing the second annual report of the commission, covering all the proceedings of that body during the season of 1905. The full details of the world's championship series and the series for the championship of Chicago are also given.

Shortstop O'Leary and Second Baseman Schaefer did not go South with the Detroit team. O'Leary wants an advance of salary, and Schaefer objects to a provision in his contract.

The St. Louis Americans will be without Stone, the hard-hitting outfielder. He received permission to practice at home. It appears that Stone contracted a severe case of rheumatism while South with the team last year, and he was afraid to risk a trip to Dallas this year.

Manager McCloskey has appointed W. P. ("Spike") Shannon Captain of the St. Louis National League team. Shannon joined the St. Louis Club in the early part of 1904, coming from the Indianapolis team of the American Association.

CAUGHT TITUS BY THROAT.

Capt. Mulcahy Says That's All He Did After Oarsmen's Meeting.

Capt. Mulcahy of the Atlantic Boat Club denies that he had a fistic encounter with either ex-champion Titus or James Reilly of the Nonpareils after the meeting of the Harlem Regatta Association on Monday night. According to Mulcahy, there has been an unfriendly feeling between Titus and him ever since the Hamburg regatta last July.

After the meeting on Monday night, Mulcahy says, he was standing in the hallway when Titus passed him and made use of objectionable language. Mulcahy resented it, and caught Titus by the throat. Mutual friends at once interfered, and Titus quickly disappeared. Then Reilly of the Nonpareil Rowing Club verbally attacked Mulcahy, but the latter declined to be embroiled in any controversy, and said he would pay a visit to the Nonpareil Rowing Clubhouse next Sunday and be ready to settle any differences.

Will Decide Hockey Championship.

The hockey season will close to-night, when the teams of the New York and Crescent Athletic Clubs will meet at Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, to decide the championship of the Amateur Hockey League. In the regular season the two clubs finished on even terms, each winning four games and losing two. In the drawing for the selection of the rink the Crescent Athletic Club won, and chose Clermont Avenue. The Brooklyn team is a slight favorite in the betting, owing to the easy victories over the Hockey Club of New York and the St. Nicholas Skating Club, and the defeat of the New York Athletic Club in the second game.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Japanese Curios Awarded Lower Duty—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Waite the Board of United States General Appraisers sustained yesterday invoice prices of Japanese curios shipped to this country by E. H. Tuska of Kobe. The articles, which included so-called paper eggs, paper bottles, chicks, &c., were deemed undervalued by the American customs officers, and the goods were assessed for duty on a higher valuation than that appearing in the invoice. An appeal then followed to the board, with the result that the tribunal upholds the shipper's entered values.

Judge Waite also wrote a decision upholding the invoice values placed on marble statuary by A. Peterieli of Florence, Italy. The statuary in question consisted of figures of Napoleon and Mme. Steozzi. The action of Collector Stranahan in raising the entered prices was reversed.

In an opinion by Judge Waite the board promulgated a decision approving the action of the American customs officers in requiring Italian eggplant salad from Francesco Tesoriere of Palermo to duty on a higher basis of valuation.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

GEORGE SOMMER.—George Sommer, manager at 29 Washington Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $1,511 and assets $1 in a savings bank. The largest creditor is Alice Loughran, $1,111, on a judgment obtained on June 14, 1901. He was formerly in the meat business, which he began in 1888.

TRADESMEN'S LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.—Deputy Sheriff Burnes has received an execution against the Tradesmen's Life Insurance Company of 253 Broadway for $5,622 in favor of Harriet M. Whittaker, and a levy was made at the office of the company. The officers of the company recently applied to the Supreme Court for the voluntary dissolution of the corporation.

JOHN ABD EL NOUR.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against John Abd El Nour, dealer in Oriental goods at 39 Broadway, by these creditors: Stanley V. Cooke, $565; Willard Braman, $540, and James Talcott $630. It was alleged that on Nov. 10 last he transferred all the assets of the business to his wife, and on Feb. 8 permitted two judgments to be entered against him. He has been in business about fifteen years, and his trouble is attributed to indorsing notes for $4,000 for another firm.

CAROLINA MINING COMPANY.—Clarence J. Osborn and Mortimer F. Drudy, as partners under the name of the Carolina Mining Company at 65 Fulton Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $4,373 and no assets. The debts were contracted in 1903 and 1904 in this city, Knoxville, Tenn., and Asheville and Marshall, N. C. Mr. Osborn has individual debts of $1,195 and assets $65. Mr. Drudy has individual debts of $200.

MARY WYLIE MORRISON.—Mary Wylie Morrison, saleswoman in a dry goods store at 517 Sixth Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $1,554 and no available assets. She has $4 cash on deposit in a title guarantee company and $64 due for salary, but she claims exemption for this. She has only one creditor, Caroline E. McCall, on a judgment obtained on June 25, 1902.

CHARLES W. WHITE.—Deputy Sheriff Rinn has received an attachment for $6,500 against Charles W. White, mining promoter of 11 Broadway, in favor of Anna Georgiana Hubbard, in a suit brought against Mr. White, the Seward-Alaska Company, and Richard O. Lazier for money lent in July, 1902, to develop mining properties at Nome, Alaska. Collins B. Hubbard acted as agent for the plaintiff in the transaction, and the loan was originally $7,500, on which $1,000 has been repaid. It was asserted that the money was lent on the representation that the properties were worth $20,000, and were clear from liens, whereas it was afterward learned there was an attachment for $3,923 against them. The attachment was obtained only against Mr. White on the ground that he was a resident of Citra, Fla. The Sheriff served the attachment on Mr. White individually and as an officer of the Seward-Alaska Company.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—There was a much better tone to the wheat market yesterday, especially in the last hour. In the first half of the session it showed more or less irregularity, and at times considerable weakness in response to further unloading and efforts by the bear element to bring about another sharp decline. Offerings seemed to be well absorbed, however, and on good buying for outside account in the afternoon, together with unfavorable reports on Indian crops and weather, there was an advance to best point of the day and a full cent over lowest prices of the season. The market left off at practically top for the day, or ⅛ to ¼c. over Monday's close. The cash market in New York closed firm as follows: No. 2 red, 84¼c, elevator, and 87c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 88¼c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—Practically all day the corn market was under bull control, and at the close showed ⅜ to ½c net advance in the local market. An important influence was the small movement and the bad weather at interior points. Chicago expected only 142 cars on Wednesday, and the total primary receipts were about 300,000 bushels behind last year, while seaboard clearances aggregated 451,000 bushels. The Liverpool market closed ¼d net higher. A good deal of short corn was covered during the day, in addition to which good buying on outside account developed at the West. Export business consisted of two loads. No. 2 corn was quoted at 50c, elevator, and 48c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 49c, and No. 2 yellow, 48c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON—The cotton market was not more than moderately active yesterday, but the undertone was generally steady to firm, and prices reached a new high level for the upward movement of the season. There was an advance of 8@15 points on sales of about 250,000 bales. The big spot demand, reports that rains were delaying new crop preparations in the Southwest, and the stronger market abroad were the sustaining factors.

At the best May sold at 10.86c and July at 10.97c, or about 43@48 points above the low level of last week. The close was 3 or 4 points off from the best, but steady in tone.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Recover; Call Money Rates, 4½@5½ Per Cent.

Much Short Covering—Shipment of $2,000,000 to San Francisco.

Yesterday's stock market session was given over to slow and irregular recoveries from the sharp declines of the previous day. Such a movement is conventional after markets like those Wall Street has witnessed for some days past and is due to either one of two developments or to these in combination, the covering of short contracts or fresh buying for investment or speculative purposes. The recovery in which the buying in of short stock is the most prominent feature, is the more unstable movement, and while it was difficult to determine yesterday the exact proportions of this sort of buying and of investment purchases, it was the general belief that the former predominated, and this belief was borne out in large measure by the movements of individual stocks. Reading, in which the maximum loss was scored on Monday, rose at one time nearly 2½ points above its closing on that day, but at the end had lost all but one-eighth of a point of this gain. Amalgamated Copper, which was also under exceptional pressure on the previous day, advanced with equal abruptness, but retained 2¼ points of its gain at the close. Union Pacific continued its resistance and closed at a substantial advance, while of the Steel shares the common issue was weak and irregular throughout. Elsewhere in the active list the gains ran from small fractions to a point or more, the greatest firmness being found in shares directly connected with favorable developments of the day, such as American Woolen. The annual report of this company, as published yesterday, disclosed a gain of nearly $9,000,000 in gross business for the year and $1,740,000 in net profits, this showing placing it in the foremost ranks of the industrials reporting thus far and indicating clearly the prosperity attending the conduct of at least one great branch of trade. Much of the irregularity in Reading was due, undoubtedly, to knowledge that the coal mine operators were in conference in this c and to the more serious considerati of the possibility of a strike in the anthracite regions.

Matters of chief importance in the money markets were the shipment of $2,000,000 to San Francisco through the Sub-Treasury and the deposits of bonds with the Sub-Treasury by banks which will at once receive their respective portions of the $3,000,000 of Government money which is to be deposited in this city under Secretary Shaw's order. The funds sent to San Francisco are understood to represent the transfer to Japan of some of her funds on deposit in London, the movement being financed from that city. It is not to be expected that London will be called upon to furnish all the money which Japan will take at this time; her deposits in this city will undoubtedly be reduced in like manner, although in what degree is of course not known. The weakness in foreign exchange yesterday was due largely to this operation. Call money continued to command rates recently prevailing and time money was also unchanged. Improvement was noted in prices at London and Paris, and the quotations of Government securities in those markets reflected no uneasiness over the reported deadlock at Algeciras.

LESS ALARM IN LONDON.

Important Failures Owing to the Slump in Kaffirs Not Expected.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

LONDON, Wednesday, March 7.—The Times in its financial article says:

"The settlement in the South African market was looked forward to to-day with less apprehension. It is believed that the dealers as a body are or have been short of shares and so have made money out of the fall. It is also believed that if any trouble is developed it will be among small brokers whose clients fail to pay their differences.

"The recovery of quotations in the South African market to-day seems to have been on the initiative of Johannesburg, but it was materially assisted by local purchases for bears and small investors and also by the buoyancy developed late by the Paris Bourse, which was accompanied by more favorable Moroccan rumors."

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 6.—Supplies of money were plentiful in the market to-day and the demand was fair. Discounts were easier.

Business on the Stock Exchange did not expand, owing to the fact that the settlement was progressing, but cheap money and a small investment demand caused prices to close firm, especially in the case of first-class securities.

Americans opened dull and lower, but the market was upheld during the forenoon to a fraction above parity. Local bears' covering and Wall Street advices induced renewed support and stocks closed firm at the best quotations of the day. Reading was an exception, closing weak.

Foreigners were featureless, with fractional lower movements early in the day. They hardened later and finished steady.

Kaffirs were in better demand after early weakness. Paris supported the market during the afternoon, and early sellers covered. At the close prices were steady, but some nervousness was still apparent.

Japanese imperial sixes of 1904 were quoted at 103⅞.

Bar silver quiet at 29⅝d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 17.75; Lisbon, 4.50.

Money, 3@3¼ per cent.

Discount rates—Short bills, 3½@3⅝ per cent.; three months' bills, 3 7-16@3½ per cent.

Bullion amounting to £71,000 was taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day.

LONDON CLOSING QUOTATIONS.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, March 6.—Prices on the Bourse to-day opened heavy, but improved on the better tendency in Berlin.

Russian imperial 4s were quoted at 82.20 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 494.

Three per cent. rentes, 99f 40c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 15c for checks.

BERLIN, March 6.—Prices on the Boerse to-day opened weak, due to realizations. Later prices were firmer, but at the close the tone was indecisive.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 48¾ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills, 4¼ per cent.; three months' bills, 4½ per cent.

WHEELING & LAKE ERIE R. R.

Handicapped, Says Vice President Worthington, by Insufficient Facilities

The Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad, part of the eastern extension of the Wabash, has not yet, it is officially stated, received any considerable benefit from the Wabash Pittsburg terminal, the entrance of which into Pittsburg was the cause of severe friction between the Gould and the Pennsylvania interests.

In his annual report to the stockholders of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Company President F. A. Delano says that in all probability the benefits of the Pittsburg extension will not accrue to the Wheeling & Lake Erie to any large extent until the latter part of the present fiscal year. He adds, however, that the management confidently expects that by next Summer there will be a very material increase in the business derived from this source.

The gross earnings of the road for the year ended June 30 last amounted to $4,595,606, an increase of $270,224. Operating expenses, however, increased heavily, so that there was a decrease of $93,512 in net earnings, which totaled $956,471. Total charges, including interest on bonds, taxes, rentals, and interest and discount charges, amounted to $1,149,831. The year's operations, therefore, resulted in a deficit of $193,360 compared with a surplus for the previous year amounting to $63,654. The balance sheet shows increases for the year of $952,575 in equipment trust obligations and of $930,895 in bills payable.

The road has been very much handicapped, the report says, by lack of sufficient facilities, both in the way of trackage and equipment, to handle the business which it could readily obtain. On this point Vice President B. A. Worthington says in the report: "The future of this property is dependent wholly upon the development of its facilities, as the business that can be obtained along its lines should enable it to multiply its earnings per mile of road fully three or four times."

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Orders for Rails Now Booked Put at 2,700,000 Tons.

Pig iron shows no signs at present of improving its situation in the market. Slight concessions are being made in foundry iron and Bessemer is being shaded in some quarters. The situation resembles the position of the market at the same period last year when prices declined after a similar lull. Renewed buying then appeared and prices went higher than ever.

It is estimated that orders for steel rails of all weights now on the books of the various mills amount to 2,700,000 tons and trade authorities believe that the year's output will reach 3,600,000 tons, which is considerably more than earlier estimates of the production. Speaking of the iron and steel situation Alexis W. Thompson, former President of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, is quoted as saying:

"There is a natural falling off in new business at this time of the year, which cannot be taken as a barometer of actual conditions. Deliveries of steel are exceptionally heavy, and while pig iron is dull buyers will eventually make their appearance in the market."

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Copper metal remained stationary in the local market yesterday, but in London spot copper rose to £80, an advance of 5s. over Monday's close. Futures declined by the same amount, closing at £78. The prices of copper and other metals on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of the previous day:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—The local market was narrow and dull, but closed firm at advances for most stocks. The arbitrage stocks were about the only issues to show any signs of activity, and they closely followed the prices established in New York. Reading gained ½ point and United States Steel common ⅜. United Gas, Philadelphia Electric, and Philadelphia Rapid Transit led the interest in the purely local stocks and ended with gains of substantial fractions. The West Jersey and Sea Shore stockholders authorized the increase of the company's capital to $10,000,000 and a stock allotment is expected, the proceeds to pay for the extensive improvements now being made.

AMERICAN WOOLEN REPORT.

Company's Earnings Nearly $9,000,000 Greater Than in 1904.

The annual report of the American Woolen Company, published yesterday, shows that the income of the company for the year ended December 30 last amounted to $48,660,449, an increase of nearly $9,000,000 over 1904. The net profits for the year totaled $4,781,157, compared with $3,042,330 for the previous year. The dividend on the company's preferred stock, owing to the increase in that issue from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000, called for $1,560,416, compared with $1,400,000 in 1904. In addition to paying the preferred stock dividend there was written off for depreciation $1,367,838, reducing the net surplus for the year to $1,852,903. In previous years there was no special charge for depreciation. The surplus for the year, added to that previously reported, brings the total surplus up to $10,049,828.

The balance sheet shows a decrease of $408,043 in cash and a decrease of $1,249,325 in bank loans. The company has $1,110,012 in cash and reports bank loans amounting to $6,105,975. President Wood, in his report to the stockholders, says that it is expected that the worsted mills now being built at South Lawrence, Mass., by the American Woolen Company will be completed about November 1. These, mills it is said, will be the largest and most complete of their kind in the United States.

All of the plants of the company, the report states, are now free from any incumbrance.

The stockholders, at their annual meeting yesterday, re-elected the retiring Directors. The by-laws were changed to make the Executive Committee consist of the President of the company and two other Directors instead of the Treasurer and two other Directors. This change was made in order to retain on the Executive Committee William M. Wood, who was formerly Treasurer, but who was recently elected President of the company.

$2,000,000 MAY GO TO JAPAN.

That Amount Transferred to San Francisco by the Sub-Treasury.

The Sub-Treasury transferred $2,000,000 yesterday to San Francisco. No definite statement was made in regard to the purpose of the transfer, but it is understood in Wall Street that the money was sent to the Pacific Coast to provide gold for export to Japan. At the Sub-Treasury the names of those for whom transfers are made are not given out, nor are other details of the operation of the Sub-Treasury made public, in many of which the financial district is keenly interested.

Bankers have frequently expressed dissatisfaction of late with the Government's policy in withholding full information in regard to transfers made through the Sub-Treasury. It is pointed out that in the case of withdrawals of gold bars from the Assay Office for export, the names of the bankers making the withdrawals are always available for publication. Many bankers see no reason why equal publicity should not be had in the case of Sub-Treasury transfers.

Bonds were deposited at the Sub-Treasury yesterday by a number of National banks which will receive part of the special deposits of Government funds authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury last week. It is expected that the New York banks will receive about $3,000,000 out of the total of $10,000,000. Information in regard to the amount of money paid over yesterday to the local banks on account of these special deposits could not be had from the Sub-Treasury officials. It was explained that the whole matter of these special deposits was in the hands of Secretary Shaw.

TO DEVISE A CURRENCY PLAN.

Chamber of Commerce Appoints Committee on Monetary Reform.

Morris K. Jesup, President of the Chamber of Commerce, appointed yesterday a committee to consider the general question of currency reform. The members of the committee are Frank A. Vanderlip, Isidor Straus, John Claflin, Dumont Clarke, and Charles A. Conant. This committee has been named as the result of a resolution introduced by Jacob H. Schiff and adopted by the Chamber of Commerce at its February meeting.

The question of currency reform had previously been considered by the Chamber's Committee on Finance and Currency following the address made by Mr. Schiff at the January meeting of the Chamber. Mr. Schiff at that time pointed out that the need of a better currency system was imperative. He said that, if no change were made in our currency system, the country sooner or later would have to face the worst panic in its history.

The Committee on Finance and Currency reported at the February meeting that it disapproved of Secretary Shaw's suggestion of an additional issue of National bank notes unsecured by special deposit of Government bonds, but subject to a tax of 5 or 6 per cent. The committee thought that what was needed was not more currency, but a more flexible currency—one that could be contracted or expanded as occasion required.

Mr. Schiff, after this report was submitted to the Chamber of Commerce, took the position that something further should be done in the matter, and suggested the appointment of a special committee to consider currency reform. This is the committee that was named yesterday by President Jesup. The report of this committee when completed is to be submitted to the President of the United States and to the Secretary of the Treasury.

C., H. & D. Noteholders to Meet.

A meeting of the Protective Committee of the holders of trust notes of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton will be held to-morrow to consider the further course of the committee in reference to the default on these notes. Thus far no definite action has been taken by the committee, which has been waiting to learn if the controlling interest has any plans for property. Prior to the default several offers were made by Morgan & Co. to the holders of the notes, all of which the note holders found it necessary to refuse.

Three-Day Holiday for Cotton Brokers.

Many members of the New York Cotton Exchange have signed a petition to close the Exchange on Good Friday as well as the following Saturday. It is suggested that this three-day holiday from Thursday to Monday will afford an opportunity to make the proposed changes in the arrangement of the Exchange floor. This suggestion is regarded by some of the members as strengthening the application for an extra holiday.

To the holders of four and one-half per cent. gold collateral trust notes of The CINCINNATI, HAMILTON AND DAYTON RAILWAY COMPANY, issued under its collateral trust agreement, dated March 1, 1905;

Default having been made in the payment of the coupon which matured March 1, 1906, the holders of notes which have not yet been deposited under the agreement constituting the undersigned committee are requested to deposit the same at the earliest practicable date with Central Trust Company of New York, the depositary designated in said agreement, at its office, No. 54 Wall Street, New York City. All notes must be deposited in negotiable form, and must bear the coupon which matured March 1, 1906, and all subsequent coupons. Certificates of the depositary will be issued for notes deposited.

A large amount of notes has already been deposited under said agreement, and in the judgment of the committee it is essential for the full and proper protection of the rights and interests of the noteholders that the remaining notes be deposited without delay. The right is reserved to terminate the privilege of deposit at any time without previous notice. Copies of the deposit agreement may be obtained at the office of the depositary and from the members of the committee.

Dated, New York, March 2, 1906.

INTERBOROUGH SECURITIES.

Morgan, Loeb, and Belmont Houses to be Among the Underwriters.

The same firms will participate in the present underwriting of the new Interborough-Metropolitan securities, it was said in Wall Street yesterday, that were mentioned in connection with the original plan for the underwriting of these securities, including J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., August Belmont & Co., and Thomas F. Ryan, together with other bankers.

No official acknowledgment was forthcoming yesterday of the proposed underwriting, although it was stated in banking circles that the underwriting had already been arranged. The syndicate, it is understood, in addition to the $8,700,000 of common stock and $3,000,000 of preferred stock of the new company, which has been acquired by August Belmont & Co., will take an additional amount of common stock, which the managers of the syndicate are authorized to purchase in the open market.

Thus the syndicate will afford support to the new stock and will, to a large extent, be able to control the market for the new securities. While the operations of the syndicate, as thus outlined, will not assume the character of a formal underwriting, the general understanding in Wall Street is that the results will be the same as though the securities were actually underwritten.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Yesterday's recovery in prices was a natural and, as many observers must have thought, a somewhat perfunctory movement. It was very largely due to the retiring of short contracts, but this buying was almost wholly voluntary, which is to say that there was no concerted or organized movement against the short interest. On the opening there was some straggling liquidation, which caused the market to show heaviness throughout the first hour. Then began a recovery, marked by frequent interruption, in the course of which the volume of trading declined. Between 1 and 2 o'clock there were intervals of utter stagnation. Shortly before the end of this hour word was sent out from the board room that the bear crowd would attack the market again toward the close, especially Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific. Amalgamated Copper, then selling around 103, was to be hammered back to par, according to this fugitive bit of information. Presently there was a selling flurry in these and other stocks, but it amounted to nothing. Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific, after having been depressed fractionally, recovered to the highest points of the day's trading, and closed strong. Of the active stocks Amalgamated Copper made about the best recovery, which was to have been expected in view of the manner in which speculative selling had converged upon it the day before.

***

Mr. Heinze is quoted as having said to a solicitous interviewer: "Does this smile of mine indicate that I have lost $3,000,000?" Perhaps this is the smile that won't come off.

***

H. V. Jones, the crop statistician, who sees many things besides rust in wheat, chinch bugs, and the like, telegraphed yesterday to Watson & Co.: "I want to emphasize the prosperity of the West. Because stocks are off don't get the idea that business is declining. Our bank clearings are beating all records. I see that the Seattle clearings far exceed all previous records. Jobbers are pushing into new territory. Railroad earnings are fine, as you know. The big supplies of grain mean big tonnage, not only for grain, but for the merchandise that the money received for the grain will buy. It is really double tonnage."

***

Bank clearings for January and February in the whole country showed an increase of 27.9 per cent. over those for the corresponding months of 1905. The increase outside of New York was 20.6 per cent.

***

Setbacks in a bull market are described by those who survive them as "healthy reactions." The reaction that has occurred since the culmination of the January boom has been healthy enough to sweep out most of the 10-point margin accounts, to catch very many 25-point margin traders, and to endanger some of the 50-point variety, as the following list will show:

Stock.	High. in Jan.	Low Since.	Decline.
Great Northern pf.	348	305½	42½
Northern Pacific	232½	206	26½
Reading	164	126¾	37¼
Amalgamated Copper	118¼	100	18¼
St. Paul	193	175⅞	17⅛
Union Pacific	160½	140⅛	11⅜
Southern Pacific	72⅞	64½	8⅜
Pennsylvania	147½	136¾	10¾
Erie	50⅞	41⅛	9¾
United States Steel	46¼	39⅛	7⅛
United States Steel pf.	113¼	104¼	9
Colorado Fuel	83⅝	57	26⅝
American Smelting	174	150¼	23¾

This is about as much of a "healthy reaction" as a bull market can stand without having to be recast entirely on the lower level of prices. There has been a lot of genuine liquidation. A good many pools have been compelled to scale down their lines. It takes many millions of dollars less to finance the stock market at these prices than it did at the top of the January rise.

***

You frequently hear a trader say of a stock that has had a tremendous advance and whose movements are controlled absolutely by a pool that he would rather wait and sell it 20 points lower. His reasoning, perhaps, is not apparent to the lay follower of speculation. It is none the less good reasoning within a certain compass. After a stock has been carried far beyond its value, as Reading was, cool traders ache to sell it, and a few of the more reckless ones yield to the impulse, but the great majority are restrained by the very obvious fact that the floating supply of that stock has become concentrated in a few hands, and that the short seller, unless he happens to get in just at the point where the trouble begins, is simply at the mercy of the pool. Managers of pools, having a stock in that position, have been known to pay commissions for the procurement of short sales. On the other hand, after such an operation has come to grief, again thinking of Reading as an example, forced liquidation for the pool's account brings an adequate supply of stock into the market, and then the short seller, at a decline of 20 points, takes a smaller risk than when the pool was in control of the situation. There has been a much freer market for Reading below 140 than there was above 150. The short side of it for traders has been much less dangerous below 140 than it was above 150.

***

Reading gave a very poor account of itself yesterday. It lost in the afternoon all but an eighth of its recovery in the forenoon, and closed heavy. People have evidently been revising their ideas of the stock's value, now that it has been divested of its many speculative illusions.

***

The longest thing about the Comstock tunnel is its history.

***

It seems hard to believe that a deliberate attempt was made only a few months ago to unload the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton on the Erie. More than this, the negotiations to that end, which actually were closed and then retraced, were accompanied by solemn assurances that the transaction would be a big bull card on Erie stock. When it was announced that the deal had gone through, Erie stock broke sharply, because somebody knew. It has never fully recovered from the shock, even though the deal was undone.

***

It is reported on good authority that the earnings of the United States Steel Corporation for the first three months of this year will exceed those of any corresponding quarter in the history of the property. The results are estimated at $35,000,000, and already it is predicted that the unfilled orders on hand at the end of March will amount to 7,500,000 tons. The Steel shares, however, have not been behaving well in the market of late. That is probably because the bull account was so large. At the end of the January boom in the stock market there was probably more Steel common in the offices around Wall Street and through the country, on margin, than at any previous time in nearly three years. Yet Steel preferred, a seasoned 7 per cent. preferred industrial, is selling around 105. It yields on this price nearly 6⅔ per cent.

***

The bond market is in wretched condition. Some of the latest issues, brokers and dealers think, are likely to move very slowly.

***

A good many reputable and conservative commission houses are now advising their speculative clients to buy stocks moderately, with a view to increasing their holdings on any further break, thereby putting themselves in line for "the Spring rise." Bullish messages went out yesterday over private wires that had been barren of any such encouragement for many weeks. The response was not overwhelming.

***

The market's real friends would prefer to see it remain dull, or rather become dull and remain so during the rest of this month. They believe that beginning about the first of April there will be sufficient improvement in the money market situation to permit of a sustained bull speculation, and with this in view they would regret any premature activity on the part of pools or individual operators. Banking opinion is generally in favor of renewed activity on the bull side in April. Several very prominent banking authorities have predicted a good stock market in that month, to continue so long as money market conditions are favorable. If there is going to be a coal strike it will begin around April 1, and after it has started it will cease, no doubt, to be a source of bearish inspiration. Whereas the market now is unfavorably affected by rumors that there will be a strike, it will be subject in another way to rumors of a settlement after the strike is on.

STEEL TRUST BALKED.

Independents Stall Off Deal to Absorb the Pope Tin Works.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, March 6.—The efforts of the United States Steel Corporation to obtain the Pope Tin Works here through the La Belle Iron Works created a sensation to-day at a meeting of the Directors of the iron works. It developed that the Steel Corporation has Directors in the plant, but the independents were powerful enough at the preliminary meeting to defeat the deal for the tin works, which involves $1,000,000.

E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, denied absolutely yesterday the truth of the report contained in Pittsburg dispatches that the Steel Corporation intended to absorb most of the independent steel companies in the United States, including the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, the Republic Iron and Steel Company, the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company, and a number of other corporations, together with the ore lands of the Great Northern Railway.

J. C. Maben, President of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company, was quoted in dispatches from Birmingham received in the financial district yesterday as saying that there was absolutely no indication that control of the Sloss-Sheffield Company had changed hands, and that he did not believe the United States Steel Corporation would make an effort to obtain control of the company through John W. Gates.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 6.—The local money market continues firm. Call loans, 6@7 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5@6 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5½@6 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 6 per cent.; New York funds, 16 2-3c discount; clearings, $28,190,606; balances, $1,881,270. Sub-Treasury credit, $18,495.

There was a considerably better feeling manifest in the local copper shares to-day. After a strong opening commission houses appeared with good-sized buying orders and gains were soon seen throughout the list. North Butte and United Copper gained about 4 points each, Amalgamated about 3, and Bingham about 2½ points. There has been a good-sized short interest fostered here during the past few days, and a good many of these sellers appeared as buyers to-day. Toward the close there was some profit taking, but prices held well, and the closing was strong.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, APPELLATE DIVISION, First Department.—In the matter of the application of the BOARD OF RAPID TRANSIT RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS FOR THE CITY OF NEW YORK for the appointment of three Commissioners to determine and report whether a rapid transit railway or railways for the conveyance and transportation of persons and property, as determined by the board, ought to be constructed and operated.—Thirty-fourth Street Route.

Public notice is hereby given that pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, the undersigned Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners will apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the First Judicial Department, at a term thereof to be held at the Appellate Division Court House, Madison Avenue and 25th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 9th day of March, 1906, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of three Commissioners in the above-entitled matter to determine and report after due hearing whether a railway or railways in said city for the transportation of persons and property ought to be constructed and operated. The papers upon which the aforesaid application will be made are the petition of the said board, dated the 22d day of December, 1905, and the affidavits and papers accompanying the same, all of which were filed in the office of the Clerk of said Appellate Division on or about the 9th day of February, 1906, and in addition thereto such other papers as shall be presented to the Court by the said board.

A description of the route and general plan of construction of the said railway or railways forms part of the papers filed as aforesaid with the said Clerk of the Appellate Division. The following is a brief and substantial synopsis of the said route in the County of New York: Thirty-fourth Street, from the Hudson River to the East River and thence under the East River to the easterly boundary of the county.

The object of the aforesaid application is to obtain the appointment of Commissioners who shall determine, after public hearing of all parties interested, whether such railway or railways ought to be constructed and operated, and shall report the evidence taken to said Appellate Division, together with a report of their determination, which report, if in favor of the construction and operation of such railway or railways (as this board will ask that it shall be) shall, when confirmed by said Court, be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners along the line of said railway or railways.

Dated New York, February 15, 1906.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, APPELLATE DIVISION, First Department.—In the matter of the application of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners for the City of New York for the appointment of three Commissioners to determine and report whether a rapid transit railway or railways for the conveyance and transportation of persons and property, as determined by the Board, ought to be constructed and operated.—GERARD AVENUE ROUTE.

Public notice is hereby given that pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, the undersigned Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners will apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the First Judicial Department at a term thereof to be held at the Appellate Division Court House, Madison Avenue and 25th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 9th day of March, 1906, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of three Commissioners in the above-entitled matter to determine and report after due hearing whether a railway or railways in the said city for the transportation of persons and property ought to be constructed and operated. The papers upon which the aforesaid application will be made are the petition of the said Board, dated the 28th day of December, 1905, and the affidavits and papers accompanying the same, all of which were filed in the office of the Clerk of said Appellate Division on or about the 9th day of February, 1906, and in addition thereto such other papers as shall be presented to the Court by the said Board.

A description of the route and the general plan of construction of the said railway or railways forms part of the papers filed as aforesaid with the said Clerk of the Appellate Division. The following is a brief and substantial synopsis of the said route in the County of New York: In the Borough of The Bronx: East 138th Street, from Third Avenue to Walton Avenue, and Gerard Avenue, from 138th Street to Jerome Avenue near Clarke Place.

The object of the aforesaid application is to obtain the appointment of Commissioners who shall determine, after public hearing of all parties interested, whether such railway or railways ought to be constructed and operated, and shall report the evidence taken to said Appellate Division, together with a report of their determination, which report, if in favor of the construction and operation of such railway or railways (as this Board will ask that it shall be) shall, when confirmed by said Court, be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners along the line of said railway or railways.

Dated New York, February 15th, 1906.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, APPELLATE DIVISION, First Department.—In the matter of the application of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners for the City of New York for the appointment of three commissioners to determine and report whether a rapid transit railway or railways for the conveyance and transportation of persons and property as determined by the Board ought to be constructed and operated.—Brooklyn & Manhattan Loop Lines, Manhattan Route.

Public notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891, as amended, the undersigned Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners will apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the First Judicial Department, at a term thereof to be held at the Appellate Division Court House, Madison Avenue and 25th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 9th day of March, 1906, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of three commissioners in the above entitled matter to determine and report after due hearing whether a railway or railways in the said city for the transportation of persons and property ought to be constructed and operated. The papers upon which the aforesaid application will be made are the petition of the said board dated the 8th day of January, 1906, and the affidavits and papers accompanying the same, all of which were filed in the office of the Clerk of said Appellate Division on or about the 9th day of February, 1906, and in addition thereto such other papers as shall be presented to the Court by the said Board.

A description of the route and general plan of construction of the said railway or railways forms part of the papers filed as aforesaid with the said Clerk of the Appellate Division. The following is a brief and substantial synopsis of the said route in the County of New York:

In the Borough of Manhattan: From the Williamsburg Bridge the route passes underground in Delancey Street, near Norfolk, and then runs west under Delancey Street to the Bowery, and under the proposed extension of Delancey Street to the corner of Centre and Grand Streets. The line then continues southerly through Centre Street and William Street.

Provision is made for three tunnels, which may be described as the Old Slip Tunnel, the Maiden Lane Tunnel, and the Beekman Street Tunnel.

The route of the Old Slip Tunnel is under William Street and Old Slip.

The Maiden Lane Tunnel begins at the corner of William Street and Liberty Street, and then passes under Maiden Lane.

The Beekman Street Tunnel passes under Beekman Street.

Each of these three tunnels passes under the East River to the easterly boundary of the County of New York.

There are several spurs forming a part of this route. One spur begins at Grand and Centre Streets in Manhattan, and runs west under Grand Street and Desbrosses Street to the Desbrosses Street ferry. Another spur forms a connection, by means of a line under Canal Street, with the Manhattan end of the Manhattan Bridge. A third connects with the City Hall loop of the present subway by means of a line under Beekman Street.

The object of the aforesaid application is to obtain the appointment of commissioners who shall determine after public hearing of all parties interested whether such railway or railways ought to be constructed and operated, and shall report the evidence taken to said Appellate Division, together with a report of their determination, which report, if in favor of the construction and operation of such railway or railways, (as this Board will ask that it shall be,) shall, when confirmed by said Court, be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners along the line of said railway or railways.

Dated New York, February 15, 1906.

MARCH 1906

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Stocks Recover from Monday's Slump.

United Copper Again Touches 65, Closing at 63—Writing Paper Preferred an Exception.

Recovery was general throughout the greater part of the list of curb stocks yesterday, mining shares especially making substantial gains. The few coppers that did not share in the rise suffered only fractional recessions, and United Copper at one period of the market sold up to 65, the price at which Monday's slump began. The Heinze stock opened at 59, Monday's closing price, and reached 65 before noon. During the rest of the session it fluctuated between 62½ and 64, closing after a market of 23,000 shares at 63.

Industrials for the most part were firm, but the market was light. One of the exceptions was Writing Paper preferred, which on sales of 3,050 went down from 30 to 27½.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Berthold Hochschild of the American Metals Selling Company has been elected a Director of the Granby Consolidated Mining Company, to succeed the late John Stanton.

The Coal and Iron National Bank has been named by the Secretary of the Treasury as a depositary of public money.

The "Art of Wall Street Investing" is the title of a new handbook of Wall Street methods and data for investors, published by the Moody Corporation. It is written interestingly and covers the subject so thoroughly and understandably that it is as valuable to the uninitiated in finance as to the practiced investor.

The New York Dock Company has declared a dividend of 1½ per cent. on its preferred stock, payable on April 16 to stockholders of record April 2. The last dividend was 1 per cent., with one-half extra.

The Havana Electric Railway Company has declared an initial dividend of 1 per cent. on its $5,000,000 6 per cent. non-cumulative preferred stock, payable April 3. Books close March 30 and reopen April 4.

OUR EXPORTS TO CHINA.

Big Decrease in January Compared with the Preceding Month.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Secretary Metcalf of the Department of Commerce and Labor to-day gave out a statement showing the amount of exports from this country to China, by months, from July, 1904, to January, 1905, and, from July, 1905, to January, 1906.

It appears that the total exports for the seven months ended January, 1905, amounted to $23,432,948, whereas for the seven months ended January, 1906, they equaled $28,862,680.

The shipments of cotton cloth goods for the period first mentioned amounted to $12,947,530, while for the seven months ended January, 1906, they were $19,606,848. There was likewise an increase in the exports of copper ingots. A decrease of nearly 100 per cent. is shown in the exports of mineral oils.

The statement shows that the exports of the products named were vastly less in January, 1906, than they were in the month preceding, cotton goods falling off to the extent of $360,000, copper ingots, $184,600, and mineral oils, $297,960.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 6.—Mount Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck 5s led the market to-day, and on active trading advanced a point, to 86½. The market was broader than yesterday. The flurry in the money market came at an inopportune time for several pools which were forming to boost some local stocks which certain interests had decided were selling below their intrinsic value. Their plans are now in abeyance pending an improvement in the money situation.

Local money lenders discourage borrowings for speculative purposes pending a more settled tone in the New York market. Seaboard Company stock, which sold down to 29½ yesterday, was firmer to-day, and it was reported that several brokers had orders to buy on a break.

The steadiness of the local market, in view of the big slump in Wall Street, has elicited much favorable comment, especially from those who expected that prices would break badly. Extreme weakness in Wall Street rarely affects the Baltimore market except to cause a period of dullness.

Consolidated Cotton Duck common advanced ½, Maryland Casualty went up 1½, Northern Central rose ½, and International Trust strengthened ¼. North Carolina 4s went off 3½ points and Florida Southern 4s sold up ½. United Railways free incomes were ⅜ better.

The market closed firm and fairly active. Sales: Bonds, $138,500; stock, 1,432 shares.

STOCK JUMPS 400 PER CENT.

Sudden and Unexplained Rise in Comstock Tunnel Surprises Market.

The stock of the Comstock Tunnel Company, which owns the old Sutro Tunnel, built in the boom days of the Comstock Lode to drain and ventilate the Bonanza Mines, took a jump of nearly 400 per cent. yesterday on the Stock Exchange and sold more shares in a few hours than the market has known in a long time. The 'phone in the company's office in the Broad Exchange Building was kept jingling all day by people who wanted to know what had happened to the Comstock Lode. The Treasurer of the company, Franklin Leonard, Jr., said he didn't know what was putting the stock up.

The Comstock Tunnel Company took over the Sutro Tunnel Company in 1889, when the $22,000,000 of stock was reduced to $4,000,000. At the same time the stockholders subscribed to $3,000,000 4 per cent. income bonds which have not paid interest since 1892. Previous to that date $231,000 of the bonds had been retired out of surplus earnings.

The Tunnel ceased to pay when the forty-odd mines of the Lode shut down one after another as the workings increased in depth and the cost went up to a point where it no longer paid to take out ore. Recently some of the mines have been started up under modern mining methods, and some ore has been taken out. The Comstock Tunnel Company has built a mill in the Carson Valley, Mr. Leonard says, and expects to make money reducing ore when the mines become producers again, in addition to the income it will receive from the royalties on the output of the lode.

Besides, the company owns mineral rights for 1,000 feet on each side of the tunnel's straight reach, which is four miles long.

These 5,000 odd acres are being prospected now, Mr. Leonard says.

MR. WALL STILL PUZZLED.

He Wanted to Know About a New York City Railway Note Issue.

The State Railroad Commission has been investigating the financing of $15,000,000 3½ per cent. collater notes of the New York City Railway Company in 1903, which, it is charged by Judson G. Wall of Brooklyn in a letter to the Governor, were discounted for $4,500,000, when only $3,500,000 were actually put out.

Mr. Wall has received fro mthe Railway Commissioners a long explanation which has puzzled him. He said last night he had not sufficiently digested it to be able to say whether or not it made clear the operation which had looked to him strange enough to demand the attention of the State authorities.

BROKERS OPROSE MOVING.

Many Consolidated Members Will Voice Protest To-day.

Decided disapproval of the plan to transfer the Consolidated Exchange from its building at Broadway and Exchange Place, to other quarters has been expressed by many members of the Exchange within the last few days. A meeting of the Exchange will be held this afternoon to discuss the proposed removal.

The petition for the holding of this meeting was signed by a large number of the active members of the Exchange. They are opposed to abandoning the present Consolidated Exchange Building and it is expected that at to-day's meeting they will enter a strong protest.

Wabash Terminal Bonds Sold.

The Wabash Railroad, it was announced yesterday, has sold to William A. Read & Co., Blair & Co., and William Solomon & Co. $1,100,000 fifty-year 4 per cent. terminal bonds. These are part of an authorized issue of $10,000,000, of which there is outstanding $3,800,000, including the lot thus sold to these bankers. The proceeds of the bonds will be used to cover the cost of a large block of property in St. Louis which will be used to increase the Wabash's terminal facilities in that city, and of a smaller parcel of land in Chicago. The bonds will be offered for sale by the bankers at 93½ and interest.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK.—ABRAHAM STURMAN and Another, Plaintiffs, against HENRY NATHANSON et al., Defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment for foreclosure and sale duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, and bearing date the 28th day of February, 1906, I, the undersigned Referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesrooms, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 28th day of March, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

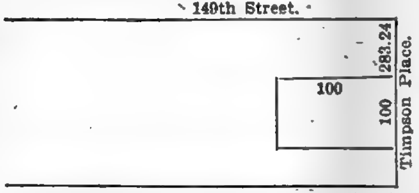
All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Bronx, City of New York, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the northwesterly side of Timpson Place, distant 283.24 feet southwesterly from the corner formed by the intersection of the northwesterly line of Timpson Place, with the southwesterly line of Timpson Place, with the southwesterly line of 149th Street; running thence southwesterly along the northwesterly line of Timpson Place 100 feet, thence northwesterly and on a line at right angles with Timpson Place 100 feet more or less to the centre line of the block between Timpson Place and Southern Boulevard; thence northwesterly along the said centre line 100 feet; and thence southwesterly on a line at right angles with Timpson Place 100 feet more or less to the point or place of beginning. This mortgage being a Purchase Money Mortgage to secure part of the purchase price expressed in the deed to the defendant, Henry Nathanson, by the plaintiffs and their respective wives. The said deed was of even date with the said mortgage, and recorded simultaneously therewith. Said premises to be sold subject, however, to a mortgage for the sum of $3,000, with the interest at the rate of 5% per annum from the 2d day of December, 1905, now a first lien on the said premises, and also subject to a mortgage for the sum of $4,000, with interest thereon at the rate of 6% per annum, from the 2d day of June, 1905, now a second lien on the said premises.

ROBERT F. WAGNER, Referee.

JACOB HARRIS, Attorney for Plaintiffs, No. 280 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described premises is to be sold is $5,204.17, with interest thereon from the 13th day of February, 1906, together with costs and allowance amounting to $260.65, together with the expenses of the sale.

The approximate amount of unpaid taxes, assessments, water rates, or other liens to be allowed to the purchaser of these premises out of the money paid by the referee, is the sum of $45.00.

ROBERT F. WAGNER, Referee.

MARCH 1906

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Operators Buy Central Park West Corner—New Building on Liberty Street and Maiden Lane—Day's Dealings by Brokers.

Bernard Smyth & Sons have sold for Herbert Parsons and others to Lowenfeld & Prager the northwest corner of Central Park West and Ninety-ninth Street, a plot 79 by 100; also, the plot of two lots adjoining on the north side of Ninety-ninth Street, 50 by 100.11, for the Froment estate and others.

Site Leased for New Building.

Horace S. Ely & Co. have negotiated for Mrs. Anne Walker of Philadelphia a long term lease of 25 and 27 Liberty Street, running through to Maiden Lane, containing about 3,300 square feet. This property was occupied for many years by the firm of Powers & Weightman, chemists. Edmund Dwight is the new lessee. A twelve-story office building will be erected on this site, to be ready for occupancy in the Spring of 1907. Mr. Dwight is the resident manager in this city for the Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation of London, which will probably occupy a large part of the new building.

Estate Sells South Street Parcel.

William Cruikshank's Sons have sold for the estate of John J. Taylor, 41 South Street, adjoining the corner of Old Slip, 24 by 100.

The Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company has bought the four-story building 42 Cortlandt Street, 25.2 by 124.2, adjoining its previous holdings.

Daniel Birdsall & Co. have sold the property 125 Mercer Street, 25 by 100, for the Kip estate. The purchaser is said to be an adjoining owner, who will build a large business building on the combined lots.

New Bank Building on Park Place.

Plans have been filed for the new building at 5 and 7 Park Place for the Broadway Savings Institution now at 23 Park Place. The structure is to be 46.6 feet high, with a façade of either limestone or granite in classic design. The interior will contain a mezzanine story and will have an arched dome and many decorative panels of marble set in carved oak. The building will cost $50,000, according to the estimate of Architects York & Sawyer.

East 67th Street Residence Sold.

Herbert A. Sherman has sold for Chauncey S. Truax 7 East Sixty-seventh Street, a five-story American basement dwelling, on lot 25 by 100.5.

Collins & Collins have sold for Edward R. Koch to Joseph G. Schwitzer 131 East Seventy-eighth Street, a three-story dwelling, 16.8 by 102.2.

An Opinion or a Policy?
When your lawyer examines your title and approves it, he writes an opinion that the title is perfect.
When the Title Guarantee and Trust Company examines your title and approves it, it writes a policy guaranteeing the title to be perfect.
But if, subsequently, the title should prove not to be perfect, which would you rather have the opinion or the policy?
There is no extra cost for the policy.

MARCH 1906

BERTHE CLAICHE GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER ONLY

Her Plea Accepted to Get Her Evidence Against Police.

JEROME IN CORRUPTION HUNT

Woman Likely to Get a Light Sentence for Killing Emile Gendron—Bingham Approves Coming Inquiry.

Berthe Claiche, accused of the killing of Emile Gendron just after he had been arrested by three members of the Vice Squad, pleaded guilty yesterday to manslaughter in the first degree before Justice Davis in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. District Attorney Jerome was present and asked the court to accept the plea. The woman was remanded till March 29 for sentence.

The postponement of her sentence to so distant a date, taken with certain remarks made by Justice Davis and the District Attorney, indicates that the ending of the trial of Berthe Claiche means the start of a thorough investigation of certain phases of police corruption revealed in the evidence given at the trial. While counsel on both sides observed reticence on the subject yesterday, it was learned on good authority that the woman's plea is accepted because her evidence is needed by the District Attorney's office.

It appears that she was spared in order that the information obtainable from her might be used as a basis for a searching examination of the doings of the Vice Squad. Commissioner Bingham is known to be in complete sympathy with the District Attorney in this matter.

Twenty years' imprisonment is the maximum penalty for the crime to which the Claiche woman pleaded guilty, but her counsel expect a mild sentence. Up to the opening of the afternoon session of the trial yesterday it was asserted by the woman's counsel that she would take the stand in her own defense. The morning session was devoted to the hearing of two men and two women who had seen Gendron strike the defendant. At the noon recess counsel for the defense had a consultation with Mr. Jerome and Mr. Ely.

When court reconvened at 2 o'clock Mr. Jerome was present and held whispered conversations with the court and the counsel on the other side. After a while the prisoner was led out to the adjoining council room, where she was joined by her two attorneys and her mother. When she reappeared ten minutes later she walked straight up to the bar instead of going back to her seat at the table beside her counsel. Mr. Jerome told the court that he had consented to accept a plea of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree.

"There will be important developments in the case to justify this step," he added.

Having arranged with counsel for both sides about the time for the sentence, Justice Davis discharged the jury with the words:

"When the final result is reached and sentence passed by the court, it will undoubtedly be seen that the best interests of the people have been served."

During this time the prisoner had been standing in front of the bar sobbing softly. When Court Clerk Penny turned to her with the question, "Do you withdraw the plea of not guilty?" she replied in a faint "Yes." Immediately afterward she collapsed and was carried, weeping, from the room by a Deputy Sheriff.

PHIPPS BOUGHT LORD'S COURT

At Least Real Estate Men Hear He Has Added It to His Holdings.

Henry Phipps, according to a report generally credited in well-informed real estate circles, is the buyer of the Lord's Court Building, at the southwest corner of William Street and Exchange Place, sold recently by John T. Williams through Broker Herbert A. Sherman, and valued at $3,500,000. All the parties interested in the transaction have refused to give any intimation as to the identity of the buyer.

That Mr. Phipps has come to regard New York real estate favorably, as an investment, was shown in his recent large purchase on Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets, just west of Fifth Avenue, where, it is said, he will erect a large mercantile building. He has also bought considerable property in the upper Fifth Avenue section, near his new mansion at Eighty-seventh Street.

RAP WATER SUPPLY BOARD.

Aldermen Question Its Right to Fix Salaries, but It Fixes Some More.

An attack has been made on the assumption of arbitrary powers by the members of the new Board of Water Supply in making appointments and fixing salaries of employés without application to the Board of Estimate or the Board of Aldermen. At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen yesterday a resolution was adopted calling on the Corporation Counsel for an opinion in the Water Supply Board's rights. It was adopted without a dissenting vote.

The Board of Water Supply went right ahead yesterday making new appointments of engineers and other employes. It announced the appointment of Arthur V. Ruggles of 515 St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn, to be an assistant engineer at $1,350 salary; Leonard P. Wood of 34 Clinton Street, Brooklyn, assistant engineer at $2,000; Frederick Ward, 227 West 122d Street, assistant engineer at $2,000; Ralph W. Greenlaw, 430 West 118th Street, assistant engineer at $1,650; John D. Groves, whose residence is given as Syracuse, to be assistant engineer at $1,650; Christopher G. Mayor McClellan said yesterday that he believed the Board of Water Supply was acting properly in going ahead with its preliminary work, as the city had the right to assume that it could secure proper legislation to enable it to utilize the Catskill sources of additional water supply.

HEARST HASN'T GIVEN UP.

Ballot Guards Withdrawn Because Ballots Are in Safety Vaults Now.

Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for William R. Hearst, said yesterday that the withdrawal of the Hearst guards from the ballot box depositories in Brooklyn should not be taken as an indication that Mr. Hearst intended to give up his Mayoralty fight.

"Our guards have been withdrawn not only in Brooklyn, but in Manhattan and the other boroughs as well," said Mr. Shearn. "The reason is that the Board of Elections has finally determined to take heed of our representations and place the boxes where it will not be necessary to guard them. The ballot boxes are now in fire-proof steel vaults in the Manhattan Storage Company's warehouse in this city and the Eagle Warehouse in Brooklyn. The vaults are not only locked, but sealed."

Mr. Shearn said that there had been no change in Mr. Hearst's programme, and that he was simply waiting for the Legislature to act on the bill for a legislative recount before beginning quo warranto proceedings. Mr. Shearn expected the bill would come out of committee to-day.

POLITICAL STUDENTS MEET.

Women's Society Will Celebrate Its Birthday Next Tuesday.

The Society for Political Study held its annual election yesterday afternoon and elected these officers: Mrs. Winifred E. Judge, President; Mrs. Belle Gray Taylor, First Vice President; Mrs. Frank Pringle, Second Vice President; Mrs. Frank Kitton, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Mortimer Menken, Treasurer; Mrs. Lewis Boyton, Corresponding Secretary; Miss Theresa Barkalow, Auditor. The only other business to come up was the discussion of a birthday party.

The society lacks only one year of the voting age and is to celebrate its twentieth birthday at the Hotel Astor next Tuesday with a big luncheon. A number of prominent persons have been invited to speak. Other club Presidents will be guests of honor, and toasts to the society will be given by its honorary members, Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake and Mrs. Esther Herrman among them. There are to be special souvenirs.

SAYS FIRE BUREAU IS LAX.

Alderman Jacobson Wants the Combustibles Department Investigated.

Charging laxity on the part of the Fire Department Bureau of Combustibles, Alderman Jacobson asked the Board of Aldermen yesterday to adopt a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of five members to investigate the Bureau of Combustibles and its manner of handling permits for the use of combustibles. The committee is empowered to call for witnesses, books, and papers, and is directed to consult insurance experts, blasting contractors, and experts in the use of combustibles. The resolution was sent to the Committee on Rules for a report.

The board appropriated $180,930 to pay the awards for approaches to Fordham Heights Bridge, $20,000 for furnishings for the new Borough Hall for Richmond, $35,000 for a reformatory for male misdemeanants on Hart's Island, and $83,000 for a normal and training school in Queens.

SALES MANAGER ARRESTED.

Phelps Company's Officers Declare That He Has Libelled Them.

George F. Stackhouse of 105 Hudson Street, formerly sales manager for the Phelps Company of Buffalo, was arrested twice yesterday in actions for libel. The plaintiffs are Williard F. McCarthy and John K. McKee, President and Treasurer respectively of the Phelps Company. Each plaintiff asks for $10,000 damages. The orders of arrest were issued by Supreme Court Justice Lambert in Buffalo.

McKee declares that Stackhouse has accused him of perjury and other things, while McCarthy says that the defendant has characterized him as dishonest. The allegel libels were embodied in letters sent to various persons.

Stackhouse furnished $2,500 bail on each charge. All the persons concerned live in East Orange, N. J.

HANGED HERSELF TO BEDPOST

Mrs. Gibson, Victim of Melancholia, a Suicide at White Plains.

After an unsuccessful attempt to end her life two weeks ago, Mrs. Catherine Gibson of White Plains committed suicide by hanging herself from a bedpost last night. A nurse who was employed to care for her left the room for a short time. When she returned she found the door of Mrs. Gibson's room locked. When the door was broken down Mrs. Gibson was found dead.

For a long time she had suffered from melancholia. She lived with her husband, Robert Gibson, a New York business man, in a handsome house on Prospect Street. She was 50 years old.

MACK TRAINS HIS GUNS ANEW ON GEN. BINGHAM

Politics in Every Single Transfer, He Declares.

"LIAR," CRIES COMMISSIONER

Mack Says Bingham Takes Orders from Secretary Slattery—McClellan Backs Up Bingham.

James F. Mack, who on Monday resigned the Third Deputy Police Commissionership, had new charges to bring yesterday against Commissioner Bingham and reiterated his statement that the McClellan administration was seeking to build up a new political machine in the force when the police had been properly chastened for the part they played in the last election.

The ex-Deputy was, if anything, more emphatic yesterday than he was immediately after his resignation had been accepted. He had read in the morning newspapers Gen. Bingham's declaration that the resignation had been demanded and that Mr. Mack had pleaded to be allowed to remain.

To the more important accusations of his former Third Deputy the Commissioner replied yesterday with a single word: "Liar." To others there was no answer forthcoming. "Nothing to say," "Rats," "A dead issue," and similar ejaculations greeted questioners.

To begin with, Mr. Mack said that it was the desire and the intention of Gen. Bingham to get rid of Col. Kipp, for many years the Chief Clerk of the department.

"Col. Kipp knows they are trying to get rid of him, too," said Mr. Mack. "If he is in the department three months from now I shall be very much surprised. Now, just to show what kind of a man Bingham is, I'll give an instance of the sort of thing that is going on up at Headquarters.

"There is an old man, George Hopcroft, a civil war veteran and a civil service employe, who was attached to Chief Inspector Cortright's office. Some time ago Bingham told me that he wanted Hopcroft transferred to the office of the complaint clerk, under me. He told me plainly that he wanted to get rid of the man, and that was the reason of the transfer. I refused to make it. Then Bingham called for Col. Kipp, and in the presence of the Colonel and myself said: 'I want to transfer him, damn him, to break him.'

"Now that is a specific charge of conspiracy, and if Col. Kipp is put under oath he will have to substantiate my statement. What he tried to do is an offense under the law. Every transfer that is ordered is made with due regard to the attitude taken by the transferred man in the last campaign. Gen. Bingham frequently discussed the political attitude of certain police officers with me before making transfers.

"What does Bingham know about the police? He doesn't even know his way about New York. He takes orders from Secretary Slattery, and Slattery is Fire Commissioner O'Brien's man. Why, in the Cody case, when I was sitting with Bingham, Slattery wrote a note to Bingham and sent it up to him which read: 'Osborne is making a fool of you. Call him down.' Bingham didn't have the nerve to take Slattery's advice, though.

"If you took Slattery away from the department Bingham couldn't find his way around. If the Commissioner has told me once he has told me a hundred times that he doesn't propose to do any police work. His idea is, as he has often said to me, that 'he is in a den of thieves and crooks.' He leaves everything to the Inspectors, and has no confidence in the very men in whom he is obliged, by his very ignorance, to place his trust. His theory is to soak everybody in sight, and then, maybe, they'll be good.

"What has Bingham done since he has been in office? He certainly hasn't had a man up for graft or for permitting gambling or disorderly houses. The only charges he has pressed home are those for failure to make an entry in the blotter or some such paltry offense. When a complaint comes in that gambling is going on anywhere he refers it to the Third Deputy. The Third Deputy refers it to the Chief Inspector, the Chief Inspector to the District Inspector, and the District Inspector to the precinct Captain. The Captain makes any indorsement he sees fit, and then, following the same route, the complaint finally finds its way back to the Commissioner.

"There was one Captain, whose name I forget, who was in right. Charges were preferred against him, and when Bingham turned them over to me he told me to put them in the bottom of my drawer and forget them. I couldn't see it that way, and he took the charges back and said he would attend to them. I never heard of the matter again. Evidently that Captain voted right last November."

Gen. Bingham announced at his morning session with the newspaper reporters that he could produce evidence that Mr. Mack had been asked to resign. He denied that he had instructed Mack to "break" Hopcroft.

When the Commissioner was told that Mr. Mack said that he (Gen. Bingham) had frequently discussed with the former Third Deputy the attitude of certain police officers at the last election, the head of the department almost jumped from his chair.

"That's a lie!" he shouted.

"As a result of all that has transpired since yesterday," Gen. Bingham finally announced, "it is my judgment that I did not get rid of Mr. Mack one second too soon for the efficiency of the Police Department. The whole thing is a dead issue now. I will have nothing more to say of the case. He can talk all he wants to."

Mr. Mack said, immediately after handing in his resignation, that Fire Commissioner O'Brien had insisted on the retention of his acting secretary, Neighbors, because Neighbors's brother was private secretary to Elihu Root and Root controlled things at Albany. Commissioner O'Brien yesterday issued this statement:

"I did not know that Mr. Neighbors had a brother and that his brother was secretary to Mr. Root until Commissioner Mack told me so. If Mr. Neighbors can control legislation at Albany and the Secretary of State at Washington and Mr. Ryan in New York I will gladly give him a fifteen-hundred-dollar-a-year place."

Mayor McClellan had this to say:

"Gen. Bingham is in the right when he says that I knew he had in mind to ask Mr. Mack for his resignation. I did know it. He told me so himself. Yes, I have already had a number of applicants for the vacancy. It is the constitutional right of every citizen to criticise the Mayor, to criticise any one in office, and Mr. Mack has simply exercised his constitutional right in going out of his way to insult me."
